

Young Adult Literature and Multimedia A Quick Guide

Mary Ann Harlan
David V. Loertscher
Sharron L. McElmeel

7th Edition

Learning Commons Press
An imprint of Hi willow Research & Publishing
2011

Copyright © 2011 Learning Commons Press
All Rights Reserved.

Digital Collaborative edition is available to the owner of this book. See details on page viii. Passcode for the digital edition: YA20117th

ISBN-13: 978-1-933170-66-4

Content current as of August 1, 2011.

Learning Commons Press
312 South 1000 East
Salt Lake City, UT 84102

Distributed by LMC Source at www.lmcsource.com

Mail orders to:
LMC Source
P.O. Box 131266
Spring, TX 77393

Email orders to sales@lmcsource.com

Order by phone at 800-873-3043

Copies of up to 3 pages may be made for school or district in-service workshops as long as the source with ordering information is included in the reprints. All other copying is prohibited without the prior written permission of the publisher. Permission can be sought by email at sales@lmcsource.com

This book is supplemented by a website, two wikis and a supplementary work. These are described in the introduction.

Acknowledgements

Appreciation is extended to graduate students in Young Adult Materials at San Jose State University who wrote and contributed to some of the pages in this volume. Their names are included on the specific pages they helped to construct both within this book and in online contributions on the web. And thank you to Rebecca Brodegard who wrote a number of the pages and served as general editor for the entire project. Thanks also to Richie Partington, graduate of the School of Library and Information Science, for revising and adding to a number of pages. He also has served as editor to the online sections of the book.

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	ii
Introduction.....	v
Introduction to the Digital Edition	viii
Section I: Understanding Young Adult Literature	1
Part A: Building A Background for Understanding Young Adult Literature .	3
Teen Survey	3
Touchstones in Children’s Books.....	4
Building a Background for Understanding Young Adult Literature.....	6
Awards and Recognition	10
Part B: Building A Background for Understanding the Young Adult Reader and Consumer of Media.....	14
Teen Psychology	14
Collection Development and Selection	17
School and Public Library Cooperation in a Teen World.....	21
Section II: Entering the Teen World of Literacy	23
Part A: Teen Pop Culture.....	24
Graphic Novels and Manga	24
Comic Books – Saving the World.....	26
Unstoppable Anime	28
Cult Movies	30
Video Games	32
Teens Online	34
Horror Movies	36
Teen Movies.....	38
Pop Music.....	40
Downloading Music.....	42
I Want My MTV.....	44
Rap and Hip-Hop	46
Alternative Music.....	48
Mad About Magazines	50
Celebrities.....	52
The Kids are Alright...and So is Their Literature	54
Part B: Surrounding Teens with Literature	56
Promoting Reading Among Young Adults.....	56
Contemporary Realistic Fiction	58
On the Edge: YA Novels and Tough Issues.....	61
Quick Picks and Thin Books for Reluctant Readers.....	64
“We Like Pink Books”: Books for Girls	66
Boys Do Read	68
Series Titles for Young Adult Readers	70

Don't Judge a Book by Its Movie	72
Christian Romance.....	74
GLBTQ Literature for Teens.....	76
Teen Books in a Variety of Formats	78
Self-Help Books	80
Sports.....	82
Adventure and Nature	85
History and Historical Fiction	88
Biography	90
Real Science and Technology.....	93
Science Fiction	95
Fantasy	97
Mysteries and Horror for Teens	99
Part C: High Culture for Teens	102
A History of Hollywood in Brief.....	102
Theater/Drama.....	104
Dance.....	106
Fine Music.....	108
Fine Art	110
The Western Canon	112
The Emerging Canon.....	114
Moving On: Books for the College Bound.....	116
Cultural Literacy? The High School Canon.....	118
Poetry and Full-Length Works in Verse	120
Adult Books and the Teenage Reader	123
Picture Books for Young Adults	126
Making Connections: Young Adult Literature in the Classroom.....	129
Section III: Issues to Consider in Young Adult Literature and Multimedia...	131
Multicultural Concerns.....	132
Censorship Issues.....	135
Have You Read This Book?: Booktalking to the Teenager	138
Programming for Young Adults.....	141
Index	144

Introduction

In the past twenty years, the world of young adult literature and multimedia has exploded. In schools of education and in library science many new courses focusing on teenagers have developed since courses in children's literature that traditionally covered teenage titles became overwhelmed with new content. Textbooks for young adult literature have become so large and so expensive that the authors decided to create a quick guide for pre-service teachers, pre-service librarians, and for anyone who would like to become acquainted with the basics of the new teen world of literature and multimedia.

For many persons, courses in printed literature have predominated the study of materials for either children or young adults. However, to ignore the world of multimedia and teens, including the Internet, is like ignoring the part of the iceberg that is underwater.

This book is organized into the following three sections: Understanding Young Adult Literature, Entering the Teen World of Literacy, and Issues to Consider in Young Adult Literature and Multimedia. Each genre treated is a two- to four-page introduction to the genre followed by valuable lists, a spotlight on an important aspect, ways to keep up with the genre, and, finally, some thought questions to stir conversation and stimulate research. Instructors or workshop developers can use the result to introduce a particular topic and then expand the topic as needed.

The printed text is supplemented in four ways and readers are encouraged to participate:

- YA Reviews: A wiki of reviews written by readers of the book and maintained by students at San José State University. Instructors of YA materials courses are encouraged to ask their students to add reviews to this wiki. No other permission is needed. Go to <http://seedwiki.com> and search for YA Reviews. Readers can add their own reviews to this page by clicking on "edit this page," adding their review to the top of the list so that the most recent reviews are at the top, and then clicking "save this page." Please follow the format of the reviews already posted: citation, review, reviewer name, and date added. The advantage of seedwiki is that when the person wishes to add an entry and clicks on "edit this page," a familiar toolbar appears at the top of the box, making it easy to format as if one were in a Word document.
- YA Literature and Multimedia: A wiki of professional materials and sources that supplement the main text. This resource can be found at: seedwiki.com and search for YA Literature and Multimedia. Add your favorite resources or correct those already there. Follow the editing procedures above: edit this page; and save this page.
- Mini-Expert Projects. Graduate students have created extensions to the textbook in the format of the textbook as their project in the young adult materials course at San José State University. These projects have been carefully selected for their interesting content and as an extension to the textbook. Instructors of young adult materials courses are invited to require or encourage such additions. The students may copyright their pieces and we must have their permission to post them. These projects are available at: www.lmcsource.com under “Freebies” and then under “book extensions.” If you would like to submit a mini-expert project for consideration, send a Microsoft Word file to David Loertscher at reader.david@gmail.com. The authors of the book will judge each entry for appropriateness and expertise. You will be notified about the possibility of inclusion.

- Best Teen Reads. While the previous extensions are free, Sharon McElmeel, one of the authors of the text, has created The Best Teen Reads for 2010, which is available from Hi Willow Research & Publishing through www.lmcsource.com. This resource contains hundreds of recommended titles both new and old to help teachers and librarians recommend good books for teens.

Other Recommended Professional Books on Teenagers and their Literature from 2005:

- Agosto, Denise E, and June Abbas, eds. Teens, Libraries, and Social Networking. Libraries Unlimited, 2011.
- Alexander, Linda B. and Nahyun Kwon. Multicultural Programs for Tweens and Teens. ALA, 2010.
- Anderson, Sheila B. Extreme Teens Library Services to Nontraditional Teens. Libraries Unlimited, 2005.
- Anderson, Sheila B. Serving Young Teens and ‘Tweens. Libraries Unlimited, 2006.
- Blass, Rosanne. Windows on the World: International Books for Elementary and Middle Grade Readers. Libraries Unlimited, 2011.
- Bodart, Joni. Radical Reads 2: Working with the newest edgy Titles for Teens. Scarecrow Press, 2010.
- Champlain, Connie, David V. Loertscher, and Nancy A.S. Miller. Raise a Reader at any Age: A Librarian’s and Teacher’s Toolkit for Working with Parents. Hi Willow Research & Publishing, 2005.
- Cords, Sarah Startz. The Real story: A Guide to Nonfiction Reading Interests. Libraries Unlimited, 2006.
- Donelson, Kenneth L. and Alleen Pace Nilsen. Literature for Today’s Young Adults. 7th edition. Pearson Education Inc., 2005.
- Farmer, Lesley S.J. Digital Inclusion, Teens, and Your Library: Exploring the Issues and Acting on Them. Libraries Unlimited, 2005.
- Ferrelly, Michael Garrett. Make Room for Teens! Reflections on Developing Teen Spaces in Libraries. Libraries Unlimited, 2011.
- Flowers, Sarah. Young Adults Deserve the Best YALSA’s Competencies in Action. ALA, 2011.
- Frolund, Tina, Compiler. The Official YALSA Awards Guidebook. YALSA/ALA, 2008.
- Gross, Melissa, Annette Y. Goldsmith, and Debi Carruth. HIV/AIDS in Young Adult Novels: an Annotated Bibliography. Scarecrow Press, 2010.
- Harlan, Mary Ann, David V. Loertscher, and Sharron L. McElmeel. Young Adult Literature and Multimedia: A Quick Guide. Hi Willow Research & Publishing, 2005.

- Herald, Nathan. Graphic Novels for Young Readers: A Genre Guide for Ages 4-14. Libraries Unlimited, 2011.
- Holley, Pam Spenser, ed. Quick and Popular Reads for Teens. ALA, 2009.
- Hooper, Brad. Writing Reviews for Readers Advisory. ALA, 2010.
- In the Words of the Winners: The Newbery and Caldecott Medals 2001-2010. ALSC and The Horn Book, 2011.
- Irvin, Judith, June Meltzer, Nancy Dean, and Martha Jan Mickler. Taking the Lead on Adolescent Literacy: Action Steps for Schoolwide Success: For Grades 4-12. Corwin press, 2010.
- Keane, Nancy J. and Terence W. Cavanaugh. The Tech-Savy Booktalker: A Guide for 21st-Century Educators. Libraries Unlimited, 2009.
- Kunzel, Bonnie and Constance Hardesty. The Teen-Centered Book Club: Readers into Leaders. Libraries Unlimited, 2006.
- Latrobe, Kathy and Judy Drury. Critical Approaches to Young Adult Literature. Neil Schuman, 2009.
- Lesesne, Teri S. Nake Reading: Uncovering What Tweens Need to Become Lifelong Readers. Stenhouse Publishers, 2006.
- Littlejohn, Carol. Book Clubbing! Successful Book Clubs for Young People. Linworth, 2011.
- Loertscher, David V. and Landon D. Loertscher. My Reading and Writing Log: Microsoft Access Edition. Hi Willow Research & Publishing, 2005.
- Lynn, Ruth Nadelman. Fantasy Literature for Children and Young Adults: A Comprehensive Guide. 5th ed. Libraries Unlimited, 2005.
- Manhood, Kristine. A Passion for Print Promoting Reading and Books to Teens. Libraries Unlimited, 2006.
- McElmeel, Sharron L. The Best Teen Reads 2007. Hi Willow Research & Publishing, 2007.
- Newbery and Caldecott Awards. 2010 Edition. ALSC, 2011.
- Ott, Valerie A. Teen Programs with Punch: a Month-by-Month Guide. Libraries Unlimited, 2006.
- Rabey, Mellisa. Historical Fiction for Teens: A Genre Guide, Libraries Unlimited, 2011.
- Reid, Rob. Reid's Read-Alouds: Selections for Children and Teens. ALA, 2009.
- Schall, Lucy. Value Packed Booktalks: Game Talks and More for Teen Readers. Libraries Unlimited, 2011.
- Solomon, Laura. Doing Social Media So It Matters: A Librarian's Guide. ALA, 2011.
- Sullivan, Michael. Connecting Boys with Books 2: Closing the Reading Gap. ALA, 2009.
- Thomas, Rebecca L. Popular Series Fiction for Middle School and Teen Readers: A Reading and Selection Guide. Libraries Unlimited, 2005.

For the sixth edition, the authors have updated references, added and subtracted titles, but kept the bulk of the work the same as the first edition. Comments are invited by the authors and can be addressed to David Loertscher at reader.david@gmail.com

Introduction to the Digital Collaborative Edition

The digital collaborative edition of this book is designed to turn each genre page(s) of the book into a conversation between the authors and readers. If you have purchased the printed copy of this edition, you can gain access to the collaborative edition as detailed below.

The collaborative version allows readers to add links, documents, news, projects, additional titles, additional information, booktalks, multimedia, and have a discussion associated with each of the topics in the book. At the top of each topical page is the text of the original book and under this is the space for all the additions.

We anticipate the following uses:

For individual purchasers:

When you purchased the book from LMCSOURCE and included your email address in the order, your email address will be authorized automatically for the digital version. If for some reason this does not happen, email lmcsourceverify@gmail.com providing them with the passcode on the verso of the printed version's title page. They will give you the permission you need. You will always have to access the book through your email; not directly. We recommend using your gmail address if you have one since the book will end up in Google Sites and be under the "more" tab of your gmail.

If you have not automatically received an invitation to the book after purchase, send an email to davidlibraria@gmail.com and request access to the book and give the passcode of YA20117th. You will then receive by return email an invitation to join the public collaborative version. Other individual purchasers will have access to that version, so you will find that others are sharing their ideas along with those you would like to share.

For professional development groups or formal classes:

Ask each of your group to purchase a copy of the book or the digital version from <http://lmcsource.com>. You may wish to purchase a group discount. Speak to the sales representative about this. When that transaction is complete, write an email to davidlibrarian@gmail.com and a separate version will be created for your group. As "owner" of this edition, you will be able to allow your group into the edition and only your group will be able to comment, add links, etc. If you would like the book again with another group, talk with us for other ideas. This book is revised annually by Aug. 1, so we can plan together how the new edition could be used keeping all or parts of the previous group's work.

Section I

Understanding Young Adult Literature

Section 1 provides an introduction to the world of literature for teenagers. It begins with a review of children’s titles that should have been read before the 6th grade and then introduces the young adult novel and the teenager for whom this literature is written. Specific topics are addressed in two parts:

Part A: Building A Background for Understanding Young Adult Literature.....	3
Part B: Building a Background for Understanding the Young Adult Reader and Consumer of Media.....	14

Teen Survey

The only way to really know what is going on in teen literature and media is to connect with teens themselves. But you need to talk and communicate with them about their world of media. Designing a questionnaire might help you question them verbally or doing a survey might help to collect broader data.

Why do a survey when you work with teens every day? The simple answer is that you interact with only a subset of teens in your daily activities. For example, a public librarian might interact well with teens that frequent the public library, but what about all those who don't come? A school librarian might experience the same customers every week but does not know the quiet patrons, those who never come in, or those who gave up coming long ago. Teachers might know their students in general, but the specifics of individual students might escape them.

A bank of questions might help in creating a brief questionnaire for the specific purpose you have in mind. Some sample questions are listed below. Try them out on a few teens and see if you are getting back the kind of information you want before giving the questionnaire to a larger group.

1. Do you like to read? No Sometimes Yes
2. About how many books have you read in the past year? None One Several 10–20 More than 20 (change the time frame to month, school year, summer)
3. How often do you read just for fun? Often Sometimes Never
4. When you read for personal enjoyment, how often do you use the following kinds of media?

Magazines	Never	Sometimes	Often
Newspapers	Never	Sometimes	Often
The Internet	Never	Sometimes	Often
Paperback books	Never	Sometimes	Often
Hardback books	Never	Sometimes	Often
Ebooks	Never	Sometimes	Often
5. Of the books you have read recently, how many were on the following topics?

General YA fiction	None	Several	Almost All
Science fiction or fantasy	None	Several	Almost All
Adventure	None	Several	Almost All
Mystery	None	Several	Almost All
Romance	None	Several	Almost All
Science and technology	None	Several	Almost All
Sports	None	Several	Almost All
Self-help or religious	None	Several	Almost All
Adult books	None	Several	Almost All
Narrative Non-fiction	None	Several	Almost All
6. What libraries do you use to find books to read?

Classroom library	Never	Sometimes	Usually
School library	Never	Sometimes	Usually
Public library	Never	Sometimes	Usually
College library	Never	Sometimes	Usually
7. Would you enjoy participating in online book/movie/Internet discussions? Yes No

Think of using various Web 2.0 tools to collect the information such as Survey Monkey or Google Forms. The latter can be done by a group simultaneously for instant results.

Touchstones in Children's Books

John Newbery (1713–1767) is often acknowledged as one of the first publishers of books for children—A Little Pretty Pocket Book heralded as the first children's book. Prior to that, children were content to take adult books for their own. There were the tales of Gullivar and of the Lilliputians, Robinson Crusoe, and other adventurous tales. But Newbery published books intended solely for children, and two hundred years later there has never been more or better children's literature than in the 21st century. Grandparents of today's generation were introduced to books of Virginia Lee Burton, Ezra Jack Keats, Dr. Seuss, and Maurice Sendak. These giants of children's literature emerged with touchstone titles that set the pace for today's books. Of course, before these giants there were editions of Mother Goose, fairy tales, myths and legends, and a few books we now call classics, such as Treasure Island, Peter Pan, and Tom Sawyer. The early 1960s saw the beginning of the golden age of picture books, the gorgeous illustrated books, the toy books, and the televised or full-length movies of children's books.

Now we are entering a period where picture books bring both a chance to reminisce about favorite books from childhood, a chance to think of favorite authors and titles, themes, and what makes them appealing even today, as well as an era of stimulating picture books written for an older audience. A resurgence of children's books, and an interest from readers of all ages, has been launched by highly successful movies made from extremely popular novels: Holes, Because of Winn Dixie, and Harry Potter 1–7.

Our “Can't Resist List”

Picture Books

- The Cat in the Hat by Dr. Seuss
- The Snowy Day by Ezra Jack Keats
- Where the Wild Things Are by Maurice Sendak
- The Very Hungry Caterpillar by Eric Carle
- The Polar Express by Chris VanAllsburg
- The Lion and the Mouse by Jerry Pinkney

- The Secret Garden by Frances Hodgson Burnett
- Anne of Green Gables by Lucy Maud Montgomery
- Little Women and Little Men by Louisa May Alcott
- Winnie the Pooh by A. A. Milne
- Alice in Wonderland by Lewis Carroll

Chapter Books

- Ramona by Beverly Cleary
- Charlie and the Chocolate Factory by Roald Dahl
- Charlotte's Web by E.B. White
- Sadako and the Thousand Paper Cranes by Eleanor Coerr and Ronald Himler
- The Cay by Theodore Taylor
- At least one childhood series, such as Nancy Drew, The Hardy Boys, The Boxcar Children, or The Babysitter's Club
- The Black Cauldron by Lloyd Alexander
- Roll of Thunder, Hear My Cry by Mildred Taylor
- Where the Red Fern Grows by Wilson Rawls
- Any of the seven titles in the Harry Potter series by J.K. Rowling
- The Giver by Lois Lowry
- Walk Two Moons by Sharon Creech

Classics

- Mary Poppins by P.L. Travers
- Wizard of Oz by L. Frank Baum

Keeping Up

- The CIG to Publishing Children's Books at www.underdown.org/more-resources.htm
- Association for Library Services to Children at www.ala.org/alsc
- Cooperative Children's Book Center (CCBC) at www.education.wisc.edu/ccbc/

Thought Questions

- 1) What's your own list of books that are too good to miss?
- 2) How do you know that the current teen crowd would appreciate your list?

Our List of Favorite Children's Authors Too Good to Miss

- | | | | |
|--|--|---|---|
| <input type="checkbox"/> Adler, David | <input type="checkbox"/> Dahl, Roald | <input type="checkbox"/> Janeczko, Paul | <input type="checkbox"/> San Souci, Robert |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Alexander, Lloyd | <input type="checkbox"/> Danziger, Paula | <input type="checkbox"/> Johnson, D.B. | <input type="checkbox"/> Say, Allen |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Alexander, Sue | <input type="checkbox"/> dePaola, Tomie | <input type="checkbox"/> Keats, Ezra Jack | <input type="checkbox"/> Sayre, April P. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Alike | <input type="checkbox"/> Diaz, David | <input type="checkbox"/> Kellogg, Steven | <input type="checkbox"/> Scieszka, Jon |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Asch, Frank | <input type="checkbox"/> DiCamillo, Kate | <input type="checkbox"/> Kimmel, Eric A. | <input type="checkbox"/> Sendak, Maurice |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Avi | <input type="checkbox"/> Dillon, Diane | <input type="checkbox"/> Kjelgaard, James | <input type="checkbox"/> Seuss, Dr. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Aylesworth, Jim | <input type="checkbox"/> Dillon, Leo | <input type="checkbox"/> Konigsburg, E.L. | <input type="checkbox"/> Shannon, David |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Base, Graeme | <input type="checkbox"/> Duncan, Lois | <input type="checkbox"/> Kurtz, Jane | <input type="checkbox"/> Sierra, Judy |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Blume, Judy | <input type="checkbox"/> Estes, Eleanor | <input type="checkbox"/> Lawlor, Laurie | <input type="checkbox"/> Silverstein, Shel |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Bond, Michael | <input type="checkbox"/> Fisher, Aileen | <input type="checkbox"/> Lawson, Robert | <input type="checkbox"/> Simon, Seymour |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Brett, Jan | <input type="checkbox"/> Fitzgerald, John D. | <input type="checkbox"/> L'Engle, Madeline | <input type="checkbox"/> Sis, Peter |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Brown, Marc | <input type="checkbox"/> Fitzhugh, Louise | <input type="checkbox"/> Lewis, C. S. | <input type="checkbox"/> Skurzynski,
Gloria |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Brown, Marcia | <input type="checkbox"/> Fleischman, Paul | <input type="checkbox"/> Lindgren, Asrid | <input type="checkbox"/> Small, David |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Bunting, Eve | <input type="checkbox"/> Fleischman, Sid | <input type="checkbox"/> Lobel, Anita | <input type="checkbox"/> Smith, Cynthia |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Burton, Virginia | <input type="checkbox"/> Fox, Mem | <input type="checkbox"/> Lobel, Arnold | <input type="checkbox"/> Sneve, Virginia |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Lee | <input type="checkbox"/> Fox, Paula | <input type="checkbox"/> Lowry, Lois | <input type="checkbox"/> Driving Hawk |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Byars, Betsy | <input type="checkbox"/> Freedman, Russell | <input type="checkbox"/> MacLachlan, Patricia | <input type="checkbox"/> Soentpiet, Chris |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Carle, Eric | <input type="checkbox"/> Fritz, Jean | <input type="checkbox"/> Marshall, James | <input type="checkbox"/> Spier, Peter |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Carlson, Nancy | <input type="checkbox"/> Gag, Wanda | <input type="checkbox"/> Martin, Bill Jr. | <input type="checkbox"/> Spinelli, Jerry |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Carroll, Lewis | <input type="checkbox"/> Galdone, Paul | <input type="checkbox"/> Martin, Jacqueline | <input type="checkbox"/> Stanley, Diane |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Casanova, Mary | <input type="checkbox"/> George, Jean | <input type="checkbox"/> Briggs | <input type="checkbox"/> Steptoe, John |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Christopher, Matt | <input type="checkbox"/> Craighead | <input type="checkbox"/> Mayer, Mercer | <input type="checkbox"/> Stevens, Janet |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Ciardi, John | <input type="checkbox"/> Giff, Patricia | <input type="checkbox"/> McCloskey, Rob | <input type="checkbox"/> Stevenson,
James |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Cleary, Beverly | <input type="checkbox"/> Reilly | <input type="checkbox"/> McKissack, Patricia | <input type="checkbox"/> Stine, R. L. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Cole, Joanna | <input type="checkbox"/> Goble, Paul | <input type="checkbox"/> McPhail, David | <input type="checkbox"/> Taback, Simms |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Collier,
Christopher | <input type="checkbox"/> Gorman, Carol | <input type="checkbox"/> Milne, A. A. | <input type="checkbox"/> Taylor, Mildred |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Collier, James | <input type="checkbox"/> Hahn, Mary | <input type="checkbox"/> Most, Bernard | <input type="checkbox"/> Taylor, Theodore |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Lincoln | <input type="checkbox"/> Downing | <input type="checkbox"/> Nelson, Kadir | <input type="checkbox"/> Uchida, Yoshiko |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Cooney, Barbara | <input type="checkbox"/> Haley, Gail | <input type="checkbox"/> O'Dell, Scott | <input type="checkbox"/> Van Allsburg,
Chris |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Coville, Bruce | <input type="checkbox"/> Hamilton, Virginia | <input type="checkbox"/> Oxenbury, Helen | <input type="checkbox"/> Viorst, Judith |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Creech, Sharon | <input type="checkbox"/> Henkes, Kevin | <input type="checkbox"/> Park, Linda Sue | <input type="checkbox"/> Voigt, Cynthia |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Crews, Donald | <input type="checkbox"/> Henry, Marguerite | <input type="checkbox"/> Paterson,
Katherine | <input type="checkbox"/> Waber, Bernard |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Cummings, Pat | <input type="checkbox"/> Hobbs, Will | <input type="checkbox"/> Paulsen, Gary | <input type="checkbox"/> Watson, Wendy |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Curtis,
Christopher Paul | <input type="checkbox"/> Hopkins, Lee | <input type="checkbox"/> Peck, Richard | <input type="checkbox"/> White, E. B. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Bennett | <input type="checkbox"/> Hughes, Langston | <input type="checkbox"/> Peet, Bill | <input type="checkbox"/> Wiesner, David |
| <input type="checkbox"/> Cushman, Karen | <input type="checkbox"/> Hyman, Trina Schart | <input type="checkbox"/> Pinkney, Brian | <input type="checkbox"/> Wilder, Laura I. |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Pinkney, Jerry | <input type="checkbox"/> Wiles, Deborah |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Polacco, Patricia | <input type="checkbox"/> Willard, Nancy |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Potter, Beatrix | <input type="checkbox"/> Williams, Vera |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Prelutsky, Jack | <input type="checkbox"/> Winthrop,
Elizabeth |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Ransome, James | <input type="checkbox"/> Wood, Audrey |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Rey, H. A. | <input type="checkbox"/> Wood, Don |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Rey, Margaret | <input type="checkbox"/> Wright, Betty Ren |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Ringgold, Faith | <input type="checkbox"/> Yates, Elizabeth |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Ross, Tony | <input type="checkbox"/> Yolen, Jane |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Rubel, Nicole | <input type="checkbox"/> Young, Ed |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Ryan, Pam Muñoz | <input type="checkbox"/> Zemach, Margot |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Rylant, Cynthia | |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Sachar, Louis | |
| | | <input type="checkbox"/> Sachs, Marilyn | |

Children's Lit Quizzes

What do you know about children's literature?

- Take a trivia test at:
www.funtrivia.com/playquiz/quiz6248ba5c8.html
- A quiz developed by Carol Dingle and Diana Bell online at www.memorablequotations.com/chlldlitquiz.html

Invite young adults to take the quizzes with you and see how each of you do.

Building a Background for Understanding Young Adult Literature

What is this phenomenon known as the teenage years? And why is it important in our culture, our literature, and our world?

For much of the world's history, there were only two distinct age groups of human beings: children and adults. In agrarian societies, every hand was needed to eek out a living. Everyone worked. Even today in many third world countries, as soon as a child passes through puberty, they are married and are considered as adults with full responsibility for sustenance and adult contributions to the community.

When the Industrial Revolution emerged in the nineteenth century, children and teenagers were employed as soon as they could physically operate a machine. Numerous activists began to publicize the horrors of child labor and its effect on the rising generation. Mechanization also caused many menial adult jobs to be eliminated, and it became apparent that the jobs that would survive required much more education and training. Western society adopted child labor laws and at the same time required young people to finish high school. Thus, by the end of World War II, a new species was created: the teenage animal. Suddenly there was a new class of individuals who were in school, but they also had leisure time — time for recreation and for mischief.

Historically, as books and literature became available to the masses, children read the limited children's literature available and then skipped directly to adult works. Teachers and librarians, plus these newly dubbed "teenagers," aged 12–18, were looking for things to read that related to teen life. There were a few books teenagers read, such as A Tree Grows in Brooklyn (1943) and the shocking Seventeenth Summer (1942), plus lots of other sentimental drivel. When 17-year-old S.E. Hinton published The Outsiders in 1967, followed by Robert Cormier's The Chocolate War (1974), the young adult novel was born and has proliferated ever since.

In recent years, the teen culture changed as its desire toward ultimate consumerism required more than just pocket change. Today, most teens are back in the work force doing the low-paid jobs no one else wants in order to pay for the things they want to buy. With less free time, the reading of the young adult novel has declined despite the increase in its production. At the beginning of a new millennium, advertisers have developed a new group of "clients" to whom they are targeting their advertising: the "Tween" — the group that ages 8–12, or upper elementary school youth in grades 4–6, or even as low as grades 3–5.

In this quick guide, the authors target the traditional middle school and high school age groups, realizing that the tween market is developing rapidly. But before we go any further, some definitions are in order, since we will guide the reader far from the young adult novel. Our quick guide covers a range of materials for the young adult for teachers and librarians who are serving this age group. Thus a few definitions to get us started:

1. Young adult literature (the juvenile novel or YA novel): Books written for young adults and about young adults between the ages of 12 and 18.
2. Young adult literature: That literature enjoyed by young adults, whether borrowed from children's literature, adopted from adult literature by teens, or expanded to include genres such as comics, Internet sites, or their own writings as teenagers.

3. Young adult literature: That literature which adults think teenagers should experience before they go to college, ranging from classical authors such as Shakespeare to the best of many cultures around the world.
4. Young adult literature: That developing body of interesting non-fiction both aimed at teenagers, adopted by teens from the adult world, or forced upon teens in school. There is a growing genre of literary non-fiction aimed at young adults, but also the world of Google and the databases targeted at filling their research assignments.
5. Multimedia for young adults: That part of music, dancing, movies, YouTube, and television adopted by teenagers as their own.
6. Multimedia for young adults: That part of high culture including drama, art, music, dancing, television, and the Internet that adults think teenagers should experience.

So, as the authors approach the topic of teen literature and multimedia, we realize that we are covering a tug-of-war body of materials consisting of those being pushed into teen's experience and those they identify as their own whether we like it or not.

Characteristics of a Young Adult Novel

While the following characteristics are typical of most young adult novels, the absence of one characteristic does not necessarily keep the novel from being designated as being part of this genre. Many books are characterized by the emotional and social appeal to young adults.

- Written from the perspective of a young adult character (often the narrative is written in first person).
- Majority/main characters are approximately the age of the intended reader (or slightly older).
- Characters engaged in activities with which young readers can identify.
- Must include characters that the reader will care about.
- Ends with a sense of hope.
- Young person responsible for own destiny. Formula fiction and much of the mainstream fiction for young adults finds a method of absenting the parents from the picture so that the youthful characters can figure out and be responsible for solving their own problems.
- Fast-paced narratives reach for fast action and powerful images.
- Much of the literature deals with real-life and realistic teen experiences with gangs, sexual experiences, teen problems, conflict, relationships, rebellion, and other problems teens often encounter.

YA Novels Too Good To Miss: 1960–2009

1960s

- Knowles, John. A Separate Peace. (1961)
Lee, Harper. To Kill A Mockingbird. (1962)
L'Engle, Madeleine. A Wrinkle in Time. (1962)
Hinton, S.E. The Outsiders. (1967)
Lipsyte, Robert. The Contender. (1967)
Potok, Chaim. The Chosen. (1967)
Zindel, Paul. The Pigman. (1968)
Cleaver, Vera and Bill. Where the Lilies Bloom.
(1969)
Armstrong, William. Souder. (1969)

1970s

- Plath, Sylvia. The Bell Jar. (1971)
Gaines, Ernest. The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman. (1971)
Anonymous. Go Ask Alice. (1971)
Mathis, Sharon Bell. A Teacup Full of Roses. (1972)
Potok, Chaim. My Name is Asher Lev. (1972)
White, Robb. Deathwatch. (1972)
Kerr, M.E. Dinky Hocker Shoots Smack. (1972)
Green, Betty. Summer of My German Soldier.
(1973)
Childress, Alice. A Hero Ain't Nothin' But A Sandwich. (1973)
Peck, Robert Newton. A Day No Pigs Would Die.
(1973)
Sleator, William. House of Stairs. (1974)
Cormier, Robert. The Chocolate War. (1974)
Blume, Judy. Forever. (1975)
Yep, Lawrence. Dragonwings. (1975)
Guest, Judith. Ordinary People. (1976)
Peck, Richard. Are You in the House Alone? (1976)
McCaffrey, Anne. Dragonwong. (1976)
Cormier, Robert. I Am the Cheese. (1977)
Duncan, Lois. Killing Mr. Griffin. (1978)
McKinley, Robin. Beauty: Retelling... (1978)

1980s

- Adams, Douglas. A Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy. (1980)
Walker, Alice. The Color Purple. (1982)
Cisneros, Sandra. The House on Mango Street.
(1983)
Voigt, Cynthia. Dacey's Song. (1983)
Paulsen, Gary. Dogsong. (1985)
Card, Orson Scott. Ender's Game. (1985)
Paulsen, Gary. Hatchet. (1987)
Myers, Walter Dean. Fallen Angels. (1988)

1990s

- Avi. The True Confessions of Charlotte Doyle. (1990)
Lowry, Lois. The Giver. (1993)
Crutcher, Chris. Ironman. (1995)
Pullman, Philip. The Golden Compass. (1996)
Thomas, Rob. Rats Saw God. (1996)
Hesse, Karen. Out of the Dust. (1997)
Levine, Gale Carson. Ella Enchanted. (1997)
Soto, Gary. Buried Onions. (1997)
Sachar, Louis. Holes. (1998)
Hickham, Homer. Rocket Boys/October Sky. (1999)
Rowling, J.K. Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone.
(1998)
Myers, Walter Dean. Monster. (1999)
Curtis, Christopher Paul. The Watson's Go to Birmingham. (1995)
Curtis, Christopher Paul. Bud, Not Buddy. (1999)

2000s

- Anderson, Laurie Halse. Speak. (2000)
DiCamillo, Kate. Because of Winn-Dixie. (2000)
Philbrick, Rodman. The Last Book in the Universe.
(2000)
Peck, Richard. A Year Down Yonder. (2001)
Crutcher, Chris. Whale Talk. (2001)
Howe, James. The Misfits. (2001)
Brashares, Ann. Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants.
(2001)
Taylor, Mildred. The Land. (2001)
Park, Linda Sue. A Single Shard. (2001)
Giff, Patricia Reilly. Pictures of Hollis Woods
(2002)
Avi. Crispin: The Cross of Lead. (2003)
Johnson, Angela. The First Part Last. (2003)
Moriarty, Jaclyn. The Year of Secret Assignments.
(2004)
Paolini, Christopher. Eragon. (2004)
Farmer, Nancy. House of the Scorpion. (2004)
Riordan, Rick. The Lightning Thief. (2005)
Sonnenblick, Jordan. Notes from the Midnight Driver. (2006)
Schmidt, Gary D. The Wednesday Wars (2007)
Collins, Suzanne. The Hunger Games. (2008)
Applet, Kathi and David Small. The Underneath.
(2008)
Frost, Helen. Crossing Stones. (2009)
Korman, Gordon. Pop. (2009)
McCormick, Patricia. Purple Heart. (2009)
Smith, Sherri L. Flygirl. (2009)

2010s

- Bray, Libba Going Bovine. (2010)
Murray, Liz. Breaking Night. (2010)
Donoghue, Emma. Room. (2010)

Significant Authors

Several authors have emerged in the young adult field. Among these authors are the winners of the Margaret A. Edwards Award. The Edwards Award honors authors who have contributed significantly to the body of young adult literature. Consult the Awards list for specific titles cited. The author list includes S.E. Hinton who was the first to be given this award.

Winners of the Margaret A. Edwards Award

- Laurel H. Anderson
- Orson Scott Card
- Lois Lowry
- Jacqueline Woodson
- Francesca Lia Block
- Ursula K. LeGuin
- Nancy Garden
- Paul Zindel
- Robert Lipsyte
- Chris Crutcher
- Anne McCaffrey
- Madeleine L'Engle
- Gary Paulsen
- Judy Blume
- Cynthia Voigt
- Walter Dean Myers
- M.E. Kerr, pseudo. (Maryjane Meaker)
- Lois Duncan
- Robert Cormier
- Richard Peck
- S.E. Hinton
- Jim Murphy
- Sir Terry Prachett

See a complete list of winning authors and books at www.ala.org/yalsa/edwards

Spotlight: S.E. Hinton

The first book that embraced real society was Susan Eloise (S.E.) Hinton's The Outsiders (Viking, 1967). Written by a female writer, and a teenager at that, this book has been heralded as the first in the new lexicon of young adult literature. At the time Susan was writing her groundbreaking novel, she flunked her high school writing class. Egged on by her younger sister who wanted a car so the two of them could have a little fun, Susan allowed a friend's mom, a literary agent, to submit her manuscript to a publisher. The rest is history. She became the first recipient of the Margaret A. Edwards award for her contribution to literature for young adult readers.

Books by S.E. Hinton

The Outsiders (Viking, 1967)
That Was Then, This Is Now (Viking, 1971)
Rumblefish (Delacorte, 1975)
Tex (Delacorte, 1979)
Taming the Star Runner (Delacorte, 1988)
Hawkes Harbor (Tor Books, 2004)

Keeping Up

- Alleen Pace Nilsen Donelson, and Kenneth L. Literature for Today's Young Adults.
- YALSA media lists at: <http://www.ala.org/ala/mgrps/divs/yalsa/booklistsawards/bestbooksya/bbyahome.cfm>
- Voya Magazine (online at www.voya.com)

Thought Question

Do a quick survey of some teens you know asking them about their consumption of media, including print, film, TV, computer, and radio. How much of their day do they spend with each of these media? What are the implications for you as you begin to try to understand the world of teen literature and multimedia?

Awards and Recognition

The Michael L. Printz Award for excellence in young adult literature was established in 2000, in honor of Michael L. Printz, a Kansas librarian. His passion for books and reading inspired this YALSA sponsored award. The award is designated to honor books marketed for 12 through 18 year olds. The John Newbery medal, first proposed by Frederic G. Melcher in 1921, was the first award to honor excellence in children's literature (with children being defined as ages 8–14). The award was first presented in 1922. In the years that followed, the United States was introduced to several other awards.

As the body of literature for young readers grew and the genre of young adult literature appeared, there seemed a need for additional awards. Some awards recognize individual titles, while others honor an author's lifetime body of work. Most books recognized by the American Library Association are selected for literary merit while the majority of state awards are chosen because of their popular appeal to readers.

Multicultural Awards

One of the oldest multicultural awards is the Coretta Scott King (CSK) award. First awarded in 1970, the CSK award is presented to an author (or illustrator) of African descent who promotes understanding of the American dream. Past winners include: We Are the Ship: The Story of Negro League Baseball by Kadir Nelson; Elijah of Buxton by Christopher Paul Curtis; Day of Tears: A Novel in Dialogue by Julius Lester; and Bad News for Outlaws: The Remarkable Life of Bass Reeves, Deputy U.S. Marshall by Vaunda Micheaux Nelson.

In 2010, the Coretta Scott King-Virginia Hamilton Award for Lifetime Achievement was established. The first award winner was Walter Dean Myers whose four decades of writing for young adults was honored. The award specifically mentioned: Amiri & Odette: A Love Story, Monster, Fallen Angels, and Sunrise Over Fallujah. In "odd" years an educator is recognized.

The Pura Belpré award, established in 1996, recognizes a Latino/a that best represents and celebrates the Latino culture. In 2009, the award became an annual award. Past winners include Pam Muñoz Ryan for Esperanza Rising, Victor Martinez for Parrot in the Oven: Mi Vida, Viola Canales for The Tequila Worm, and Julia Alvarez for Return to Sender.

Award	2011 Winner
Printz	Ship Breaker by Paolo Bacigalupi
Newbery	Moon Over Manifest by Clare Vanderpool
Robert F. Sibert Award	Kakapo Rescue: Saving the World's Strangest Parrot by Sy Montgomery
Margaret A. Edwards	Sir Terry Pratchett
Coretta Scott King-Virginia Hamilton	Walter Dean Myers (author-2010) Dr. Henrietta Mays Smith (educator-2011)
Coretta Scott King	One Crazy Summer by Rita Williams-Garcia
Schneider Family Book Award	Anything but Typical by Nora Raleigh Baskin Marcelo in the Real World by Francisco X. Stork
Pura Belpré	The Dreamer by Pam Muñoz Ryan

Informational Books

For many years informational books were overlooked when it came award time. The majority of Newbery award winners have been fiction, although four biographies, two books of poetry (including Paul Fleischman's Joyful Noise: Poems for Two Voices in 1989), and one book of history have garnered the award. In 2001 ALA members responded to the growing oversight by establishing the Robert F. Sibert Award to celebrate the best informational book published in the preceding year. Past winners have included An American Plague: The True and Terrifying Story of the Yellow Fever Epidemic of 1795 by Jim Murphy (2004), The Life and Death of Adolf Hitler by James Cross Giblin (2003), Kadir Nelson's We Are the Ship: The Story of the Negro League Baseball (2009), and Almost Astronauts: 15 Women Who Dared to Dream by Tanya Lee Stone.

YALSA Awards

The Young Adult Library Services division of ALA (YALSA) has three awards that specifically recognize contributions to young adult literature. The Margaret A. Edwards lifetime achievement award honors the body of work of an author who has been popular with teens over time. The Michael A. Printz award recognizes an outstanding work of literature published during the preceding year. The first award winner, in 2000, was Walter Dean Myers for Monster. The third, the Alex Award list, recognizes books published for adults that have crossover appeal for teenagers. In 2008, ALSC and YALSA named the first Odyssey winner for excellence in audio books for children/young adults. The award book in 2010 was a given to a picture book, but the honor books included audio productions of Peace, Locomotion by Jacqueline Woodson and We Are the Ship: The Story of Negro League Baseball by Kadir Nelson.

Other Awards

ALA, and its various divisions, is not the only organization awarding outstanding young adult books. The Assembly on Literature for Adolescents (ALAN) honors an individual who has made an outstanding contribution to the field of young adult literature. The 2011 Boston Globe-Horn Book Awards included Tim Wynne-Jones's Blink and Caution, and Benedict Arnold: A True Story of Adventure, Heroism, & Treachery by Steve Sheinkin. The previous year's winners included Rebecca Stead's When You Reach Me and Marching for Freedom: Walk Together, Children, and Don't You Grow Weary by Elizabeth Partridge. In November of each year, the National Book Awards also recognizes excellence in Young People's Literature. The 2010 winner was Kathryn Erskine's Mockingbird. The Society of Children's Book Writers & Illustrators presents the Golden Kite Award, an award given by peers for outstanding work. Recent awardees include Jennifer Holm for Turtle in Paradise and Tanya Lee Stone for The Good, the Bad, and the Barbie.

Where to Find Award Information:
ALAN

www.alan-ya.org

Boston Globe-Horn Book

www.hbook.com

Golden Kite Award

www.scbwi.org/ > Awards & Grants

Golden-Kite-Award

YALSA Booklists and Book Awards

www.ala.org/yalsa/booklists

ALSC Book Awards

www.ala.org/ala/mgrps/divs/alsc/awardsgrants/bookmedia/index.cfm

National Book Awards

www.nationalbook.org

State and Regional Choice Awards

There are a number of state and regional awards. The significance of the state and regional awards is that they are often “choice” awards. Choice awards are selected through a combination of teens and adults. Nominations come from teens and adult professionals (often librarians and English teachers) narrow the list. Teens read and vote for the winner from the narrowed list.

Selected State/Regional Choice Awards —

Gateway (links) to websites available at www.mcelmeel.com/curriculum/bookawards.html

Selected State Choice Awards

Grades 6–8 Focus

Delaware: Blue Hen Award (chapter book division)
Florida: Sunshine State Young Reader’s Award
Illinois: Rebecca Caudill Young Readers’ Book Award
Louisiana: Louisiana Young Reader’s Choice Award (grades 6-8 division)
Maine: Student Book Award
Minnesota: Maud Hart Lovelace Book Award
Missouri: Mark Twain Award (grades 4-8)
Vermont: Dorothy Canfield Fisher Children’s Book Award
West Virginia: Children’s Book Award
Wisconsin: Golden Archer Award (Middle/Junior high school)

Grades 6–8 & 9–12

Pacific Northwest Library Association’s Young Reader’s Choice Award
Arizona: Young Readers Awards
California: Young Reader Medal
Kansas: Heartland Award for Excellence in Young Adult Literature
Kentucky: Bluegrass Award
Maryland: Black-Eyed Susan Book Award
Massachusetts: Children’s Book Award
Michigan: Great Lakes’ Great Books Award
Nebraska: Golden Sower Award

Grades 6–8 & 9–12 (continued)

New Jersey: Garden State Book Awards–Teens
New Mexico: Land of Enchantment Book Award-Young Adult
New York: Charlotte Award–Young Adult Award
Ohio: Buckeye Children’s Book Award
Pennsylvania: Young Reader’s Choice Award
Rhode Island: Teen Book Award
South Carolina: SCASL (SC Assoc. of School Librarians) Book Award
Texas: Lone Star
Virginia: Virginia State Young Readers

Grades 7–12 Focus

Colorado: Blue Spruce Young Adult Book Award
Georgia: Peach Book Award for Teen Readers
Illinois: Abraham Lincoln Illinois High School Book Award
Indiana: Eliot Rosewater (Rosie) Award
Iowa: Iowa Teen Award
Iowa: Iowa High School Book Award
Missouri: Gateway Readers Award (grades 9–12)
Ohio: Teen Buckeye Award (grades 9–12)
Oklahoma: Sequoyah Book Awards–Young Adult
South Dakota: YARP Reading List
Tennessee: Volunteer State Book Award-Young Adult
Texas: Tayshas
Utah: Beehive Awards
Washington: Evergreen Young Adult Book Award
Wyoming: Soaring Eagle Book Award

Lists

Several professional publications publish best books lists, on an annual basis: Horn Book, VOYA, School Library Journal, Booklist, and Kirkus Reviews. ALSC (a division of ALA) publishes a list of “Notable Children’s Media” (including books), and YALSA publishes “Best Books for Young Adults,” “Quick Picks for Reluctant Readers,” “Popular Paperbacks,” and “Audio Books.” Since 2007, YALSA has also published a “Great Graphics Novels for Teens” List. ALA lists can be found at www.ala.org/alsc and www.ala.org/yalsa. Don’t overlook other lists, including the Bulletin of the Center for Children’s Books Blue Ribbon Awards, International Reading Associations “Choice” lists, and lists from organizations dedicated to a specific topic, such as the National Science Teachers Association.

Websites:

- The Bulletin: Blue Ribbon Awards bccb.lis.illinois.edu/
- Teen Reading Lists: SJLibrary.org www.sjlibrary.org/gateways/teens/booklists/
- International Reading Association www.reading.org
- National Science Teachers Association www.nsta.org (search “best books list”)
- National Council for the Social Studies (Notable List) www.socialstudies.org/resources/notable

Online Reading Recommendations:

- www.teenreads.com — Reader’s Recommendations
- www.bookdivas.com — The Leading Online Book Community for Young Adult and College Readers
- www.readingrants.org — Reading Rants! Out of the Ordinary Teen Booklists!
- www.readkiddoread.com — “advanced reads” include recommendations for ages 10 & up

Spotlight: Chains by Laurie Halse Anderson

In 2009, Anderson was honored with the Margaret A. Edwards Award in recognition of her powerful novels: Catalyst; Fever 1793; and Speak. Some feel that Chains is even more significant. Anderson writes of Isabel who is a slave in the home of a loyalist (during the Revolutionary War period). Isabel’s plight forces her to think about the loyalist and patriot causes and her own freedom. Chains won the 2009 Scott O’Dell Award for historical fiction and was a National Book Award Finalist. Chains examines Isabel’s fight for freedom alongside the entire nation. Forge (2010) continues the story as Curzon, who as part of the patriot army, fears discovery as a slave passing for free. Curzon must find out what it takes for a slave to forge his own path during the American Revolution. Find out more information at madwomanintheforest.com

An Award Author to Watch

In 2006, John Green made his way onto Young Adult lists when he was awarded the Michael A. Printz Award for his first novel, Looking for Alaska. That triumph was quickly followed with other acclaimed titles, An Abundance of Katherines (2006), Paper Towns (2008) and an innovative novel written with David Levithan, Will Grayson, Will Grayson (2010). Green’s official website is at johngreenbooks.com.

Thought Questions

- 1) How important are awards chosen by the readers in comparison to those selected for their literary value?
- 2) Should all awards take into consideration the book’s potential for popularity among its audience? Explain.
- 3) Award books from past decades are, by today’s standards, found to be flawed in terms of stereotypes of minority cultures/genders. What implication does that have for use in the classroom/library?

Teen Psychology

Adults who determine to work with the teenagers of today are brave or crazy, depending on your point of view. It is certain that those who dedicate their lives to this age group have to love their subjects and spend a career in fascinated puzzlement.

We have all been teenagers at one time or another, experiencing those wonderful, terrible, and unexpected changes, but we cannot assume that our own experience is representative of those whom we aim to serve. A good dose of teenage psychology, research, and common sense will prepare us and keep us on our toes of understanding teens.¹ It is certain that those who dislike or fear teens should find another vocation.

So many young adults come from dysfunctional homes, lack English skills, or are from such a wide variety of cultural backgrounds that teachers and librarians have to stretch understanding constantly to communicate effectively with these budding adults. To communicate your respect and your certainty of the teen's worth is to gain their trust and respect while keeping a measure of professional distance. Today's teens need advocates—adults who are willing to step in when society, the school, the law, or other community institutions are abusing their “power” over teenagers.

The Four Spheres of Development

As a teen teacher/librarian/advocate, think, read, and plan in advance for how to deal with four significant aspects of development during the teen years. Here is our list of considerations. Add and revise as you build understanding and discuss these critical characteristics.

Physical Development

- ❑ There are certain things we can't change: skin color, height, zits, handsome or ugly, early or late development...It's all in the genes. Accept it and move on.
- ❑ Puberty comes to all at various times during the teen years. There is nothing you can do to control the timing of this event. Correct information will minimize the surprises.
- ❑ Teenage diseases are both genetic and environmental and can be the consequence of our behavior or out of our control.
- ❑ Healthy eating, exercise, sleep, and cleanliness will contribute or detract from our sense of wellbeing and predict what will happen to us physically in our adult life.
- ❑ Risky behaviors often have deadly consequences (sex, drugs, alcohol, and the excess of almost anything).

Spiritual Development

- ❑ Teens often question family traditions of religion, churches, or the lack thereof. Have the courage to investigate fully before making life-long decisions.
- ❑ A moral and ethical sense not only helps us get along in society, but it is the foundation of a healthy, well-rounded person.

Social Development

- ❑ Friendships are a vital part of growing up.
- ❑ Deciding the difference between a true friend and a fair weather friend is a critical skill to develop.

¹ A useful and inexpensive collection of current articles on teenage psychology with an excellent outline of concerns and issues is: Sticle, Fred E., Adolescent Psychology. 7th ed. Annual Editions series. McGraw-Hill, 2009.

- ❑ Being your own self, with your own standards, should be acceptable to a true friend.
- ❑ It's often who you know as much as it is what you know.
- ❑ "Fun" need not involve self-destructive behavior.
- ❑ The world of social networking extends both friendships but also introduces problems.

Emotional Development

- ❑ Everyone feels depressed at times, but if this is an all-day, everyday experience, seek help.
- ❑ Changes in our physical bodies during puberty affect our emotions as well as our bodies. Many crazy feelings are usually only temporary as we learn to cope in the adult world.

Resources for adults working with teens:

- Lerner, Richard M. and Laurence Steinberg. Handbook of Adolescent Psychology. 2 vols. Wiley, 2009. An authoritative and scholarly encyclopedia.
- Stickle, Fred E. Adolescent Psychology 7th ed. McGraw-Hill/Dushkin. This book comes out annually, so make sure you have the most recent edition. Additional resources and teaching suggestions to accompany the collected articles online at www.dushkin.com/online
- Pressley, Michael. Child and Adolescent Development for Educators. Guilford Press, 2006.
- Psychology Information Online: Depression in Teenagers: www.psychologyinfo.com/depression/teens.htm
- Encyclopedia of Psychology — Links to additional sites. www.psychology.org/links/Environment_Behavior_Relationships/Adolescent/
- Faber, Adele and Elaine Mazlish. How to Talk to Teens Will Listen and Listen So Teens Will Talk. Collins, 2005.
- Godfrey, Rhett. The Teen Code: How to Talk to Them About Sex, Drugs, and Everything Else—Teenagers Reveal What Works Best. Rodale Books, 2004.
- Edgette, Janet Sasson. Stop Negotiating With Your Teen: Strategies for Parenting Your Angry, Manipulative, Moody, or Depressed Adolescent. Perigee, 2002.
- Rimm, Sylvia. Growing Up Too Fast The Rimm Report on the Secret World of America's Middle Schoolers, 2005.
- Tapscott, Don. Grown Up Digital: How the Net Generation is Changing Your World, 2008.
- Palfrey, John. Born Digital: Understanding the First Generation of Digital Natives, 2008.
- Hanging Out, Messing Around, and Geeking Out: Kids Living and Learning with New Media (John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation Series on Digital Media and Learning), 2010.
- Jenkins, Henry. Confronting the Challenges of Participatory Culture Media Education for the 21st Century (John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation Reports on Digital Media and Learning), 2009.

Self-help resources for teenagers:

- Salekin, Randall and Donald R. Lynam. Handbook of Adolescent Psychopathy, 2010.
- Adolescent Health Sourcebook. Ed. Chad T. Kimball. Omnigraphics, 2002.
- Ballard, Robert L. Pieces of Me: Who Do I Want to Be? 2009.
- Bladow, Chad E. Seven Years, Seven Ways: Surviving Your Teen and Preteen Years. Starrider Books, 2007.
- Cobain, Bev. When Nothing Matters Anymore: A Survival Guide for Depressed Teens. Free Spirit Publishing, 2007.
- Covey, Sean. The 6 Most Important Decisions You Will Ever Make for Teens. Fireside, 2006.
- Girlosophy series. Allen & Unwin. Various titles.
- Harrill, Suzanne E. Empowering Teens to Build Self Esteem. 2011 (Kindle ed.).
- Horsley, Heidi. Grief Relief. Rainbow Books, 2007.
- Lohmann, Raychelle Cassada. The Anger Workbook for Teens: Activities to Help You Deal with Anger and Frustration (Instant Help), 2009.

- McCoy, Kathy and Charles Wibbelsman. The Teenage Body Book: A New Edition for a New Generation. Hatherleigh Press, 2009.
- Medoff, Lisa. SOS: Stressed Out Students Guide to Handling Peer Pressure. Kaplan Publishing, 2009.
- Nelson, Richard and Carol Christen. What Color Is Your Parachute for Teens: Discovering Yourself, Defining Your Future. Ten Speed Press, 2006
- Niedzwiecki, Hal. The Big Book of Pop Culture: A How-To Guide for Young Artists. Illustrated by Marc Ngui. Annick, 2007.
- Packer, Alex J. The How Rude! Handbook of Friendship & Dating Manners for Teens: Surviving the Social Scene. Free Spirit Publishing, 2004. (Look for additional How Rude! books by Alex Packer.)
- Saul, 'Aunt' Laya. You Don't Have to Learn Everything the Hard Way. 2nd ed. Kadima Press, 2007.
- Slade, Suzann Buckingham. Adopted: The Ultimate Teen Guide (It Happened to Me, 2007).
- Smith, Keri. Boyology: A Teen Girl's Crash Course in All Things Boy. Chronicle Books, 2009.
- The Teen Girl's Gotta-Have-It Guide series. Watson-Guptill.
- Timothy, Sisemore. Free from Odd: A Workbook for Teens with Obsessive-compulsive Disorder (Instant Help), 2010
- Watkins, S. Craig. The Young and the Digital: What the Migration to Social Network Sites, Games, and Anytime, Anywhere, Media Means for Our Future, 2009.

Many current books, pamphlets, and Internet sites advise teens how to survive the teen years and live to tell about it. All materials contain the biases of their authors and are thus open to controversy in a typical community of parents and teenagers from varying backgrounds, cultures, and religious orientations. The quandary for adults is to select and help teens gain access to the information they desire. For example, some books might stress responsible drinking and others advise total abstinence from alcohol. Librarians and teachers who follow intellectual freedom guidelines try to include a wide range of opinions in the information they provide. Such policies, however, may not be popular in a very conservative community and may result in public controversy. Every teacher and librarian needs to be able to defend the array of information being provided to teens and have policies and procedures in place when questions arise. If your school or library does not have a policy for handling controversial materials, you are inviting trouble that can escalate out of control overnight.

Questions to ask about as one selects information for teens:

- What are the credentials of the author? (Education? Promoting an organizational viewpoint?)
- What is the bias of the author? (conservative to liberal)
- What messages are contained in the media aimed at teens? (magazines aimed at teen girls stressing thinness and other things)
- Are the materials something that teens would actually read, view or listen to?
- How does the material fit in with the community in which it will be used?
- How does the material support the agenda of the school or community? (making this school safe, building a drug-free zone in a neighborhood)

Spotlight on The 7 Habits of Highly Effective Teens

Written by the son of the famous author of the 7 Habits book, Sean Covey speaks to teens about habits, paradigms, being proactive, setting goals, will power, relationships, positive thinking, understanding others, making yourself understood, keeping time for yourself, and having the motivation to do all this. It is written in a positive, motivating, and easy-to-read style. There are interactive activities throughout the book, helping teens to understand the concepts, set goals, and be able to achieve those goals.

Collection Development and Selection

One of the most interesting challenges both school and public librarians have is to develop collections of information, printed materials, and multimedia that will serve the needs of the teachers and teens. School librarians concentrate more on collections that support the school's curriculum while public librarians see teen needs in a larger framework of community information needs. From the patron point of view, the task seems quite simple: Just stock what I, the teen, need when I need it, in the format I desire, in the language and reading level I prescribe, and have this at my elbow 24/7/365. Oh, and by the way, if you don't do it, Google will. (Not!)

The best way to keep current with teen trends and young adult materials is to talk to and listen to the teens you work with. However, this will not help you lead teens to materials they need, enjoy, or might be interested in if they knew about them. There are other resources that will help with this task. Our job as young adult advocates who serve teenagers requires we know not only what teens know (what is current and what is on the horizon), but also that we know about what teens need and the materials that meet those needs. Professional reviews and professional peers who work with young adults are excellent resources, but it is important to understand your community and the needs of that community when selecting materials.

Teens are an excellent source of recommendations. They are often plugged into what is available, and they know what they want. A survey to establish the different types of media that teens are consuming is often very helpful in decisions regarding your collection. Talking to the teens you work with will also help you determine the needs of teens and what is available. Become a consumer of teen media. Knowing what teens watch, listen to, and read will help open up conversations, as well as keep you up-to-date on the trends.

It is also important to know the curriculum standards and needs of the teens you serve. Each state has different standards, but there are commonalities in curriculum. Collaborating with other professionals, teachers, and librarians (both public and school) helps those involved to know what research assignments teens will be working on. As teens begin to recognize the library as an information resource, they will use the library to meet personal information needs as well. Remember, adolescence can be a confusing time in life. Teens are building personal identities and defining their individualism. Often they will have information needs built around that search for identity. Teens may not approach an adult for help in finding what they need, so it is important to keep in mind the emotional and physiological issues teens may be facing. Also pay attention to what the hot topics are in the news surrounding teenagers. What adults are saying about teenagers may spark debate and interest among teen patrons.

Professional Reviews

There are several resources for professional reviews. Publications include books, serial publications, and the Internet. Published six times a year, VOYA (Voices of Youth Advocates) magazine is an excellent starting point. VOYA includes articles on programs and facilities, but its primary focus is materials. The reviews, written by volunteers and teens, are assigned a popularity rating as well as a quality rating, the only journal to do so. VOYA also reviews websites and graphic novels. The staple for school librarians is School Library Journal (SLJ). Like VOYA, SLJ relies primarily on volunteer reviewers, which can lead to an uneven quality in reviews. SLJ includes reviews for all ages with a category for 5th grade and up, as well as adult books for young adults, reference materials, audio books, and other media. Reviews can also be found in review journals with a broader focus, such as Booklist, Kirkus Reviews, and Publisher's Weekly. Horn Book for Children has reviews for older readers, despite having a focus on the younger ages, and can be an excellent resource. Another avenue to investigate when determining the worthiness of a title for addition to a collection is Amazon, which posts editorial reviews from major review journals as well as reviews from staff. (Note: These are different than customer reviews.) Book jobbers also assemble recommended lists based on collected reviews.

Review Journals

- Booklist: Professional Reviewers; reviews presumed to be positive and are more annotative in nature
- School Library Journal: Reviewers are primarily volunteers and has a limited number of reviews. Reviews consider quality.
- VOYA: Reviews written by volunteers, including teens. Reviews are finite and consider quality.
- Kirkus: Focus on public libraries. Reviewers are anonymous and paid but are mostly working professionals. The anonymity allows reviews to be sharper and more direct. Includes positive and negative reviews.
- Library Media Connection: Reviewers are volunteers. Focuses on curriculum applications.
- Publisher's Weekly: Focus on booksellers
- Amazon and B&N.com: Each pays for professional review reprint rights. Excellent resource for investigating individual titles, but not for developing a collection of multiple titles.

Associations

The Young Adult Library Services Association (YALSA) is also an excellent resource for keeping current in regards to teen materials and quality materials for libraries. YALSA is responsible for a number of lists that they compile on a yearly basis. The lists include Best Books for Young Adults, Popular Paperbacks, Quick Picks for Reluctant Readers, Selected Audio Books, and Selected DVDs and Videos. They also sponsor Teen's Top Ten, in which teens can vote online for their favorites during Teen Read Week in October. Every five years YALSA publishes a list of Outstanding Books for the College Bound. YALSA also sponsors a listserv called "YALSA Bk" that helps develop lists of titles, keeps users current in new material, and, on occasion, discusses books. Books that annotate and recommend books are among the organization's publications. Titles include Best Books for Young Adults (3rd ed.), Sizzling Summer reading Programs for Young Adults, Annotated Booklists for Every Reader.

Another organization that focuses on young adults is The Assembly on Literature for Adolescents (ALAN). ALAN is an independent assembly of the National Council of Teachers of English (NCTE). ALAN may feature a larger diversity of members than YALSA because of its connection to the NCTE; there are more English teacher members. ALAN publishes The Alan Review three times per year. This journal has in-depth articles about young adult books as well as "clip and save" reviews. The articles are often focused on the teaching of literature but can be an excellent way to collaborate with English teachers to use young adult literature in their classroom. On the ALAN website, concise reviews are posted under "ALAN's Picks." Check out the other news, lists, and networking on their website.

The International Reading Association (IRA) is a worldwide network of professionals who promote literacy and life-long reading. Each year the IRA works with different regions in the United States to develop a list of new books that encourage the reading habit. Each year the list has thirty titles selected by teens with the guidance of librarians and teachers. The association also publishes a Teacher's Choice list, which has an advanced level that includes 6th–8th grades. Choice lists are an excellent way of keeping up with what is new.

Online Groups

The online environment has provided new avenues to keeping current with what is popular, what is quality, and, hopefully, what quality materials are popular with teens. Listservs and online communities may be difficult to keep up with but are an excellent resource for information and opinion. The YALSA and LM_NET listservs each receive nearly 100 messages a day. For more in-depth conversations, and more mail, CHILD_LIT is a well-known and frequently used discussion list. Adbooks plans discussions of one or two books a month and recommends various titles, including older as well as newer titles. While keeping up with online lists or discussion groups can be daunting, even “lurking” (monitoring the list without participation) can provide insight into available titles to help with selection. Another online resource is the kidlit “blogosphere”. There are a number of excellent bloggers who review and discuss Young Adult materials. Set up a reader and get frequent updates from MotherReader, Bookshelves of Doom, Fuse 8, or any number of book reviewers.

Book ListSers for Librarians

- YALSA Book:
www.ala.org/yalsa
Select: Electronic Lists
- LM_NET:
www.eduref.org/lm_net/
- CHILD_LIT:
www.rci.rutgers.edu/~mjoseph/childlit/about.html
- Booktalking:
groups.yahoo.com/group/booktalking
- Addbooks:
groups.yahoo.com/group/adbooks/

Internet Sites

There are several Internet sites geared to teens that focus on books. One of these is Teen Reads (www.teenreads.com). Teen Reads provides reviews, featured authors, polls, and links to websites. There are also contests and reading group guides. Another site is Book Divas (www.bookdivas.com). You must apply to participate in the message boards, but you can still read reviews written by the divas, usually teen readers. Genrefluent (www.genrefluent.com/) explores the world of genre fiction. Each entry has a brief annotation and review. There is also a teen page with comments from teens and a form for teens to submit comments. Reading Rants (www.readingrants.org) is another website with excellent annotated lists put together by Jennifer Hubert. The IPL (www.ipl.org/div/teen/browse/bw0000/) has a page of collected annotated links that lead to different public libraries with teen pages and booklists. Several publishers have pages promoting the latest books being published. Finally, sign up for Richie's Picks at (www.richiespicks.com) for ongoing and readable reviews via email, or browse reviews on his site.

Selection Policy

Providing materials for teens provides some unique challenges, particularly when dealing with younger teens. The wide range of maturity and developmental needs of teens can present difficulties. One way to effectively handle potential problems is to have a clear selection policy in place. Selection policies can guide purchasing and protect against challenges. A good selection policy will lead to a stronger collection because you will not purchase unnecessary materials, will have a well thought-out reason for the purchase of items that are grounded in professional philosophy, and will meet the needs of your community. A good selection policy should consider the mission of your library, the objectives you wish to meet, and the mechanics of selection. The mechanics of selection should include the person responsible for selection, the criteria for selection (including the number of professional reviews to be consulted), and the formats to be selected. There are a number of sample selection policies available online including a Workbook for Selection Policy Writing produced by the American Library Association (www.ala.org/ala/issuesadvocacy/banned/challengeslibrarymaterials/essentialpreparation/workbookslectn/index.cfm). Take the time to investigate selection policies and make sure you understand the policy you are working with. Use that understanding to guide your implementation of the policy.

Selection Activity

Develop a library mission and professional objectives for a selection policy. Consider professional ethics, materials important to teens, and the information needs of teens.

Professional Titles

There are a number of major recommended lists for teens to explore. Try Wilson's Middle and Junior High School Catalog and the Senior High School Catalog that has been around for decades alongside a sampling of recommended lists as follows:

- Barr, Catherine. Best New Media, K–12: A Guide to Movies, Subscription Web Sites, and Educational Software. Libraries Unlimited, 2008.
- Cart, Michael. Passions and Pleasures: Essays and Speeches about Literature and Libraries. Scarecrow Press, 2007.
- Frolund, Tina, comp. The Official YALSA Awards Guidebook. YALSA/ALA, 2008.
- Gillespie, John T. and Catherine Barr. Best Books for High School Readers. Supplement to the 1st ed, Grades 9–12. Libraries Unlimited, 2006.
- Gillespie, John T. and Catherine Barr. Best Books for Middle School and Junior High School Readers. Supplement to the 1st ed. Grades 6–9. Libraries Unlimited, 2006.
- Gillespie, John T. The Children's and Young Adult Literature Handbook: A Research and Reference Guide. Libraries Unlimited, 2006.
- Latrobe, Kathy and Judy Drury. Critical Approaches to Young Adult Literature. Neil Schuman, 2009.
- Loertscher, David V. and Laura Wimberley. Collection Development Using the Collection Mapping technique. Hi Willow Research & Publishing, 2009.
- Ludwig, Sarah: Starting From Scratch: Building a Teen Library Program. Libraries Unlimited, 2011.
- McElmeel, Sharron. Best Teen Reads 2010. Hi Willow Research and Publishing, 2009.
- Rabey, Melissa. Historical Fiction for Teens: A Genre Guide. Libraries Unlimited, 2011.
- Schall, Lucy. Value-Packed Booktalks: Genre Talks and More for Teen Readers.
- York, Sherry. Booktalking Authentic Multicultural Literature: Fiction, History and Memoirs for Teens. Linworth, 2008.
- Zbaracki, Matthew D. Best Books for Boys: A Resource for Educators. Libraries Unlimited, 2008.

School and Public Library Cooperation in a Teen World

In the public mind, there may be little difference between the services to teens in school and public libraries, but a closer examination will reveal major differences in the focus of the two organizations. Teachers who understand the differences and build relationships with both organizations stand the greatest chance of succeeding with their students.

The Role of School Libraries

High school libraries have been around for most of the 20th century. Their central focus is prescribed in their national standards, i.e. the support of the curriculum of the school. Thus they concentrate on serving students with school assignments, helping teachers construct library-friendly assignments, and providing collections that target curricular topics. Librarians are now constructing digital school libraries or virtual learning commons available 24 hours a day, seven days a week that link teens to databases, quality websites, Web 2.0 tools, and other materials directly connected to the teen's studies. School librarians may also be interested in the teaching of reading connected to the content areas of the school, so their interest is often directed toward supplying interesting and readable non-fiction and informational books at the reading levels of their clients. Some reading initiatives may also be taking place in the secondary school such as participating in state reading awards.

The Role of Public Libraries

Many public libraries do not have large collections of books aimed at the teen reader, a person dedicated to working with young adults, or a space in the library that teens could call their own. These libraries have children's collections and children's reading rooms, but expect the teen to graduate to the adult collections and space. In recent years, however, more interest in teens has been growing among public librarians. A space for teens is often carved out and stocked with YA fiction, graphic novels, or whatever popular fare seems to attract teens to the space. Many young adult librarians, when there are such personnel, try to build activities with teenagers that attract them to the public library. These may include book clubs, discussion groups, cultural activities, service projects, and any other activity proposed by teen advisory groups. Public librarians often inherit students from the local schools who either don't have quality school libraries or their school libraries lack the resources to support school assignments. Another crowd of teens gravitates to the public library as a social place and somewhere to go after school. The public library might be much more popular with teens because of its more diverse collection, larger young adult fiction collections, and a pleasant/safe environment.

Collaborative Relationships

Public librarians often complain that they are caught unawares about the assignments given by teachers in the local schools and teens expecting collections or services at a moment's notice. The perennial problem cannot be fully solved, but it can be minimized by regular communication among all the parties involved. The teacher who gives a call to the public library warning of a major impending research assignment or the school librarian who borrows extra materials from the public library so that there is a high fill rate during the school day is often appreciated both by the public library staff and by the teens who have a higher success rate. Links to nearby academic libraries can often help to fill requests for research on special or unusual topics. The sharing of digital resources is often one of the best cooperative activities in the quest to serve teens with quality information resources as opposed to trusting Google for everything.

Teachers, School and Public Librarians

One of the most important friendships a teacher can make is the friendship with school and public librarians. These two professionals will feed every interested teacher so many wonderful tidbits about working with their students. In return, the librarians will want to know where teachers are in the various topical units of instruction. Every librarian will act somewhat differently, but they could supply teachers with boxes of books on a topic, interesting articles to read, collaboration on building units of instruction, connections to great links on the Internet, visits to the classroom to work with students on their projects linked to information, teaching teens information literacy, providing booktalks to classes and small groups, providing tours and card sign ups for the public library, homework help, sites/workshops, pathfinders for information teens need on assignments, instruction in the use of technology, and a whole host of other services. Can you as a teacher afford to have no communication with or an enemy in the library?

Keeping Up

Five Journals explore the topic of school and public library cooperation at varying intervals:

- School Library Journal
- VOYA
- Teacher Librarian
- Knowledge Quest
- Library Media Connection

A Google search using “school library and public library cooperation” as key terms will yield many links to documents with procedures and standards for cooperation among the public and school libraries. Many guidelines are included for full-service cooperative ventures to special joint programs serving their common patrons.

Spotlight: School and Public Library Cooperation

Three divisions of the American Library Association — ALSC, AASL, and YALSA — formed a joint task force in 2004 to investigate local and national models of school/public library cooperative activities. A gateway page of links to their findings and bibliographies that list articles, books, and websites about the subject are available on the web at <http://www.ala.org/ala/mgrps/divs/yalsa/profdev/schoolpublic.cfm>

Thought Questions

- 1) What cooperative activities exist between your local public and school libraries that focus on teenagers? How could these activities be improved?
- 2) What types of activities are likely to attract more teenagers to both school and public libraries?
- 3) Why can the public library usually stock more diverse and controversial YA novels than schools can? What is in loco parentis and how does it affect schools and school libraries?

Section II

Entering the Teen World of Literacy

The heart of this quick guide is an introduction into the mainstream of both literature and multimedia designed for the teen years. The challenge for the reader is to build a repertoire that spans the entire world of teens as a group. Here you will find friends, strangers, the tame, the outlandish, the easy, the difficult, and most anything that is both recognizable and surprising at the same time. Perhaps this is the definition of the teenage animal: never predictable, always surprising, lovable yet difficult. Enjoy.

Part A: Teen Pop Culture.....	24
Part B: Surrounding Teens with Literature	56
Part C: High Culture for Teens.....	102

Graphic Novels and Manga

Some would define a graphic novel as simply a more ambitious comic book. That definition, however, misses one major component. A comic book is most often the creation of a creative group of people who carry a storyline forward based on a formula and have an agreed upon character profile. At times these comic books are strung together in sequential episodes to tell a cohesive story of that character. The character and storyline belong to the publishing enterprise that publishes the novel. A more sophisticated graphic novel is usually the work of one writer who develops the character and the storyline and produces the written storyline much as a conventional writer would develop a story. The difference between novels and graphic novels is that in graphic novels, story and character development is shared with the reader in a graphic format similar to the storyboard format used for writing and illustrating the traditional comic book as opposed to just the use of words in novels.

The range of graphic novel subjects span from superhero to high school romance to biography. Storytelling with pictorial storyboards creates an obvious connection to movies (in Japan these animated movies are termed Anime). Titles that have become popular include "The Road to Perdition," "The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen," and "The X-Men."

Manga, which has its origins in Japan and now is present across Asia and into the United States, is a very popular sub-genre. Generally it has its own conventions of presentation: black and white, smaller volume size, large-eyed characters, and reads from back to front. Among the popular early titles in the Manga body of work are: "Cowboy Behop," "Love Hina," "Akira," and "Sailor Moon." Manga has become a huge market for teens. Acquaint yourself with Manga offerings at www.manga.com; the home site for Manga.com. Just as with other literature forms, Manga has developed beyond the escapist entertainment. In Japan and other parts of Asia, "manga" have become a powerful and effective medium to educate readers in regard to topics such as environmental conservation and food safety.

Graphic novels originating in Asia likely encompass basic mores and stereotypes that would not be accepted if the titles were published in the United States. While the titles and cover pictures may look innocent enough, some have very graphic content. The books published in Japan do, generally, have an age rating on the books—a system similar to the movie ratings in the states. Elizabeth Figa, an instructor at the University of North Texas, has assembled a superb list of links titled Graphic Novels and Comics Websites at courses.unt.edu/efiga/GraphicNovels/GraphicNovelsAndComicsWebsites.htm.

More and more frequently American publishers are giving readers titles with the "graphic" presentation made popular by the Manga titles. In 2007, Gene Luen Yang's graphic novel, American Born Chinese, became the first graphic novel to be awarded the Michael L. Printz Award and the first graphic novel to be nominated for a National Book Award.

Since 2007, the YALSA (Young Adult Library Services Association), a division of the ALA, has developed a list of "Top 10 Great Graphic Novels for Teens." In addition to the Top 10 list, the YALSA also makes the list of nominated titles available. The current and past lists may be accessed on the ALA website at: www.ala.org/yalsa/ggnt. The 2011 list included a book based on a "true tragedy" involving gang activity, Yummy: The Last Days of a Southside Shorty by G. Neri and Randy Duburke, and Native American Trickster tales from Trickster: Native American Tales: A Graphic Collection edited by Matt Dembicki.

Download a full-color guide, Using Graphic Novels with Children and Teens - Scholastic publishers from: www2.scholastic.com/content/collateral_resources/pdf/g/Scholastic_GraphixPages01.pdf

Graphic Novels—A Short List

- Smile by Raina Telgemeier
- The Photographer: Into War-Torn Afghanistan with Doctors Without Borders by Emmanuel Guibert
- Crossing Midnight by Mike Carey and Jim Fern
- Cross Game V. 1. by Mitsuru Adachi
- Hikaru No Go, Volume I by Yumi
- The Zabime Sisters by Aristophane
- Night Fisher by R. Kikuo Johnson
- Pyongyang: A Journey in North Korea by Guy Delisle (non-fiction)
- Cat Burglar Black by Richard Sala
- B.B. Wolf and the Three LPs by JD Arnold and Richard Koslowski
- Hereville: How Mirka Got Her Sword by Barry Deutsch
- Teen Titans: A Kid's Game by Geoff Johns
- The Unwritten: Tommy Taylor and the Bogus Identity by Mike Carey and Peter Gross
- Cirque du Freak, v.1 by Darren Shan and Takahiro Arai
- Tokyo Babylon by Clamp

Popular Series—Manga and Graphic Novels

- Emily Edison by David Hopkins and Brock Rzy
- Cirque du Freak, v.1 by Darren Shan and Takahiro Arai
- Sand Chronicles by Hinako Ashihara
- Young Avengers by Allen Heinberg, Jim Cheung, and others.

The Cooperative Children's Book Center (CCBC) has a page dedicated to Graphic Novels. Check out all the resources listed online at: www.education.wisc.edu/ccbc/books/graphicnovels.asp

Spotlight on Gene Luen Yang

In 1986, Art Spiegelman's account of his father's survival of the Holocaust, Maus, A Survivor's Tale, won wide acclaim, but it took two decades before graphic novels began to earn legitimacy among publishers. In 2006, Gene Luen Yang brought forth his book, American Born Chinese. Yang examines racial stereotypes and coming of age as a Chinese in America. Three years later, in 2009, Yang, along with Derek Kirk Kim (Same Difference and Other Stories), created a collection of three stories—all presented graphically in The Eternal Smile: Three Stories. "Duncan's Kingdom" is a somewhat traditional quest to avenge a king's murder and earn the right to marry the princess. "Grandpa Greenbax and the Eternal Smile" has a frog contemplating his one wish—but perhaps decides that being a frog may not be so bad after all. In the final story, "Urgent Request," Janet's life becomes irrevocably changed after she receives an email from a Nigerian prince, a request seeking Janet's help. Find out more about Gene Luen Yang and his books on his website at: www.humblecomics.com.

Don't miss popular artist/author David Small's autobiography, Stitches: A Memoir. It is a compelling story of a difficult childhood and triumph in the adult world.

Thought Question

Stephen Krashen extolls the benefits of "voluntary free reading" including graphic novels and comics. Read "Free Reading" by Stephen Krashen at www.schoollibraryjournal.com/article/CA6367048.html and "The 'Decline' of Reading in America, Poverty and Access to Books, and the use of Comics in Encouraging Reading" on Krashen's website at www.sdkrashen.com/articles/decline_of_reading/all.html. Do you agree with Krashen? Why or why not?

Comic Books — Saving the World

Superheroes: A History¹

Superheroes burst into the American publishing world in June 1938 with Superman debuting in Action Comics #1. Inspired by two teenaged boys, writer Jerry Siegel and artist Joe Shuster, Superman went on to define the superhero genre. Not surprisingly, other super crime fighters appeared on the scene in 1939, including Batman and his sidekick Robin, Captain Marvel, and Sub-Mariner.

World War II provided the catalyst for the Golden Age of comics. America had taken on the role of the world's guardian, upholding the guiding principles of "truth, justice, and the American way." With patriotism high, Captain America and other super crime fighters battling the many injustices and evils of the world became extremely popular. This age produced many superheroes and imitations of these characters that lasted until the end of the 1940s. After the war, the demands for this genre of comic books faded and were replaced with other storylines—such as crime, westerns, and horror.

Following World War II comic books fell victim to an all-out assault from psychiatrists, parents, and law enforcement officers. Comic books were being burned in the hopes of fending off juvenile delinquency. Dr. Fredric Wertham, a prominent psychiatrist, revealed his conclusions of a two-year study involving comic books in a paper titled Seduction of the Innocent. He stated that comics' influence on youth was "undermining morals, glorifying violence, and were 'sexually aggressive in an abnormal way.'" This paper was published in 1954, the same year the Senate Subcommittee on the Judiciary held a hearing on comics. The self-regulating Comics Code Authority was established by the industry that same year. The publishers formed the Comics Magazine Association of America, voluntarily abiding by the code prohibiting "violence, explicit sex, gratuitous gore and the triumph of evil or antisocial behavior" from their pages. This change in attitude contributed to bringing about the Silver Age of superhero comics.

The Silver Age brought back some heroes that had faded in the '50s (e.g. Flash Gordon, Green Lantern, and the Sub-Mariner), as well as introduced new characters, such as Spider-Man and the Fantastic Four. These new characters of Marvel's fostered a growing teenage and college audience by not only dealing with the 'bad guys,' but also with universally inward dilemmas. These characters mirrored the struggles of the youth of the '60s, living in a tumultuous time with the Kennedy and King assassinations, Vietnam, and campus riots.

The two big publishing houses, Marvel and DC, were pretty much the only game in town during the 1970s as far as superheroes and adventure were concerned. Marvel's X-Men series and spin-offs were enjoying a large following. Marvel celebrated 20 years of publishing under that name and held 60% of the comics market. DC, on the other hand, accounted for 35% of comic sales but continued to attempt new ideas. In the '80s the success of the Superman and Batman movies secured DC's position in the marketplace.

The last two decades have seen familiar characters revamped only to return to their familiar selves. The future of superheroes and comics in general will no doubt evolve. The success of movies involving comic heroes, such as Spider-Man, has led to more superhero movies with varying degrees of success. These include The Incredible Hulk, Catwoman, Hellboy, Fantastic Four, and Batman. Whatever the trend, both teachers and librarians realize that the comics attract readers and contribute to literacy in general. Teens will help us select the best if we are interested enough to ask.

¹ Acknowledgement for this page given to a graduate student of San José State University.

Timeline of Superheroes

Golden Age (1938–1949)

- Superman (1938)
- Arrow (1938)
- Batman (1939)
- Sub-Mariner (1939)
- Shock Gibson (1939)
- Captain Marvel (1939)
- Daredevil (1940)
- Masked Marvel (1940)
- Wonder Woman (1941)
- Captain America (1941)

Silver Age (1956–1970)

- Flash (1956)*
- Green Lantern (1959)*
- Supergirl (1959)
- Justice League of America (1960)*
- Fantastic Four (1961)
- Spider-Man (1962)
- Mighty Thor (1962)
- Incredible Hulk (1962)
- Sub Mariner (1962)*
- X-Men (1963)
- Daredevil 2 (1964)
- Captain America (1964)*

Bronze Age (1970–Present)

- Conan the Barbarian (1970)
- Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles (1984)
- Watchmen (1986)
- X-Force (1991) which became X-Static (2002)
- Rising Stars (2004)
- Anya Corazon (2004)
- Firebirds (2004)
- Incredibles (2004)
- Majestic (2005)

* This comic series reintroduced in the year listed.

Spotlight: Spider-Man

Spider-Man, created by Stan Lee of Timely Comics (later known as Marvel), debuted in 1962 in the final issue of Amazing Fantasy #15. Although Martin Goodman, then publisher of Marvel Comics, to forget Lee's ideas for a spider-inspired character, Goodman tested the waters with a title that was scheduled for cancellation. Although Amazing Fantasy had been experiencing poor sales, issue 15 was a big seller. Deciding Spider-Man was the reason for issue 15's success, Spidey lived to sling another web, coming out in a comic book series bearing his name in 1963.

Spider-Man's appeal can be attributed to his complexity. Stan Lee wanted to break out of the proven but overused superhero formula by creating an angst-ridden, teenaged character who wasn't superhuman but in many ways one of us: "your friendly neighborhood Spider-Man." Being the first teenaged superhero that wasn't just an adult superhero's sidekick, Spider-Man was extremely popular with teens and young adults. The same self-doubt and frustrations he experienced reflected the turbulent times the youth of this country experienced in the '60s and still holds true today. Spider-Man has been made into three movies (a fourth in the works) and even a Broadway musical.

Keeping Up

- marvel.com
- www.dccomics.com
- www.darkhorse.com
- www.imagecomics.com
- Book: Goulart, Ron. Comic Book Encyclopedia: The Ultimate Guide to Characters, Graphic Novels, Writers, and Artists in the Comic Book Universe. Harper Entertainment, 2004

Thought Questions

- 1) Will comic books ever gain respectability among the literary world?
- 2) Why do some superheroes (Superman, Batman, etc.) still thrive almost seventy years later?
- 3) In what way do the problems that current superheroes face parallel those of today's teens?

Unstoppable Anime

By Sarah Couri

There's an Anime invasion just about everywhere—at movie theaters, video rental stores, and in the library. While the most enthusiastic otaku (otaku means mega-fan) might feel right at home, it can be a little overwhelming to the uninitiated. When most people use the term Anime, they tend to think of what it looks like: cartoon characters with crazily colored hair and big, big eyes. The definition is a little simpler than that: Anime is any animated feature that is created in Japan. It can be made for television, for theatrical release, or for direct-to-video; as long as it's animated and made in Japan, it's Anime. (If you are in Japan, Anime simply means any animated feature regardless of its origin.) While this is a valid definition, however, it's not entirely useful; this description includes a lot of material. It doesn't help with finding Anime for the library or with planning Anime-related programs for all your otakus.

Anime is complicated for a number of reasons. The sheer volume of material available is rather intimidating. Osamu Tezuka's Astro Boy is often considered a source for most modern Anime, and it was made in the 1960s¹. With over 40 years of material to choose from—and so many opinions on what's the best, and so many versions of titles—it can be a little alarming. There are titles that are syndicated TV shows; Cowboy Bebop for example. Cowboy Bebop the movie was also released theatrically in Japan and throughout the world. Is it better to start at the beginning and watch all the episodes of the show? Or can you just dive into the movie? When picking titles for library collections, these doubts can seem impossible to resolve, and familiarity with every title is out of the question.

The various audiences Anime is made for compounds the complications. Just because something's animated doesn't mean it's only for kids. There are many titles that are either inappropriate for kids, or, at the very least, are uninteresting to them thematically. Of course there are a number of titles that are specifically made for children and teenagers, but knowing which is which can be a challenge. Fortunately, it can be very easy to find thoughtful online reviews. Reading these reviews can give you a good sense of what is good and what titles are appropriate for which audience. Having so many fans can be a real advantage!

Interest in Anime has only grown over the years. However, it is difficult to pinpoint exactly when Anime became bestselling entertainment. It hit mainstream by the time Dragonball Z was aired on Cartoon Network; for many people, this was the first time they were exposed to Anime. Now, in addition to Cartoon Network's Toonami and Adult Swim programming incorporating many Anime titles, there's also an Anime Network.

The Anime trend does not seem to be disappearing. Many of the titles coming from Japan have blurred format lines—they are comic books and TV shows, card games, action figures, video games, and other collectible items. With such flexible marketing and income options, it's a viable market that shows no sign of slowing. Anime is not simply a consumerist craze, however; Anime artists are continually expanding the creative possibilities of animated storytelling in unique and marvelous ways, unrealized by other artists.

So how can you decide what is best to have available? As we said before, talk to teens in your library. They will help you wade through the best, and worst, of this overwhelming genre.

¹ Poitras, Gilles. "What is Anime?" The Librarian's Guide to Anime and Manga. 18 June 2003. www.koyagi.com/Libguide.html

Anime Online and in Print

Finding reviews, or just keeping up with the latest news, is important and challenging! Here are some places to start:

- Anime Essentials by Gilles Poitras (2000)
- Anime Studio Debut 7 by Smith Micro Software Inc. Anime creation software for Windows and Mac
- www.animenfo.com
- www.animeondvd.com
- www.animenewsnetwork.com
- www.anipike.com
- www.rightstuf.com
- www.theanimereview.com
- www.theanime.org
- www.animeresearch.com/books.html
- "The Anime-ted Library" by Kat Kan and Kristen Fletcher Spear. Article in VOYA (April 2005). Available online at: pdfs.voya.com/VO/YA2/VOYA200504AnimetedLibrary.pdf
- Halsall, Jane. Visual Media for Teens: Creating and Using a Teen-Centered Film Collection. Libraries Unlimited, 2009.
- For teens wanting to create anime, suggest the software: Anime Studio and the guide: Anime Studio, the Official Guide. Course Technology, 2008.
- McCarthy, Helen. 500 Essential Anime Movies: the Essential Guide. Collins Design, 2009.

Caution

Be sure to contact distributors if you are going to show anime at the library. Getting permission is not usually tough, but it is important.

Touchstone Titles

- Akira (Geneon)
- Dragonball Z (Funimation)
- Fruits Basket (Funimation)
- Fushigi Yugi (Geneon)
- Initial D (Tokyopop)
- Inu-Yasha (VIZ)
- Mobile Suit Gundam Seed (Bandai)
- Marmalade Boy (Tokyopop)
- Nausicaa: Valley of the Wind (Buena Vista)
- Neon Genesis Evangelion (AD Vision)
- Ranma (VIZ)
- Spirited Away (Buena Vista)
- Vision of Escaflowne (Bandai)

Thought Questions

- 1) Hold a focus group in your classroom or library with teens interested in Anime. Why are they interested and how do they select the best from the enormous amount available?
- 2) Are there Anime groups or conventions in your local area? Have you considered attending one?

Cult Movies

By Rebecca Brodegard

Cult movies have been around since around the 1950s. They exploded when videotapes appeared and made movies from the theater readily accessible to people's homes. So, what are cult movies? "Cult movies are usually strange, quirky, offbeat, eccentric, oddball, or surreal, with outrageous and cartoony characters or plots, garish sets and they are often considered controversial. They elicit a fiery passion in devoted fans, and may cause cultists to enthusiastically champion these films, leading to audience participation and repetitive viewings and showings."¹ Cult movies often don't do well in the theaters, but they explode in video sales. There is usually a group of people that group together and watch a movie together, dress up like the characters, and incorporate quotes from the movie into their daily vocabulary. Any kind of movie can be a cult movie—comedies, romances, horror, Sci-Fi, anything. Most of them are "B" movies, movies made with little budget and fall in the shadow of the A-listers.

Although there were some cult movies around the 1950s and 1960s, the biggest one, and the one that had the most impact, came in 1967—The Rocky Horror Picture Show. The plot was crazy and new, with rock 'n' roll musical numbers scattered throughout. People flocked to it. Even today theaters show late-night showings of the movie with cult fans filling the seats. It is a cult classic that made the genre come alive.

Since then, more and more movies have achieved the fame and cult following that Rocky Horror Picture Show achieved. Today, it could be contested that the description of cult movies has changed a bit. They can be successful in the theater, gaining more and more followers, and have a huge video/DVD release.

One of the greatest cult classic movies of today is Star Wars. When Star Wars first appeared in 1979, it was a modest success. With the two sequels, Empire Strikes Back and Return of the Jedi, Star Wars was launched into a huge success. The following grew and grew. When George Lucas decided to do the "prequels," every Star Wars fan cheered. People lined up at theaters for months before the first showing, just to say they were the first to see the "new" Star Wars. People dressed in costumes, and even acted out scenes from the original three movies, to pass time in line. These are definitely signs of a cult classic.

The cult movie has been around a long time and has given us a rich history of movies to watch, follow, and parody. As long as fans create a loyal following to any movie, cult movies are here to stay.

¹ www.rockyhorror.it/webring/cultring.html

Some of the Major Cult Classics

- The Rocky Horror Picture Show
- Star Wars (and all sequels and prequels)
- The Texas Chainsaw Massacre
- Napoleon Dynamite
- Pee-Wee's Big Adventure
- Night of the Living Dead
- UHF
- This Is Spinal Tap
- The Princess Bride
- Labyrinth
- Monty Python and the Holy Grail
- Heathers
- Scarface
- The Matrix
- Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory
- American Pie (and sequels)
- Caddyshack
- Rushmore
- Pulp Fiction
- Gone With The Wind
- The Big Lebowski
- Indiana Jones (all three older movies)
- The Breakfast Club
- Friday
- Half Baked
- Office Space
- Bruce Lee movies

□ Entertainment Weekly published their list of “Top 50 Cult Movies” in their May 23, 2003 issue. It is available online at www.filmsite.org/cultfilmsew.html

Spotlight: Frank Miller

Frank Miller is a comic book author and artist who Hollywood has discovered. The films based on his books retain his graphic artistry. The subject matter has been diverse—from superheroes to modern-day saints and sinners to historical fiction. The first Frank Miller film to gain a large buzz among teens was Sin City in 2005. Violent and intense with over-the-top characters, the cinematography of the movie was beautiful and edgy, using both black and white, and color. In 2007 when 300 was released, Miller’s movies were no longer a secret, building word of mouth among teens. Groups of teens made 300 a mandatory viewing, viewing it on the opening weekend, and making it the talk of teens the following Monday. In the tradition of Sin City, 300 was violent and intense but beautifully filmed. The Spirit appeared in late 2008. It was Miller’s dark look at superheroes, using the same black and white/color film technique. Look for more Sin City in the future.

Keeping Up

- www.hollywoodteenmovies.com
- sepnet.com/rcramer/index.htm
- Keep your eyes on the theaters and magazines. What are the top DVD sales? What are people quoting? What has a loyal fan base? What are comedians making fun of?

Thought Questions

- 1) What are the characteristics of a cult movie?
- 2) How can teachers and librarians capitalize on the intense interest in a cult movie to move teens in other interesting or instructional experiences?
- 3) Have relatively unknown stars of cult movies gone on to achieve success as actors and actresses?

Video Games

By Stephanie Espinoza

Video games have offered exciting and immersive worlds to get lost in for over half a century. Yet with their technology constantly improving and surprising us, they still feel shiny and new.

Video games date back to the 1950s and '60s, with American physicist William Higinbotham's Tennis for Two in 1958 (a two-player tennis game displayed on a 5-inch oscilloscope display) and MIT graduate students' Spacewar! in 1962.

The 1970s saw the rise of coin-operated arcade games. The table tennis game PONG appeared in American arcades in 1972 to overwhelming success, while a game designed to appeal to women and younger gamers—Pac-Man—appeared in Japan in 1979 and in the U.S. the following year. The success of PONG in the arcade led to the creation of a home version. Soon the idea of programmable gaming consoles took off so that consumers could buy “chips” to get new video games to play at home instead of having to purchase entirely new, and expensive, home consoles.

It was during this period that video game giants such as Atari (the company behind PONG), Nintendo (Japan's perpetual powerhouse), and Sega got their start. Then in 1985, Nintendo brought its first home gaming console to America, dubbing it the Nintendo Entertainment System (NES) and releasing it with the game Super Mario Bros—a sequel to the Mario Bros. arcade hit. The popularity of Mario, his brother Luigi, and the game's theme of princess rescues continue to this day. Despite subsequent releases of consoles by Sega and Atari in the 1980s and 1990s, neither company has modern video game consoles.

Handheld gaming has survived the test of time, evolving from the 1989 Nintendo Game Boy (bundled with the puzzle game Tetris) to the 2004 Nintendo DS (a touchscreen console with two screens) that continues to gain new enhancements including 3-D gameplay in 2011. The electronics corporation Sony also released a handheld console in 2005, the PlayStation Portable (PSP), the first to play games and even movies on optical discs called UMDs.

But it was back in 1994 that Sony first began its massive dent in the video game market with its release of the CD-ROM PlayStation home console. Because CDs could store much more information than cartridges (which Nintendo continued to use for its Nintendo 64 console in 1996), video game graphics had now reached an entirely new level. This decade of video game history also brought about controversy regarding graphic game violence and its effect on young people. The Entertainment Software Rating Board was created in 1994 to provide ratings for games: Early childhood (EO), Everyone (E), Everyone 10 and up (E10+), Teen (T), Mature (M) and Adults Only (AO). Since there are no laws banning specific games, these ratings serve primarily as parental advisories.

In 2000, the PlayStation 2 was released, and would become the best-selling home console as of 2009. Nintendo also released a disc-playing console, the GameCube, in 2001, which received only moderate success. But that year, yet another video game giant was growing. Microsoft came out with the Xbox in 2001, a console featuring superior graphics, an online gaming service, and the immediately popular science fiction game series, Halo. It was also around this time that online games expanded beyond the late '90s releases of fantasy role playing games Ultima Online (1997) and EverQuest (1999) to the massive multiplayer online role-playing game World of Warcraft in 2004, which currently has over 11 million players.

Sony released its new Xbox 360 in 2005 and was immediately followed the next year by Sony's PlayStation 3 (which can also play DVD and Blu-Ray discs) and Nintendo's newest phenomenon: the Wii. With a wireless remote controller and motion-detecting device, the Wii introduced physical movement to games, allowing for more immersive environments. With the return of Nintendo classics such as Mario games and The Legend of Zelda series and the introduction of sports and action games where players' motions are tracked to control the motion of their digital counterparts, the Wii has proven to be fun for all ages. Microsoft took the idea of movement and developed the Kinect, a console that connects to the Xbox 360 and turns a person into a controller. It tracks a person's movement and translates it to the game. No controller required.

While consoles and games may be expensive for libraries to purchase, a donated system that hasn't quite yet become obsolete, such as the PlayStation 2, may be a beneficial tool for gaming programs such as Rock Band tournaments or just after-school free play. Computer games are another avenue to explore for the computers that a library already has. At the very least, lists of links to online games and gaming websites can be made available for teens, and video game magazines such as GamePro and Electronic Gaming Monthly can be easily stocked.

Popular Titles

1980s

Donkey Kong*
Pac-Man*
Super Mario Bros.*
Tetris*

1990s

Doom*
Final Fantasy*
Legend of Zelda*
Mario Kart*
Metroid*
Mortal Kombat*
Prince of Persia*
SimCity*
Sonic the Hedgehog*
Street Fighter II*
Super Mario 64*
Dance Dance Revolution

2000–Now

DragonBall Z
Final Fantasy XI online
Grand Theft Auto (and sequels)
Halo series
The Sims (and sequels)
WarCraft (and sequels)
Tony Hawk (any version)
Splinter Cell (and sequels)
Madden NFL (any)
Guitar Hero
Metal Gear series
Bioshock series
Portal
Katamari Damacy
Kingdom Hearts
Wii Fit
Batman: Arkham City

* indicates that newer versions of this game are popular today.

Caution: The list of today's popular games can go out of date very quickly. Look to Keeping Up for ways to stay up-to-date on popular games.

Spotlight: World of WarCraft

World of WarCraft is a popular game that allows players to enter into a fantasy world and control individuals similar to their favorite Lord of the Rings characters. This game is played online, and users pay a monthly fee to participate. Each player customizes the appearance of his human, elf, dwarf, gnome, orc, troll or other creature, and then he logs into the world. A user plays the game with others in his real world time zone. In the game, players must follow specific directions, learn to work as a team with other players, and enjoy challenging quests that necessitate strategy formulation. Each time a player completes a quest, he gains rewards that enable him to participate in increasingly difficult quests. Players can also communicate with each other. For example, if they hit "enter", and then type "/g", they can type a message to the group of people with whom they are participating in challenges. If they type other codes, they can type messages to individuals or other sets of people. Players also enjoy special computer commands that allow them to do such things as pretend to fall asleep. This gives the players in the group a good laugh. World of WarCraft involves great strategy and is a fun, though addictive, entertainment source.

Keeping Up

Magazines:

- Game Pro
- Electronic Gaming
- Game Informer
- PC Gamer

Websites:

- EB Games: www.ebgames.com/default.aspx
- GameSpot: www.gamespot.com
- Nintendo: www.nintendo.com
- PlayStation: us.playstation.com
- X-Box: www.xbox.com
- Game Informer: gameinformer.com
- CVG: www.computerandvideogames.com
- www.ign.com

Thought Questions

- 1) Interview a player of Halo (or sequels) and try to understand the motivation behind addiction to these and other games.
- 2) What redeeming qualities do the addicted claim for this activity?

Teens Online

It is possible that when a network of computers accessible globally was first conceived in the early sixties, the impact of the World Wide Web could not have been imagined. After years of scientific development, the World Wide Web became a reality in 1991. The use of the web grew throughout the nineties and the 21st century. Internet usage continues to grow in the United States, although the rate of growth has slowed. Teens are among the many users of the Internet. Studies indicate that 93% of teens are online¹.

Teens use the Internet in a variety of ways: communication, entertainment, and research. Teens are frequent users of social networking sites such Facebook. 73% of teens were on a social networking site as of 2009. Social networking sites allow teens to ‘hangout’ with friends through chatting, sharing sites, posting on walls, and playing games. Teens still engage in other online activities during that time—watching videos, listening to music, sending email, or chatting. The online environment allows teens to multi-task, communicating with several friends at once while participating in other online activities.

Teens Online
Daily Access	93%
Visit entertainment sites	81%
Visit Social Networking Sites	65%
Read News; Get Information On Current Events	63%
Instant Message with Friends	60%
Watch videos (i.e. YouTube)	57%
Search for College Information	55%
Shop online	38%
Health Information	28%
Blog, Keep online journal	27%
Downloaded a podcast	19%
Visit Chat Room	18%
Maintain a website	11%

Another primary use of the online environment is entertainment. Even after the changing face of file-sharing, a majority of online teens still download music and videos, although they frequently do so in a legal manner, and an increasingly common practice will be to watch music and videos via a streaming service such as YouTube or Hulu. This is particularly true of videos that have gone ‘viral’ and receive a large number of hits.

There are additional forms of entertainment. Online gaming remains a popular activity, both interactive role-playing games and one-player video games. Teens still surf the web, using tools such as Tumblr and Stumbleupon to discover new content. And the favorite teen pastime of shopping? It’s here too. Teens use the Internet to “window shop” for everything, from sports equipment to prom dresses. They also participate in creating content for the Internet. While the number of teens participating in blogging is dropping off, they still create and post videos and art, write fan fiction, and create music mash-ups. In 2007, 57% of teens reported creating content for the web.

Besides entertainment, teens have not overlooked the role of the Internet in locating information. A majority of teens rely on the Internet to help with schoolwork, occasionally completing online assignments. We are beginning to see more and more virtual schooling. In Florida, the statewide virtual school served more than 20,000 secondary students. The number of virtual students among teens is still relatively small, but the use of the Internet for information continues to increase in importance.

The number of teens online had steadily increased as more options become available to teens—networked homes, schools, and public spaces as well as smart phones that allow them to access the Internet while “mobile.” 21% of teens who cannot otherwise go online report using their mobile phone to access the Internet. A quarter of all teens use their phone to access social networking sites. This is a growing segment of access, and mobile access to the Internet will continue to increase.

For those working with teens, awareness and understanding of the digital worlds of teens is a fundamental need. Exploring the communities and tools provides insight beyond the popular media constructions of the multitasking teen that participates daily in cyberbullying and sexting. While these activities occur, they are not necessarily as widespread as popular media would lead us to believe. Negotiating the fine line between invading the world of the teen and providing authentic and necessary service can be successfully done if one educates one's self about a teen's digital world. The difficulty is that this world is ever changing.

Networking with other professionals who work with teens can help maintain an awareness of the digital world of teens. What are the web sites teens are using? What are the online tools that can help a professional reach teens? What innovations are there in youth services?

Fortunately the same digital world occupied by teens is also occupied by working teen advocates who blog, tweet, build wikis, and Facebook (or MySpace) to share ideas, make connections, and keep current on the online world of teens.

Library services for teens should acknowledge the disparate elements of the digital world. Academically provide research support, homework help, and building an "answer center"—a virtual library. Socially use the networking tools to connect with teens. And in a programming sense, use the digital world to connect teens to the brick and mortar building and sponsor fan fiction writing groups, gaming tournaments, or YouTube film festivals.

Websites for Teens

Teen Space @ the Internet Public Library: A web portal for teens with links in several categories including the Arts, College and Careers, Sports, Style, and Money Matters: ipl.si.umich.edu/div/teen/

General Sites: Places to go for fun, news, games, advice, etc.

www.gurl.com
www.smartgirl.org
www.cyberteens.com
www.spankmag.com

Advice: There are a number of places online where teens can go for advice and information:

www.teencentral.net
www.sxetc.org

College and Careers: Information to help teens prepare for life after high school is readily available online, including college and scholarship searches:

fastweb.monster.com
www.finaid.org
nces.ed.gov/ipeds/cool/index.asp
www.collegeboard.com

Arts and Entertainment: Sites to visit for both recreational and informational needs.

Movies

www.imdb.com
www.rottentomatoes.com

Music

www.artistdirect.com
www.itunes.com

Blogging

www.tumblr.com
www.blogger.com

Fashion

www.alloy.com
www.delias.com

Spotlight: Web 2.0 Tools

Facebook/MySpace: While SNS sites have not been as all consuming to teens as they were 3 years ago, they are still a fundamental part of their online experiences. Libraries can create MySpace and Facebook profiles to share news and make connections with teens

Nings: A more focused SNS. Nerdfighters (nerdfighters.ning.com) is an example of how a ning can work to bring teens together.

Twitter: While indications are that Teens aren't flocking to Twitter, librarians can post updates on Twitter, widgets on websites that automatically update with new posts, so it can be effective even if teens aren't following the library.

YouTube: Libraries can create a channel for teens to create and share videos such as book trailers, library programming, etc.

Jing/Screencasting: Use these tools to make visual instructions for teens using your library.

Thought Questions

- 1) What is the role of the Internet in the library?
- 2) How can a library authentically address security and privacy concerns?
- 3) How can a library use social networking and Web 2.0 tools to connect with teens?

Horror Movies

By Rebecca Brodegard

The history of the horror film dates back to just before the turn of the twentieth century. The first horror film, Le Manoir du Diable, directed by Georges Melies, was also the first vampire movie. Lasting only two minutes, audiences were instantly captured and the horror movie phenomenon was born. After the turn of the twentieth century, in the early 1900s, horror movies grew in number in Europe. Hollywood picked up this genre in the 1930s and ran with it. Universal Studios created gothic-themed movies such as Dracula, Frankenstein (both 1931) and The Mummy (1932).

During the 1950s, with the advent of the nuclear age and the space race, the tone of horror films shifted away from the gothic towards the modern. Aliens, and their threats of world domination, were now the feared creatures along with mutated people, plants, and insects. Two of the more popular films of this period were The Thing From Another World (1951) and Invasion of the Body Snatchers (1956). The late 1950s saw the advent of the gory horror films. Technology had changed, so filmmakers used this to their advantage to add blood and gore into their movies.

The late 1960s and early 1970s saw a move towards the occult and supernatural. The cost of making the films increased, but some of the greatest and most famous horror movies were created at this time. Some films of note during this era were Rosemary's Baby, The Exorcist, and The Omen. The '60s also ring of Alfred Hitchcock, a master at film that always left an unpleasant taste in your mouth. His film Psycho left everyone wary of motels and showers.

The 1980s horror films began the trend of helpless teens being chased by supernatural human killers. The first, and maybe most notable, of these films was Halloween, followed by Friday the 13th and Nightmare on Elm Street.

In the 1990s and into the new millennium, horror films continued their slash-like nature with films like I Know What You Did Last Summer and Jeepers Creepers. Some movies were also made to put the "scare" back into the horror film without the gore. Such films included The Sixth Sense, The Others, and The Blair Witch Project. Also in the '90s there were the parodies on scary movies, such as the movie Scary Movie, a bawdy blending of parodies of the best in horror films.

Today, horror movies are still alive and well. A lot of the movies to come out early in the millennium borrowed from horror movies of the past, like Halloween and the Freddy and Jason movies from the 1980s. There are still horror films that relish on the gore, but there are plenty of scary movies that still depend on ghosts or other supernatural phenomenon to induce a scare. Horror is not going away, and its popularity with teenagers continues to grow.

Popular Horror Films

1970s

Carrie
The Exorcist
Alien
Jaws

1980s

The Texas Chain Saw Massacre
Halloween
Nightmare on Elm Street
Poltergeist
The Shining
Friday the 13th
Hellraiser
Pet Cemetary
Return of the Living Dead

1990s

Scream (and sequels)
I Know What You Did Last Summer
Blair Witch Project
Silence of the Lambs
The Sixth Sense
Event Horizon
Final Destination (and sequels)

2000–Now

The Ring (and sequel)
Halloween–Resurrection
Final Destination
Jeepers Creepers
Freddy vs. Jason
The Amityville Horror
The Omen
Disturbia
28 Days Later (& sequel 28 Weeks Later)
I Know Who Killed Me
Hellboy, Hellboy 2
Prom Night
Twilight series
Terminator Salvation
Predators
Awake
Super 8

Spotlight: Stephen King

Stephen King was born in 1947 in Portland, Maine. Although his family moved a lot, they eventually returned to Maine, where he stayed into adulthood. He always had an interest in writing. He went to the University of Maine, where he wrote a weekly column for the campus newspaper. He made his first professional short story sale in 1967 (“The Glass Floor”). He graduated in English in 1970 and was married in 1971. In 1973 Doubleday & Co. accepted his novel Carrie, and you can say the rest is history. Carrie made the School Library Journal’s list of books in 1975; that same year it was released as a movie. The movie catapulted King’s name into households across the United States. Some of his famous novels include The Shining (1974), It (1986), Misery (1987), Dolores Claiborne (1992), The Girl Who Loved Tom Gordon (1999), The Green Mile (2000), The Cell (2006), Lisey’s Story (2006), Cell (2007), Just After Sunset (2008), and many, many more. In addition, over 51 of his novels and short stories have been made into movies or TV movies, and that number continues to grow. Stephen King is a prolific writer that has broadened horror fiction’s readership and horror movies to extreme proportions.

Official Website: www.stephenking.com

Keeping Up

Websites:

- www.upcominghorrormovies.com
- www.horror.com
- www.allhorrorfilms.com
- buried.com

Thought Questions

- 1) What attracts teens to horror movies?
- 2) Does the watching of horror movies (filled with gore, etc.) negatively contribute to teen development?
- 3) Are most teens mature enough to realize that horror movies are just that — movies?

Teen Movies

A History

By Rebecca Brodegard

As long as movies have been around, teenagers have been crowded in the audience. Movies had a very humble beginning. In the early 1900s, penny arcades had machines called kinetoscopes, which, for a penny, showed a short film. These short films grew in length, and as a result, the arcade owners developed nickelodeons. They set out chairs and charged a nickel to view these films. Parents believed that this activity was a crude morality destroyer, but that didn't stop the kids. As movies grew, teenagers began attending the most frequently with their friends, and movies began to be a part of the dating scene. Movies also began to be the model for how teenagers wanted to live. Teenage girls sought for the perfect skin and figures of the actresses; boys sought for the charm and suaveness the actors portrayed.

The Depression launched movies into the big time. The automobile gave those in the country a means of getting to the movies. Gangster films and musical comedies were a hit. Teenage actors began to emerge. The most popular were Mickey Rooney (Andy Hardy films) and Judy Garland (The Wizard of Oz). Most films involving teenagers were happy and light.

The 1940s saw another surge of teenage attendance at the movies. The majority went at least once a week; many went two or three times. Hollywood responded and created what are now called "bobby-soxer" films. They were set in upper-middle class suburban towns and the teens in them were happy and innocent. They showed a type of happy existence even with World War II raging overseas.

The 1950s was the breakout decade for teen films. These movies began to confront real issues and real teenage problems, like juvenile delinquency. Movies like Rebel Without A Cause and The Wild One made stars out of Marlon Brando and James Dean. They also made the jeans/leather jacket look popular. Scary science fiction films and "B" movies were popular around this decade, leading to today's horror films.

The 1960s brought about the beach party pictures. These movies were fun and comedic. The girls wore bikinis and the boys could usually surf. The 1970s was not a decade for teen films. Some great horror films came around this time, but most teens enjoyed the movies that their parents were also watching. Some classics from this decade are Superman, The Godfather, and Saturday Night Fever.

The 1980s saw an explosion of teenage movies; it could even be argued that this was the best decade for teenage movies. Not only did the movies talk about teenagers; they starred teenagers and addressed real teenage problems. John Hughes was the most popular director of movies dealing with teenagers. Most of his movies starred "the brat pack," a group of actors that were friends on and off the screen (see Spotlight). Comedies made a comeback for teenagers, some cruder than others, and horror films were also popular. Some of the prevailing movies of the day were The Breakfast Club, Sixteen Candles, Better Off Dead, National Lampoon movies, and many others.

The 1990s to the present have built on the '80s foundation. Teenage actors are still playing a major role in the movies for teens today. Teen movies still address real teen problems, like popularity, sex, drugs, pregnancy, etc. Blockbusters have caught the attention of teens as well. Titanic wasn't only an epic onscreen but an epic in the hearts of teenage girls. Comedies are still popular with teenagers and the all-prevalent horror films. More recently, the market has turned toward pre-teens and early teens.

Three Decades of Teen Movies

1980s

Back to the Future
Better Off Dead
The Breakfast Club
Ferris Bueller's Day Off
Pretty In Pink
Sixteen Candles
St. Elmo's Fire
Weird Science
Some Kind of Wonderful
Porky's
The Outsiders

1990s

Clueless
10 Things I Hate About You
Never Been Kissed
American Pie
Titanic
William Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet
The Wedding Singer

2000–Now

Bring It On Legally Blonde
A Walk to Remember
Save The Last Dance
Spider-Man (& sequels)
A Knight's Tale
Mean Girls
Napoleon Dynamite
High School Musical (& sequels)
Hairspray
Harry Potter series
Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants
Epic Movie
Twilight series
Step It Up
17 Again
The Sorcerer's Apprentice
Beastly
Footloose
Monte Carlo

Entertainment Weekly has released a list of their top 50 teen movies. View it at: www.ew.com/ew/article/0,,1532588,00.html

Spotlight: The Brat Pack

The Brat Pack refers to a group of teenage actors in the 1980s that were friends on and off the screen. When talking about the Brat Pack, the actors that are most likely involved are Emilio Estevez, Anthony Michael Hall, Rob Lowe, Andrew McCarthy, Judd Nelson, Molly Ringwald, and Ally Sheedy. They worked on some of the most popular teenage movies of the 1980s. Most of these movies were directed by John Hughes (1950–2009). Their biggest hits were The Breakfast Club, St. Elmo's Fire, Sixteen Candles, and Pretty In Pink. There are definitely more movies they starred in, but these were the most popular and influential. Their chemistry on the screen was amazing. The Brat Pack tapped into the true teenage sentiments of the day, making teenagers relate to what was happening on the screen. Off the screen, these actors lived life to the fullest with drugs and sex scandals. Each actor tried a “solo” career, tried to make movies without their fellow brat-packers, but most failed in the attempt. Today, you will occasionally see Emilio Estevez or Rob Lowe, but most have had their fame and are out of the public eye. Although they have parted ways and broken friendships, they have left a legacy of really good teenage movies that we still enjoy today.

Keeping Up

- Hollywood Teen Movies: www.hollywoodteenmovies.com
Offers the past and most recent popular teen movies.
- MTV: www.mtv.com
Includes a link for movies.
- www.teenhollywood.com
- Teen Choice Award winners: www.teenchoiceawards.com
- Check Local theaters — if it's starring a teenager, teenagers will most likely flock to it.

Thought Questions

- 1) What common elements are in popular teen movies?
- 2) Are those elements similar to or different from the common elements found in books for teen readers?

Pop Music

By Rebecca Brodegard

Pop music (short for popular music) has been around for ages. It is the music that is listened to by the vast majority of people. The style of pop music has changed over the years. Despite the change, pop music has always had a very simple melody and a beat that you want to tap your foot to. It's music that easily "gets stuck in your head" and is easy to sing along to. Pop music is a general term that can blanket any musical style that holds the public's attention.

Pop music had its beginnings with the invention of the phonograph. Music could now be carried into every home, instead of people making music themselves. Bands could now be brought to the masses. The 1900s were filled with ragtime, barbershop quartets, and brass bands. The 1920s brought Jazz and dance filled rhythms to the pop scene. The 1940s consisted of the Big Band, with artists like Duke Ellington, Glenn Miller, and Benny Goodman. Bing Crosby was a huge hit and the further rise in Jazz brought Frank Sinatra and Nat "King" Cole to the stage. Rock 'n' Roll came around in the 1950s with Elvis Presley, but old greats like Nat King Cole remained in the spotlight.

The 1960s experienced a breakthrough for pop music. The face of the industry changed with the emergence of The Beatles. The British rock band gained the biggest following pop music had ever known. Along with Elvis Presley, rock 'n' roll became the most popular music in the world. Rock 'n' roll still continues today to make an impact on contemporary pop music. The '60s also brought R&B to the spotlight, with groups like The Temptations, The Four Tops, and Diana Ross & The Supremes.

The 1970s continued with rock's domination of the charts. The Beatles broke up, but Simon & Garfunkel and Fleetwood Mac picked up the spotlight. The Carpenters made softer rock well known while heavier rock came from Led Zeppelin and Pink Floyd. Disco was the pop music of the clubs while soul music kept its presence with The Jackson 5 and Gladys Knight & the Pips.

In the 1980s, pop's sound changed a bit. Music was created for the sole purpose of appealing to the masses. The two biggest names to emerge from this decade are Michael Jackson and Madonna. Heavy metal came into prominence with groups like Guns N' Roses, Motley Crue, and Whitesnake. Power pop emerged, which became a heavier rock version on the pop music Jackson and Madonna were creating. Power pop is shown with groups like Duran Duran and the Culture Club. Rap also was starting to emerge into the pop scene with Run DMC and LL Cool J.

The 1990s was the decade of women, rap, country, and alternative. Women broke out and the diva was now queen. Women like Jewel, Alanis Morissette, Whitney Houston, and Sarah McLachlan ruled the charts. Rap exploded and spread out of the ghettos. Country rose in prominence with LeAnn Rimes, the Dixie Chicks, and Clint Black. Alternative made it big with U2, Green Day, Stone Temple Pilots, and many more—a continuation of the power pop. The '90s was also the age of boy bands, like the Backstreet Boys and N'Sync.

Today, pop is still a continuation of the '90s. Rap and R&B rule the charts, with some power pop and rock making its appearance. Pop will continue to change as the public's, and especially teenager's, tastes change. Today's popular are tomorrow's forgotten.

Who's Who in Pop

1980s

Michael Jackson~
 Madonna*
 Whitney Houston~
 New Kids On the Block
 Debbie Gibson
 Prince~
 Cyndi Lauper
 Bryan Adams
 Janet Jackson*
 U2*
 INXS

1990s

Mariah Carey*
 Jewel*
 Alanis Morissette*
 Boyz II Men
 The Spice Girls
 Backstreet Boys
 Ricky Martin
 Jennifer Lopez
 Enrique Iglesias
 Usher
 Britney Spears*
 Brandy

2000–Now

Beyonce
 OutKast
 Black Eyed Peas
 John Mayer
 Avril Lavigne
 Sheryl Crow
 Kelly Clarkson
 Ashlee Simpson
 Rihanna
 Chris Brown
 Carrie Underwood
 Natasha Bedingfield
 Jonas Brothers
 Lady GaGa
 Jason Mraz
 Selena Gomez
 Katy Perry
 Justin Bieber
 Adele
 LMFAO
 Colbie Caillat
 OneRepublic

* indicates still popular today
 ~indicates popular through '90s
 (This list isn't complete. Look to references in "Keeping Up" for more complete lists.)

Spotlight: Madonna

Madonna Louise Veronica Ciccone was born on August 16, 1958 near Detroit, Michigan. She went to New York in 1977 where she studied ballet and took some modeling jobs. From 1979–1980, Madonna participated in two bands as lead singer. A demo tape found it's way to Sire Records and Madonna was signed on in 1982. She began her career by releasing two singles that hit it big on the club scene. Her first album Madonna was released in 1983. Her second, and more successful, album Like a Virgin launched Madonna in the big time. Every single from the album hit number one on the charts. She released 3 more albums in the '80s; all sold millions of copies. She raised controversy in 1992 when she released her book Sex and the subsequent album Erotica. She had always been known for her blatant sexuality, but with these two releases she went over the top. She kept up this persona for a few years. In 1995 she wanted to play in the movie Evita, so she started to tone down her image. She gained the part, and then became a mother by the end of filming. Her albums since then have focused more on an R&B/techno sound. Throughout her career, Madonna has also been involved in movies. Her successful ones include Desperately Seeking Susan, A League of Their Own, and Evita. Madonna is now in her fifties, a mother of two, and still as popular as ever. She continues to produce albums and continues to be a great force in the pop music scene.

Official site: www.madonna.com

Keeping Up

- Billboard's top lists—www.billboard.com
- Website—www.popculturemadness.com/Music/ (has lists by month and year of the top songs and artists)
- MTV—watch the channel or visit the website at www.mtv.com
- RollingStone—magazine and website at www.rollingstone.com
- Book: Whitburn, Joel. Joel Whitburn Presents A Century of Pop Music: Year-By-Year Top 40 Rankings of the Songs & Artists That Shaped a Century. (1999)

Movies	Thought Questions
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Josie and The Pussycats • That Thing You Do • La Bamba • Selena • Grease 	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1) What other ways for keeping up in pop music can you discover? 2) What kind of a teen network could you establish to keep up?

Downloading Music

A History

By Rebecca Brodegard

Downloading music from the Internet is a fairly recent phenomenon. It all started in 1999 with the creation of Napster by college student Shawn Fanning. This program allowed people to share MP3's (compressed audio files) over the Internet. Napster's popularity boomed, particularly with teens who were large consumers of music with a tradition of sharing music via mix tapes and burning CDs. It seemed to work for everyone, and had its roots in traditional teen behavior. You got the song you wanted without having to spend $15 for the CD. Who could pass up free stuff?

Napster's clout didn't last long. Six months after its release, the Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA) sued Napster for copyright infringement. The site still stayed operational throughout its many legal battles and for a while the publicity made it more popular. In April 2000 Metallica sued Napster for copyright infringement and the court battle continued to grow. In February 2001, Napster offered a $1 billion to the record industry to drop the suit. The industry refused. The site had to close down in September 2002 from bankruptcy.

While Napster was encountering problems, similar programs arose to fit the need for online file sharing. Various other sites and programs popped up: KaZaA, Morpheus, Grokster, and others. These various programs seemed to avoid being sued by keeping a low profile and sometimes requiring their users to pay a membership fee.

During 2003, the recording industry went after Internet service providers (ISPs), wanting the ISPs to disclose users who illegally downloaded music from the Internet. The main target of this attack, Verizon, fought back, appealing a lower court's decision to reveal their users. Verizon won with a decision by an appeals court in late 2003, allowing them to keep user's information private, and the recording industry backed off. This decision allowed the alternate file sharing programs to continue. During this time high profile arrests of teens that had downloaded music illegally also made news.

A new way of downloading music legitimately arose in 2003 when Steve Jobs, Apple Computer's CEO, announced the iTunes Music Store. iTunes allows anyone to download a song for $0.99, or a whole CD for $9.99 with a few exceptions. The record companies could not say no, and DRM (Digital Rights Management) limiting sharing helped sweeten the deal. Here was a way to allow people to get music from the Internet in a legitimate, cheap way. Other services like Rhapsody have begun to compete. As the popularity of iPods and MP3 players grew, buying and finding music online is a more convenient way to get music to these players. iTunes has expanded the offerings to video, shows, and movies – also for reduced pricing and watchable on iPods and Nanos. In the past year there is a move toward DRM free music. This would allow multiple copies without copy protection. iTunes and Amazon are already offering a limited number of songs that are DRM free.

While music was the first frontier in downloads and illegal file sharing, teens can also download television shows, movies, and software via the same file sharing sites, as well as others such as Pirate Bay. Recently movie companies have made public attempts at curbing illegal downloading. Streaming sites such as Pandora, Hulu, Netflix, Amazon, and/or network sites provide free or paid legal access making it easier for teens to access media. However, many of the other illegal services are still operating. As long as there is a demand for these services, they will always be around.

What's Legal

- Apple iTunes
- Amazon
- Napster 2.0
- Wal-Mart's eMusic
- Yahoo
- MusicMatch
- Rhapsody

Articles about legal digital download sites can be found at ezinearticles.com/?expert=John_Rivers

What's Questionable

- Sites that use the term "file-sharing"
- Morpheus
- KaZaA
- Limewire
- Aquasition
- Pirate Bay
- BitTorrent

How To Identify an Illegal Download Service:

- Site says it has unlimited downloads but doesn't offer a list of songs.
- Site keeps taking you to the "sign-up" page
- Uses the term "file-sharing"
- Check with www.pro-music.org to check the legality of your downloading service

Articles to Help Avoid Piracy

- www.microsoft.com/piracy/ for illegal software.
- www.riaa.com/physicalpiracy.php for help with music

Spotlight: iPod

When Napster hit the scene in 1999, MP3 players began to find their way into the market. These players are small and allow the user to have music wherever they go. These MP3 players were dominating the market, until the iPod came along.

The first iPod was announced in October of 2001. It came in with a price tag of $399, but it offered 5 GB hard drive (enough for 1,000 songs) and used a much better system of storing and playing songs. It only worked with Macs, but developers were quick to develop platform compatibility.

The following few years brought iPod to the top. Developers made the player compatible with PCs, introduced models with bigger storage space, and changed the look. iPods eventually became smaller and cheaper and took the MP3 player market by storm. The iPod continues to dominate MP3 player sales. At least 2 or 3 new versions of the iPod appear every year.

In 2005 Apple expanded their market. They announced the new iPod Shuffle, a player the size of a pack of gum and only costing a mere $99. This player changed Apple's iPod industry because it was a way for everyone who couldn't afford a $300 player to have an iPod. In 2006 Apple innovated again with the release of the iPod Nano. Like the regular iPod, it has video capability, yet is smaller than most of its predecessors. 2007 brought even more changes. The Shuffle became smaller and cheaper. The iPod Touch appeared. With a touch screen, it has Internet capability. The iPod is no longer just for music.

What is in the future for the iPod? We all just have to wait and see. Keep up with iPod's changing face at www.apple.com

Teens and Music: Some Fiction Titles

- Revolution by Jennifer Donnelly (2011)
- Just Listen by Sarah Dessen (2006)
- Born to Rock by Gordon Korman (2006)
- The Last Days by Scott Westerfeld (2006)
- Nick and Norah's Infinite Playlist by Rachel Cohn and David Levithan (2006)
- King Dork by Frank Protman (2006)

Thought Questions

- 1) How does the copyright law effect the sharing of music?
- 2) What role does the library play in teaching teens about copyright and music downloads?
- 3) In what ways can libraries leverage streaming sites to supplement teen services?

I Want My MTV

Teens and Television

By Rebecca Brodegard

From the beginning of television, teens have been engaged with its content. Up through the 1990s, watching television was more of a family activity. Teens did not necessarily watch TV by themselves. Most television shows were directed toward the family without trying to target teenagers specifically. In the 1980s popular shows consisted of The Cosby Show, Miami Vice, Magnum P.I., and many others. But a new kind of television emerged in the 1980s with the creation of MTV.

MTV went on the air on August 1, 1981. It was a cable station that showed music videos twenty-four hours a day. As the station grew in popularity, it started to create television shows, but it still concentrated more on the music. The station played the popular songs and videos of the day. It started to target teenagers exclusively, playing “their kind” of music and directing all programming to the age group. MTV took off, especially with their “I want my MTV” campaign.

By the very late 1980s and early 1990s, the rest of television saw the potential of a teenage audience and started to create shows for and about teens. There was a mixture of comedies, dramas, and cartoons that arose to target a teen audience. Comedies included Saved By the Bell, Sabrina the Teenage Witch, Boy Meets World, and Sister, Sister. Dramas included Beverly Hills 90210, Melrose Place, Felicity, and My So-Called Life. Cartoons included the ever popular The Simpsons, Beavis and Butt-head, South Park, and Daria. No matter the genre, each show, in its own way, addressed the problems teens faced everyday. They discussed issues from sex to drugs, dealing with parents to homework, friendships to relationships; whatever teens lived through, one of these shows would talk about it.

Teens also began watching soap operas, which began incorporating younger actors and storylines involving teens to keep their new audience interested. On the younger end of the spectrum, Cartoon Network began developing animated series for teens, including Teen Titans and Toonami shows. In the late '90s and early in the 21st century, the WB made a name for itself producing prime time television directed mostly at teenagers with Buffy the Vampire Slayer, 7th Heaven, Charmed, and Dawson's Creek. The WB and UPN merged into The CW in 2006.

A new genre of television has emerged that teenagers have caught hold of: reality shows. It all began with CBS's Survivor and Fox's American Idol. They both were an instant hit with people of all ages. Now reality shows dot the primetime spots: The Bachelor, The Amazing Race, Dancing with the Stars, and so much more. MTV, whose programming now consists of more shows than music videos, has been doing versions of reality TV for years. Their series The Real World has been on for more than twenty seasons, and MTV continues to explore a variety of reality programming. So do other cable stations — most notably Bravo with two types of series: talent shows such as Project Runway (now on Lifetime), and the Real Housewives of... Series, including a NYC teen show airing in the summer of 2009.

Disney has also experienced success in recent years focusing on younger teens. The original television movie High School Musical led to two sequels, one in the theater, and numerous high schools across the country performing the show at their school. Miley Cyrus' show Hannah Montana has had similar success, turning the star into a popular celebrity. Recent stars from Disney include the Jonas Brothers, a popular music group, Demi Lovato (Camp Rock), Serena Gomez (Wizards of Waverly Place), and Ashley Tisdale.

Fox

- The Simpsons
- So You Think You Can Dance
- American Idol
- Glee
- Napoleon Dynamite

C.W.

- Smallville
- Gossip Girl
- One Tree Hill
- Supernatural
- America's Next Top Model
- 90210 (the remake)
- The Vampire Diaries

NBC

- The Office
- Saturday Night Live
- Chuck
- Days of our Lives
- Parks and Recreation

CBS

- Survivor
- The Big Bang Theory

ABC

- Grey's Anatomy
- Dancing with the Stars
- V

MTV

- Real World
- Jersey Shore
- 16 and Pregnant
- My Life as Liz
- Teen Wolf

Other

- South Park (Comedy Central)
- Pretty Little Liars (ABC Family)
- Degrassi, The Next Generation (The N)
- Hannah Montana (Disney)
- The Secret Life of the American Teenager (ABC Family)

Spotlight: Glee

Glee first appeared on Fox in 2009. It follows the adventures and exploits of New Directions, a high school glee club. Led by Will Schuester (played by Matthew Morrison), the club journeys through the show choir circuit and the treacherous waters of adolescence. Club members include Rachael (Lea Michele), the daughter of a gay couple with dreams of stardom, Finn (Cory Monteith), the football star with a secret love of singing, Kurt (Chris Colfer), a gay teen who stands up for who he is, Artie (Kevin McHale), a paralyzed teen who fights disability prejudice, and many others. It includes musical numbers, mostly pumped up versions of pop songs. The songs and feel-good vibe of the show attracted many and the fan base ballooned overnight. But the songs are not everything. Glee is not afraid to confront many different issues. The first season confronted teen sexuality, teen pregnancy, bullying, homosexuality, trying to fit in, and many other topics. The second season continued those themes, even showing a homosexual relationship. The show is a huge success. Fans of the show call themselves "gleeks" – a combination of glee and geek. The cast has gone on a tour, giving concerts all around the country. Albums of songs from the show have sold millions of copies. A movie, Glee Live! in 3-D! hit the theaters for a two-week run in the fall of 2010. A third season is in the works and an end is nowhere in sight.

Keeping Up

What is popular on television including what teens are watching:

- TV Guide online: www.tvguide.com
- MTV: www.mtv.com
- Major network's websites: abc.go.com, www.nbc.com, www.cbs.com, www.fox.com
- Teen Nick (a teen version of Nickelodeon): www.teennick.com

Teens are watching television online – check out www.hulu.com, or the "official websites" of networks.

Thought Questions

- 1) What themes tend to run through teen TV?
- 2) Is there a difference between what young men and young women watch?
- 3) What cultures are represented in teen TV?

Rap and Hip-Hop

The History

By Rebecca Brodegard

Rap, with its seemingly synonymous Hip-Hop, is a unique African-American form of music with chanted, rhyming lyrics and a strong background beat. Rap's roots include African tribal music, the blues, jazz, and soul. It developed in the inner cities, mainly in New York City where DJ Kool Herc brought the influences of reggae and dub poets with him from Jamaica. Hip-hop culture began to take shape, encompassing parties, clothes, and dancing (i.e. break dancing), as well as the music. Rap stayed in the inner city for some time. Record companies felt rap was a passing fad and refused to sign emerging rap artists. In 1979 Sugarhill Gang's "Rapper's Delight" was an instant success, selling more than 500,000 copies and rose to number one on the pop charts. Rap had hit the mainstream. Rap's popularity spread throughout the country, bringing the hip-hop culture with it.

There are six types of rap: old school, playa, message, gangsta, battle, and alternative.

- Old school encompasses the early, breakthrough rap. It is "generally enthusiastic and upbeat in both music and message."¹
- Playa rappers are those who rap to make money and live the high life. Some rappers labeled as playa rappers include L.L. Cool J, Run D.M.C., and Fresh Prince (Will Smith).
- Message rap is full of political statements and warnings against drugs and gangs. These rappers have a message and try to use their music to talk to their teenage audience.
- Gangsta rap became the most controversial type. It is full of violence and obscenity, telling of life on the streets with guns, women, gang wars, drugs, alcohol, and more. Gangsta rappers lived just as dangerously as their songs. Some examples include: Tupac Shakur and the Notorious B.I.G. died violently; Snoop Doggy Dog was accused of being an accessory to murder.
- Battle rap is on-the-street freestyle rap. Two rappers face off and the crowd decides who is better. This style of rap is best shown in the movie 8 Mile.
- Alternative rap is the newest form of rap to emerge. It is a bit "softer" and the lyrics are more stream-of-conscious.

Even from its beginnings, rap has brought up controversy everywhere it goes. Rap has been accused of promoting sex, drugs, gangs, and even murder. The most controversial rapper of the day is Eminem. His first album contained songs that spoke out against homosexuals, spoke of abusing women, and promoted a life on the streets. Parents hated him; kids loved him

For those who believed that rap was just a fad and unimportant were proved wrong at the 2006 Oscars. Not only was the rap song "It's Hard Out Here for a Pimp" nominated in the best song category, it took the honors. Rap has imprinted itself on American culture for good and is here to stay.

¹ Haskins, James. One nation under a groove: Rap music and its roots. New York: Hyperion Books, 2000.

Who's Who

1980s

Sugarhill Gang
 Grandmaster Flash
 Run D.M.C. (first playa rappers)
 L.L. Cool J
 Jazzy Jeff and Fresh Prince
 M.C. Hammer
 KRS-One (message rap)
 N.W.A. (Niggaz With Attitude)
 Ice-T
 Ice Cube
 Salt-n-Pepa
 Queen Latifah *
 Vanilla Ice
 Beastie Boys*

1990s

2 Live Crew
 Snoop Doggy Dog*
 2Pac (Tupac Shakur)*
 Notorious B.I.G.
 Sean "Puffy" Combs*
 Wu-Tang Clan*
 Lil' Kim
 Missy Elliott*
 Busta Rhymes
 Lauryn Hill*-alternative rap
 Dr. Dre

Today

Eminem
 OutKast
 Eve
 50-Cent
 Black Eyed Peas
 Gnarls Barkley
 Jay-Z
 Rick Ross
 Ludacris
 Lil Wayne
 Kanye West
 Mos Def
 Drake
 Ncki Minaj
 DJ Khaled
 Lupe Fiasco

* indicates still popular today

Spotlight: Eminem

Marshall Mathers, aka Eminem or Slim Shady, was born on October 17, 1972 in Kansas City, Missouri. His childhood was spent moving between Detroit, Michigan and Kansas City, finally settling in Detroit when he was 12. Eminem changed high schools a lot, keeping him on the outside from his peers. Rap, particularly gangsta rap, became his outlet. He dropped out of school and worked different minimum wage jobs. Eminem went into the underground rap scene, trying to become part of the music he loved so much. The movie 8 Mile is a loose autobiographical sketch of this period of his life. He released an album, Infinite, in 1996 but it was rejected. He started to work on his rapping style, doing what he wanted to do. He produced Slim Shady EP—his own album done his way. He went to the Rap Olympics in 1997 in Los Angeles, winning second place in the freestyle competition. Eminem made his way onto a radio show, where he caught the attention of Dr. Dre, a rapper and rap producer. Eminem's career took off from there. His record The Slim Shady LP debuted in 1999 and shot straight up the charts. Eminem became the most popular, and most controversial, rap artist of his day. He has since released many more albums including The Marshall Mathers LP, The Eminem Show, Relapse, and Recovery.

Official Website: www.eminem.com

Keeping Up

- Book: Haskins, James. One Nation Under a Groove: Rap Music and its Roots. Hyperion, 2000.
- Magazine: The Vibe — also at: www.vibe.com
- Magazine: The Source: The Magazine of Hip-Hop Music, Culture & Politics — also at: www.thesource.com
- Magazine: MTV — also at: www.mtv.com

Movies

- 8 Mile
- Boyz N the Hood
- Get Rich or Die Tryin
- Snipes

Thought Question

- 1) What political as well as cultural statements come from the hip-hop performers and have they had any impact?

Alternative Music

By Rebecca Brodegard

Alternative rock is the result of both grunge and heavy metal music. In the 1960s–1970s, there was a movement away from the public eye. Bands like The Velvet Underground and MC5 were combining intellectual lyrics with musical expression that were a bit different from the rock of the age. This movement developed into punk music, giving alternative music a more accessible format. Punk put the music into 3-chord progressions, simplifying it so anyone could learn and play it. Alternative music went through another change in the 1980s. It spread to college radio with bands like R.E.M., The Replacements, and Sonic Head. Thus it became “college rock” and stayed mostly underground until the release of Nirvana’s album Nevermind.

Nirvana brought to the spotlight a new type of music: grunge. “While previously ‘alternative’ was simply an umbrella term for a diverse collection of underground rock bands, Nirvana and similar groups fashioned it into a distinct style of guitar-based rock which combined elements of punk and [heavy] metal; their creation met with considerable commercial success.”¹ As popularity grew throughout the 1990s, many different groups did not agree with the new success of alternative music. Indie rock was formed. Indie artists returned to the original roots of alternative music, preferring to stay away from the public eye.

The term “alternative” encompasses many different kinds of bands. They vary from heavier material, like Linkin Park, to a bit softer style, like R.E.M. Today, alternative music can be found in garage bands and popular artists. Many alternative artists can be found on the Top 40 lists of today.

Alternative has come a long way, from the underground, garage punk bands to the mainstream pop scene. Wherever it is, it continues to change the way rock is created and performed.

¹ http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Alternative_rock

Who's Who

1980s

R.E.M.*
Talking Heads
Sonic Youth
Replacements
The Cure*
They Might Be Giants*
Jane's Addiction
Oingo Boingo

1990s

Nirvana
Nine inch Nails
Stone Temple Pilots
Blind Melon
Green Day*
Beck*
Pearl Jam*
Korn*
U2*
Smashing Pumpkins*
Alanis Morissette*
Hole
Tori Amos*
Sarah McLaughlin*
Weezer*

2000–Now

Blink 182
Linkin Park
311
Dave Matthews
Good Charlotte
Godsmack
Rage Against the Machines
Liz Phair
Evanescence
All-American Rejects
AudioSlave
Coldplay
Sublime With Rome
Washed Out
The Black Keys

* indicates still touring and releasing albums today

Spotlight: Nirvana

Nirvana began when lead singer Kurt Cobain and bass guitar player Chris Novoselic joined together in Seattle, Washington. Their first album, Bleach, was released in 1989. It hit big in the underground Seattle scene. Nirvana was doing new things with music. They drew on the existing punk and harder rock for its musical style. The band's popularity grew in Seattle and signed with a new record company. Their album, Nevermind, was released in October 1991. It was a major hit. The album's lead song "Smells Like Teen Spirit" became the theme song to many teenagers. Grunge, along with alternative music, was thrown to the spotlight. Nirvana had a way of combining depressing lyrics with catchy, upbeat music. Despite the band's fear of the spotlight, they were very much in it. The band became a cult classic. Nevermind sold 5 million copies and the band toured around the world. Nirvana's third album, In Utero, was released in 1993. The band remained as popular as ever. Tragedy struck in April 1994 when lead singer, Kurt Cobain, committed suicide in his Seattle home. His suicide note indicated his hatred of being in the spotlight and not enjoying his music as he used to. Fans idolized Cobain and he remains an icon to this day. Nirvana's music, although hated by many parents, changed alternative music forever, and is argued to be one of the best bands in history.

Keeping Up

- Alternative Music Almanac by A. Cross
- MTV Magazine or website: www.mtv.com
- Book: A to X of Alternative Music by Steve Taylor
- iTunes Music Store: See what's selling

Thought Questions

- 1) Is there anyone who can really define and identify alternative when they hear it?
- 2) A constant in popular music is change. What is your estimate of how long this type of music will last and in fact, are there already hints of the future?

Mad About Magazines

Magazines have always been a reading staple of teens. However, the market has been changing in the past several years with fewer teen magazines being published in print form, and more moving into digital format exclusively. In today's market it is harder for print magazines to sustain readership, an interesting contrast with teens who, in 2003, cited magazines as their second favorite reading material.

In 1911 Boy's Life magazine was first published, eventually becoming the official magazine of The Boy Scouts of America. However, the first magazine to be published with a target audience of teenagers was Seventeen in 1944. Seventeen remains the widest read teen girl fashion magazine despite the growing competition and the success of other publications throughout the last fifty years.

Despite the dominance of Seventeen, other magazines have been popular. Sassy, first published in 1988, has been credited with influencing teen fashion magazines by bringing a feminist sensibility and "street cred" to teen magazines. Sassy folded after editor Jane Pratt left in the mid-nineties, and the tone of the articles changed to a more traditional girl's magazine. Also left beside the road have been Teen magazine (2002) and YM magazine (2004, now online at ym.com) despite being around over thirty years. Recently the trend has been towards "little sister" magazines such as CosmoGirl! (online only), Elle Girl (online only), and Teen Vogue. Furthermore, teen fashion magazines are developing to meet niche markets, including ethnic markets. Teen Latinitas (online only), Blackgirl Magazine, and Superonda are examples of magazines marketed to meet the needs of traditionally ignored minorities. Another marketing niche has been Christian teens with magazines such as Brio and Guidposts for Teens.

Boys lean more towards subject-related magazines. Magazines developed and marketed to male teen readers have not been successful. However, many magazines marketed for adult males are successful with teens. These include sports magazines such as Sports Illustrated, music magazines such as Spin, and alternative sports magazines such as the Thrasher franchise. One current magazine with a primary teen male readership is the hip-hop title The Source. Another niche market successful with teen males (and "gaming girls") is the gaming magazine, like GamePro and Electronic Gaming Monthly.

Online Magazines

The Internet has changed the face of publishing teen magazines. Most magazines have online companion sites, or have begun publishing exclusively online. Companion sites have similar content to their print companions, but the dynamic nature of the web allows for updated content. Furthermore the multimedia nature of the web allows for a variety of content—videos, interactive polls, music, etc. There are two types of e-zines, or digital magazines: original sites and those developed from a print source. One successful example of an original site is gURL.com. gUrl's website has quizzes, dispenses advice, conducts polls, provides a moderated online community, and spotlights interviews with different women. Its success has allowed it to branch into publishing books. Another type of e-zine allows teens to submit art or writing for teen comment and criticism. TeenInk has both an online and print version and also allows teens to publish artwork and writing of all genres.

. . . And in other news

Not all teen magazines focus on fashion or hobbies. There are also teen news magazines, mostly published by Scholastic or Weekly Reader, and delivered through school classrooms. Some titles include:

- Odyssey Magazine: Adventures in Sciences (Ages 10–16). www.odysseymagazine.com
- New York Times Upfront (Ages 14–18). www.scholastic.com/upfront/
- Junior Scholastic (Ages 12–14). www.scholastic.com/juniorscholastic/
- Science World (Ages 12–18). teacher.scholastic.com/products/classmags/scienceworld.htm
- Current Events (Ages 12–16). www.weeklyreader.com/teachers/current_events/
- Current Health (Ages 12–18). www.weeklyreader.com/teens/current_health/
- Next Step Magazine: Your Life Teen Magazines Websites After High School (Ages 15–18). www.nextstepmagazine.com

Teen Magazines Websites

- Sister 2 Sister — www.s2smagazine.com
- Teen Ink — A magazine written by teens for teens. www.teenink.com
- J14 — Celebrity gossip for tweens. www.j-14.com
- Girls Life — www.girlslife.com
- Teen voices <http://www.teenvoices.com/>

Spotlight: Sassy, an Influence

In 1988, Sassy Magazine entered the teen magazine world and brought with it a new perspective on the world of fashion—a feminist approach whose influence continues to live well past its 1994 demise. Sassy encouraged teens to examine their sexuality and to challenge sexism. Its influence brought the old guard to take note and revamp their magazines to return to a more wholesome image. Seventeen dropped their “make yourself beautiful for a guy” and “you must be thin to be popular” type of articles and have become more of a standard bearer for healthier female aspirations and images. Publishers began to realize that female readers were also interested in cars, humor, music, computer games, and other topics. After Sassy was absorbed in 1994 the content of the magazine reverted to articles more focused on beauty and popularity. Other magazines have also returned to content focused on the “right look”, how to “catch a boy” and other traditional female fashion magazine staples. And yet, the longing for Sassy lives on – teen fashion blogger Tavi Gevinson has expressed a wish for a Sassy magazine for the new millennium.

Alternative Titles

There is active debate and concern in regards to the negative body image and messages fashion magazines send to teen girls. Several magazines have been developed to offer positive alternatives to the thin, white, perfect models with their overt message of sexuality. For younger girls New Moon magazine is ad free, multicultural, and guided by an editorial board of young girls. Girl’s Life for 10–15-year-olds attempts to achieve a balance of fashion, advice, and informational stories with a more positive image than the traditional magazines. For more information on the debate visit: www.mindonthemedia.com

Thought Question

What magazines are teens close to you interested in? Why?

Celebrities

By Rebecca Brodegard

We all know who celebrities are. They act in our movies, play the sports we watch, populate our television shows, and sing the music we like. Basically, anyone who gets society's attention in the media is a celebrity. They are young, old, skinny, fat, wild, and calm. So how do celebrities fit into the lives of teens? Open any teen magazine and you'll find out.

Celebrities influence the fashions that teenagers select. The celebrity images in magazines, on television, and at concerts and other public venues are watched closely and their choice of clothing is scrutinized. Magazines feature articles about dressing like the stars and even supply brand names and pricing information. Fashion trends begun on stage by teen idols are soon seen on teens from East to West.

The media barrage of information about the life stories and relationships of many celebrities bring the everyday lives of the celebrities into the world of teens, helping teens to make connections to the stars. All the information makes the stars normal people just like anyone else. Stars occasionally reveal parts of their personal life and those facts show up on television media shows or in teen magazines to be discussed by all who read or see the revelations.

Any actor that has a cute face is splashed all over media that is enjoyed by teenage girls. Girls may think a boy is cool and cute because he looks a little like Robert Pattinson. Teen males strive to emulate the celebrity look by copying hair styles, clothing, and, in some cases, attempting to develop skills held by their idol whether it be related to music, sports, or celebrity life in general. The life of a celebrity woman is followed by both male and female teens. The fashions, hairstyles, make-up, fitness levels, and general body image influence the perception of beauty held by many teen girls (and seem also to be the touchstone used by males to judge the looks of females). Products these celebrities endorse become products teens buy.

Teens, especially reluctant readers, might be drawn into reading through books dealing with these celebrities. Books about any one of these celebrities or about concerts, sports events, and so forth involving these celebrities, might be the factor that draws an adverse reader into a circle of literacy. Many of these celebrities and their popularity are short-lived and thus, books about the celebrity might also be short-lived, but their value for attracting the marginal reader might well be worth the expenditure.

Celebrities will continue to be tracked and followed by teenagers. They play an important role in how teens will act, what fads they'll follow, and what products they'll buy. Teenagers pay good money to see the stars they love, and stars appeal to teens for that very purpose. So, although individuals may come and go, celebrities are here to stay and will remain a strong influence on the teens to come.

The American Library Association (ALA) has used the attraction of teens to celebrities by creating their "ALA Celebrity Reads" project. Celebrities from the world of sports, music, and other venues are invited to pose and be photographed reading a book of their own choice. The photographs are then used to create a poster with only a single word, READ, as its message. These posters represent a powerful endorsement for reading. Find out more about the project by visiting the project's page on ALA's website at www.ala.org/ala/issues/toolsandpub/keymessages/aboutalaab/celebrityreadfactsheet.cfm

Some Major Teen Celebrities

Movies

Mary Kate and Ashley Olsen*
Lindsay Lohan
Blake Lively
Jessica Alba
Robert Pattinson
Kristen Stewart
Shia LaBeouf
Taylor Lautner
Tom Felton
Emma Watson

Music

Beyonce
Hannah Montana (Miley Cyrus)*
Taylor Swift
Justin Timberlake
Jonas Brothers
Adam Lambert
Justin Bieber
David Archuleta

Sports

LeBron James
David Beckham
Shaun White
Shawn Johnson
Serena Williams
Venus Williams

Television

Ashley Tisdale*
Zac Efron*
Selena Gomez*
Brendan Robinson
Dylan O'Brien
Lea Michele
Cory Monteith

* indicates star also appears in more than one type of media

Disclaimer:

This page goes out of date very quickly. Stars are constantly coming into the spotlight and others quickly get out. Don't depend too much on the list above; look to "Keeping Up" to help stay current.

Spotlight: Miley Cyrus

Disney Channel has become relevant in teens and tweens lives in the past few years. After a huge hit with High School Musical, they launched the sitcom Hannah Montana that has become a pop culture phenomenon. In the series, Hannah Montana is a huge pop star, living life as the normal, if geeky, teen Miley Stewart, and hiding her celebrity status. The actress playing Miley Stewart/Hannah Montana is Miley Cyrus, daughter of Billy Ray Cyrus ("Achy Breaky Heart") who also stars in Hannah Montana. Miley was born in 1992, making her a true teen star. In 2007, Hannah Montana 2 was a #1 selling album. Hannah Montana hit the big screen in 2009. In 2008 Miley released a CD away from the Hannah Montana cover, titled Breakout. While Hannah Montana and the Disney Channel are geared more to tweens than teens, Miley has become a guilty pleasure for teens (and adults) as well.

Keeping Up

- Keep an eye on the teen magazines: who's on the cover, note the celebrities that consistently show up in the magazines.
- MTV—website, magazine, and TV
- Watch advertisements: anything that a teen can buy, identify products teen celebrities are endorsing

Thought Questions

- 1) What additional celebrities could be added to the list included on this page?
- 2) How do celebrities influence young adult literature and other media?
- 3) In addition to ALA READ campaign, what are some other ways that teen celebrities might be used to promote reading?

The Kids are Alright... and So is Their Literature

The notion of what it means to be a teenager has been portrayed in a variety of different ways by media, including news, movies, music, and television. Often teenagers are constructed as “the other,” unfathomable to adults, a bundle of hormones that will do crazy things. This is not a new idea and has historical roots. In recent years teens have been demonized and deified, particularly in terms of technology. They are either digital natives, comfortable within the digital world who will and can produce works of art, social change, and/or change the notion of the workplace (Tapscott — Grown Up Digital), or they are lazy, play too many video games, and lack critical thinking skills (Bauerlein — The Dumbest Generation). Those who work with teens know that the truth is more complicated than stereotypical notions, that teens are people and that as such they resist simple categorization.

YA literature suffers from some of the same oversimplified construction in the media. Common themes include a focus on series and the lack of “quality,” an outrage over sex that appears and the desire to protect “our children,” and the “darkness” or grim nature of YA literature. In 2006 Naomi Wolfe published a criticism in the New York Times of the Gossip Girl and Clique series and managed to leave uninformed readers with the impression that this was all there was for teenage girls to read, ignoring a wide range of quality, complex YA literature available. (“Young Adult Fiction: Wild Things” www.nytimes.com/2006/03/12/books/review/12wolf.html) A mere two years after publishing an article “It was, Like, All Dark and Stormy,” the Wall Street Journal published “Darkness Too Visible,” (2011) discussing the themes of cutting, eating disorders and dystopian universes in current YA fiction. This article prompted a trending response on Twitter #YAsaves, in which Tweets about how YA literature had impacted lives were shared. Other recent articles and media constructions include Glenn Beck bemoaning the lack of books with strong male characters in 2008, as well as a more thoughtful and positive article from Margo Rabb in the New York Times (July 2008). (“I’m YA and I’m O.K.” www.nytimes.com/2008/07/20/books/review/Rabb-t.html).

The oversimplified construction of YA literature by many adults as being exclusively series fiction and poorly written with questionable moral values has an inevitable role in the working life of youth librarians and teachers, as does the stereotypes of teens embraced by the media. It is the working librarian who is often faced with the concerned and/or angry parent who questions the inclusion of books highlighted by the media in a library collection. Over the years this has included: Nancy Drew and the Hardy Boys, Goosebumps, Sweet Valley High, Harry Potter, Gossip Girl, The Clique., Twilight series and The Hunger Games. As may be evident from the list, these stereotypes and parental discussions are particularly true for librarians working with the ages we now refer to as tweens (ages 11–13).

As librarians and advocates for teens, awareness of brewing controversy and other media constructions is helpful. Having a well-reasoned response to such concerns, as well as a clear selection policy, at the ready can be particularly helpful. Knowing the answer to “Why do you have this on the shelf?” is an essential component of collection development. But this can also be viewed as an opportunity to advocate for teens and for YA literature. It is a chance to celebrate the diversity of available YA materials, to present titles that may be ignored by mainstream media but embraced by teens.

This is true in dealing with media constructions of teens themselves as well. To return to the example in the first paragraph, librarians working with teens are well aware of the falseness of this particular dichotomy. While some teens are comfortable in the digital world, others are much less so. Some teens are fans of video games, others less so. This is of concern to the working librarian planning programming to support YA materials. Understanding the role video games play, and the benefits of games, may help alleviate criticism and introduce the adult public to a more positive construction of the experience. Recognizing the wide range of abilities and interests of teens regarding online experience can help when developing web sites and instructional programs. The fundamental principle is to recognize the wide variety of interest and abilities in teens; talk to them about their interests and needs so that you can serve them well.

Part of the role of understanding YA materials is understanding and being aware of the media myths of YA literature, particularly from those not as well versed as you will be/are. Part of the job is responding to and dispelling the myths. Staying aware of them will help you advocate for the diverse group of teens who walk through the library door.

Keeping Up

Useful blogs for keeping up with current media articles about youth:

- ypulse.com
- bookshelvesofdoom.blogspot.com
- yzocaet.blogspot.com

Thought Question

What are your biases regarding genre and quality?

Promoting Reading Among Young Adults

It is without a doubt that schooling in the United States is particularly concerned with literacy and reading. A number of government reports have highlighted the “literacy problem” in the United States, the most recent the NEA report “Reading at Risk” (2004) highlighting a decline in the reading of literature. However, it is important to note the limitations of the NEA report in its reference to “literature” which does not acknowledge the wide range of formats and reading that people participate in. Other reports driving educational policy have also focused on the difficulties young people have reading, with a prescriptive response of teaching reading strategies, and little or no focus on the role of motivation in reading, particularly reading for pleasure.

Elaine K. McEwan¹ presents five basic steps supporting the efforts to increase reading ability overall. In her book focusing on reading achievement she puts forth these five “teacher-friendly” strategies and provides details for implementation:

1. Focus on changing what you can change
2. Teach students who can't read how to read
3. Teach every student how to read to learn
4. Motivate all students to read more, to read increasingly more challenging books, and to be accountable for what they read
5. Create a reading culture in your school

The library can focus on steps four and five of McEwan’s strategies, although they play a significant role in all stages of reading development. In particular it is important to be aware of research such as Stephen D. Krashen’s research, published in *The Power of Reading*², which clearly shows the benefits of a reading environment that supports and promotes free voluntary reading as a means to increase and improve reading, comprehension, and vocabulary development. Krashen’s study recommends that both children and teens will read more if they have easy access to large library collections, both in school and public libraries. This is particularly true of teens that come from less affluent environments where reading materials are not readily available. Libraries, well stocked and professionally staffed, play a large role in making reading material available and accessible to young adult readers. Librarians generally recognize that teen readers have specific reading tastes. Teens want to read a variety of books—preferably paperbacks, magazines, graphic novels, and a wide-range of informational material. Teachers can contribute to the reading environment by providing rotating classroom collections, promoting free voluntary reading, and providing time for that reading. Something fresh and interesting should be available to teens everywhere they turn.

In considering how to promote reading to teens, consider teens’ interests and look beyond the curriculum in providing materials. Encourage time for pleasure reading that is not limited by classroom restrictions (i.e. comic books, magazines, etc). Provide and promote through display and marketing a variety of materials—fiction, non-fiction, graphic novels, zines, digital material, etc. Many teens are overscheduled: homework, extra-curricular activities, family, and work. Access to reading material is not enough. Teens also need time to read. Promoting free voluntary reading time is important. It is also important to consider the social nature of a teen’s life and promote the social nature of reading through sharing and discussion. Social media tools can be particularly helpful in this respect.

¹ McEwan, Elaine K. Raising Reading Achievement in Middle and High School: Five Simple-to-Follow Strategies. Corwin Press, 2006.

² Krashen, Stephen D. The Power of Reading, 2nd Edition, Insights from the Research. Libraries Unlimited, 2005.

In addition to providing access and promoting material within their library or classroom, teachers and librarians must join hands with all types of literacy organizations to promote, interest, entice, or involve teens in reading. Here are just a few ideas:

- Encourage the reading of music lyrics, writing, poetry slams, and open microphone times in a “coffee house” atmosphere.
- Hold book discussions online, in the classroom, and in the library.
- Display a wide variety of books and magazines for reading fun and pleasure.
- Read aloud to groups of teens (yes, read aloud to teens—read poems, short stories, magazines articles, information about careers, chapters from books).
- Prepare booktalks for individuals, small groups, or classrooms of readers.
- Use books in interdisciplinary course work—historical fiction in social studies and humanities courses, biographies of scientists and mathematicians in science, mathematics, and career classes, and so forth.
- Promote writing: The more teens write the more they read—email, instant messages (IM), poems, short stories, letters to friends, thank you notes, and so forth.
- Provide images of role models reading:
 - Utilize the READ posters from the American Library Association (ALA)—(Online) www.alastore.ala.org. Click on “Celebrity Read” under the Posters, Bookmarks & More heading.
 - Create your own READ posters—www.alastore.ala.org, click on READ under the digital download section
- Invite members of the community, the city’s mayor, an electrician, a homemaker, retired educators, members of the local sports teams, and others to read during special weeks. Ask readers to share information about their careers and the importance of reading in that career
- Provide time for teens to read. Model the efforts by reading yourself.
- Involve teens in the creation of “best books to read” lists. Publish in the school newspaper or on the school’s website.
- Participate in TEEN WEEK³ activities sponsored by the Young Adult Library Services Association (YALSA), a division of ALA.

Thought Questions

- 1) How might you make access to literacy easier and more convenient in your community (both school and public libraries)?
- 2) What organizations or reading initiatives have been successful or could be successful in your community?
- 3) What community resources could be asked to sponsor literacy events in your community (author visits, book clubs, etc.)?
- 4) How can teachers capitalize on the various reading activities in their communities (book signings at bookstores, public readings, etc.)?

Spotlight: State Reading Awards

Many states have annual programs that involve teens in reading nominated books and voting to identify the most popular book. Authors are invited to the state library convention or sponsoring agency to accept the awards that the teens have selected.

Ask about award programs within your state.

- Texas—Tayshas
- South Carolina—Young Adult Book Award
- Minnesota—Youth Reading Awards
- New Jersey—Golden State Book Awards
- Pennsylvania—Young Adult Top Forty
- California—Young Reader Medal
- Georgia—Georgia Peach Award

Visit the gateway to state awards at www.mcelmeel.com/curriculum/bookawards.html

³ Young Adult Library Services Association (YALSA). “Teen Read Week.” (Online) URL: wikis.ala.org/yalsa/index.php/Teen_Read_Week

Contemporary Realistic Fiction

The contemporary realistic fiction is a staple of YA. Contemporary realistic fiction is defined as books that have plots, characters, and settings that can be found in real life. The hallmarks of YA—first person narrative, coming of age story—lend themselves well to this genre. The success in the early years of Hinton and Cormier, who both wrote contemporary realistic fiction, helped cement this genre as the most popular in the YA field.

It is tempting to focus on the darker, grittier novels in the YA field but there are a wide variety of novels that do not focus on “edgy” issues that can be considered contemporary realistic fiction. Over the years the field has questioned: Will teenagers read about kids in loving families? About other teens who are doing well in school and headed to college? About kids who are comfortable with their physical development and have solid friendships? Often we find the answer is no, but that does not mean that every realistic novel deals with the extreme. One recent example is Prom (2005) by Laurie Halse Anderson written for teens who asked her for a novel about “kids like them.”

Realistic fiction in the 1990s tended to focus less on shock and titillation and more on excitement, romance, and optimism. It presented a wider worldview and less stereotyping. This resulted in parents being shown in a more balanced and convincing fashion. It also presented a diversity of approaches to problems connected with racism and ethnic identification. This has continued in the new millennium.

Contemporary realistic fiction covers a wide range of issues. Here are a few categories to consider as you try to cover the genre.

Families

“Traditional” family values were evident in stories by Paula Danziger and Isabelle Holland or Robert Newton Peck’s A Day No Pigs Would Die in the early years of YA fiction. In much the realistic fiction for teens the parents are absent (or problematic) or rarely seen on the page but you can see an evolution of the representation of family, becoming more diverse and representative of society. Books by Deb Caletti and Sarah Dessen often explore normal (if sometimes dysfunctional) family relationships. Other titles have strong positive adult representation.

Coming-of-Age Stories

Judy Blume captured great attention early on with her stories of teenagers, turning the corner from eventful teen problems toward adult living. Forever (sex) and Are You There, God? It’s Me, Margaret (puberty) made the rounds of most teen readers. Today, numerous authors have their characters confront the adult world as a result of their teen problems. Coming of age is the hallmark of YA contemporary realistic fiction.

Problem Novels

The contemporary problem novel centers itself squarely in a troubling situation or fractured teen life. Our protagonist may be hooked on drugs, alienated from family, in trouble with the law, facing teen pregnancy, or trying to survive a dangerous neighborhood. Teen readers can often identify with these problems and may find comfort in the fact that others are as miserable or as depressed as they are. In the ‘80s problem novels were often formulaic and didactic. More nuanced novels dealing with complex issues are the hallmark of current fiction, without necessarily “punishing” the character.

Contemporary Realistic Fiction and the Reader

Many believe that reading about problems experienced by others or by those caught up in an adventure can help young readers develop new interests and learn new ways of handling conflicts in their own lives. Coping and critical thinking are behavior traits that are often modeled through the actions of characters in books of realistic fiction.

It is important to remember that what might seem realistic to one reader may not seem realistic to another. A reader living on a farm in Iowa will very likely have a different view of everyday life than a child growing up in the inner city of Chicago or New York. Similarly, a child who has already experienced fleeing from Vietnam, surviving in a refugee camp, and coming to a strange new land will have a decidedly different view of life than a child born in the community where she or he still lives. A wide range of characters and ideas will bring a diversity of perspectives and experiences to realistic fiction. Use this diversity to help readers expand their own view of the world and the society in which they live.

A renewed focus on contemporary problems has some critics pointing to a new realism in books for young adults and openly worrying about books that have an agenda rather than a story to tell. One participant in an Internet forum on censorship quipped, "We need to involve readers with books that tell a good story, not books that have a 'message.' If someone has a message to send, they should use Federal Express." Others cite concerns about the characterization of minorities, the stereotyping of women, problems in contemporary society, gay and lesbian characters, and profane language. Some question whether realistic fiction is really reflecting society or contributing to the way society is developing. Calls for censorship of realistic fiction abound. What one group might view as constructive and valuable, others consider controversial. Another problem lies in the language. Because vernacular changes quickly, the language in these novels can become outdated.

Selecting the Best in Your Community

YA novels are plentiful and have enough diversity that both teachers and librarians will have many choices that will fit in their own community. Being sensitive to community values and to teen interests is essential in choosing the best of the genre that fits. A teacher or librarian who reads widely and talks about books with colleagues and teens is in a much easier position to select titles than a person who just reads reviews and makes as many guesses as educated judgments. For this genre read, talk, read, talk is a great plan to stay current.

Authors to Watch

Anderson, Laurie Halse
Brande, Robin
Burgess, Melvin Caletti, Deb
Cohn, Rachel Dressen, Sarah
Flinn, Alex
Giles, Gail
Green, John
Going, K.L.
Hesse, Karen
Howe, James
Johnson, Maureen
Jones, Patrick
Klass, David
Koertge, Ron
Korman, Gordon
Levithan, David
Lockhart, E.
Lynch, Chris
Myers, Walter Dean
Rainfield, Cheryl
Sanchez, Alex
Scott, Elizabeth
Soto, Gary
Spinelli, Jerry
Trueman, Terry
Wittlinger, Ellen
Wolff, Virginia Euwer

Coming of Age Titles

- Alexie, Sherman. The Absolutely True Diary of a Part-Time Indian. (2007)
- Anderson, Laurie Halse. Speak! (2001); Twisted. (2007); Wintergirls. (2009)
- Bray, Libba. Going Bovine. (2009)
- Crutcher, Chris. Staying Fat for Sarah Byrnes. (1995); Whale Talk. (2001)
- Caletti, Deb. Stay. (2011)
- Green, John. Looking for Alaska. (2005); An Abundance of Katherines. (2007), Paper Towns (2008), Will Grayson, Will Grayson (2010)
- Johnson, Angela. First Part Last. (2003)
- Klass, David. You Don't Know Me. (2001)
- Cohn, Rachel and David Levithan. Nick and Norah's Infinite Playlist. (2006)
- Murdock, Catherine. Dairy Queen. (2007)
- Oliver, Lauren. Before I Fall. (2010)
- Schmidt, Gary, D. The Wednesday Wars. (2007)
- Scott, Elizabeth. Living Dead Girl. (2008)

Read What Others Say About YA Novels

- Teen Reading (ALA): www.ala.org/ala/yalsa/teenreading/teenreading.htm
- www.teenreads.com
- Richie's Picks: richiespicks.com

Thought Questions

- 1) What kinds of teens in your community appreciate reading about teens in books that seem to have the same problems they do?
- 2) What topics might have been taboo a decade ago that would not be taboo for today's teen reader?
- 3) What would make a teen novel controversial in your community?

On the Edge: YA Novels and Tough Issues

It started with S.E. Hinton. Her first novel, The Outsiders (1967), provided a picture of teens coping with violence and abuse. Since the publication of The Outsiders, YA literature has exposed teens to tough topics. Robert Cormier's vision of teen bullying and implicitly sanctioned violence, portrayed in The Chocolate War (1974), made his book the fourth most challenged book between 1990 and 2000. In fact, the success of the gritty teen reality novel has also led to the some of the strongest criticism of YA novels. When Beatrice Sparks authored Go Ask Alice (1972), a "diary" of a teen drug addict, a formula for the successful teen "problem novel" emerged.

Teen problem novels deal with teens facing "tough issues" and often have tragic outcomes. Paul Zindel wrote of the consequences of sex, pregnancy, and abortion in My Darling, My Hamburger (1969). The formulaic nature of the problem novel leaves YA literature open to criticism, and problem novels receive the most attention. Those who bemoaned the death of YA literature in the 1980s were referring to the rise of teen series and the teen problem novel. Teen problem novels tend toward didactic story lines in which characters made "poor decisions" and are suffering the consequences of those decisions. Hence, girls who had sex became pregnant and drug addicts died. On occasion, the problem teen character turned their life around through rehabilitation or some form of "seeing the light."

Throughout the history of teen publishing, the "shocker" has existed. The shocker novel has challenged our notions of appropriate literature for teens, opened teens' eyes to the world around them, reminded teens that they are not alone, and encouraged teens to empathize with peers who might have deeper secrets than they can know.

In the 1970s, novels by S.E. Hinton, M.E. Kerr, Judy Blume, Richard Peck, and Robert Cormier dealt with drugs, bullying, neglect, rape, sex, and gangs. Hinton's That Was Then, This Is Now (1971) explored one character's experiences with the drug scene. Richard Peck's Are You In the House Alone? (1976) introduced the concept of date rape to teens everywhere. In the 1980s, Chris Crutcher dealt with sexual abuse and suicide in Running Loose (1983) and more significantly in Chinese Handcuffs (1989). Walter Dean Myers wrote a frank and linguistically graphic view of the Vietnam War with Fallen Angels (1988). But perhaps the most innovative and edgy title came with Nancy Garden's Annie on My Mind (1982), a love story between two young girls. It was one of the first novels for young adults that dealt with homosexuality in an open and positive manner.

Issues and Titles: Memoirs

Hazing: Goat: A Memoir by Brad Land (2004)

Abuse: I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings by Maya Angelou (1970)

Drugs and Addiction: Tweak by Nic Sheff (2008)

Family Relationships: Three Little Words: A Memoir by Ashley Rhodes-Courter (2008)

Internet and Pedophilia: A Girl's Life Online by Katherine Tarbox (2000)

Mental Illness: Devil in the Details: Scenes from an Obsessive Girlhood by Jennifer Traig (2004)

Rape: Lucky by Alice Sebold (1999)

Sexual Abuse: Learning to Swim by Ann Turner (2000)

Suicide: The Burn Journals by Brett Runyon (2004)

Weight: Wasted: A Memoir of Anorexia and Bulimia by Marya Hornbacher (1998)

When the young adult novel began to make a comeback in the 1990s, there was concern over the bleak nature of some novels. We All Fall Down (1991) by Robert Cormier opens with teens randomly and viciously destroying a house. When She Hollers (1994) by Cynthia Voigt has a young girl contemplating homicide as a way to escape the sexual abuse she faces. Adam Rapp's The Buffalo Tree (1998) provides an unflinching look at juvenile detainees. However, other titles deal with tougher subjects with a lighter hand. Francesca Lia Block's magical realism of the Weetzie Bat books explore love and relationships, Steven Chobsky's The Perks of Being a Wallflower (1999) is a modern Catcher in the Rye, and Marion Dane Bauer brings together a number of short stories to examine the experience of gay and questioning teens in Am I Blue?: Coming Out From the Silence (1994).

In the first decade of the 21st Century, YA authors continue to introduce stories that many are concerned push the envelope but that explore the realities of some teens (one would hope a very small percentage). Sherman Alexie's The Absolutely True Diary of a Part-Time Indian (2008) explores issues of race, identity, alcoholism, and reservation life. Barry Lyga (Boy Toy, 2007) and Kathleen Jeffrie Johnson (Gone, 2007) explored issues of a sexual abuse between a female teacher and male student. Gail Giles (Right Behind You, 2007) and Anne Cassidy (Looking for JJ, 2007) introduced readers to adolescents who had killed another child. Elizabeth Scott wrote a terrifying and brutal novel about kidnapping and sexual abuse in 2009 called Living Dead Girl. Young Adult fiction continues to explore the margins.

As evidenced by the side bar fiction is not the only genre to deal with tough issues. Non-fiction memoirs introduce readers to everything from gang life (Almost Running: La Vida Loca: Gang Days in LA, 1993) to prison (A Hole in My Life (2002) by Jack Gantos) to the foster care system (A Child Called It, 1995). Beyond the memoir Janet Bode (Heartbreak and Roses, 1994) and S Beth Atkins (Voices from the Street, 1996) introduce young readers to real stories—dating abuse, rape, gangs. Often these “real life stories” are quite popular with teen readers.

The nature of adolescence lends itself to titles that explore issues such as developing sexuality, developing addictions, developing spirituality, and defining oneself. Often the journeys can be surprising, even disturbing, and the outcomes can leave us unsatisfied or without a true vision of hope. Honest literature can, however, open new worlds to teens. The stories can provide relief and comfort and can give voice to a teen's own story. Such honest accounts, however, beg challenges by parents and adults wishing to protect “children” from the knowledge these books contain. Walter Dean Myers's Fallen Angels faced numerous challenges for depicting the Vietnam War much too graphically. In response, Myers countered with comments about the irony of young men being sent into combat and death (his own brother “Sonny” was killed on his first day as a soldier in Vietnam) but yet censors would shield those same young people from reading about the situation.

Dealing with challenges can be an overwhelming experience, but the possibility of a challenge should not keep a library from providing quality literature to teens. Selection policies, as well as a good challenge policy, will make the process easier. Selection and censorship are discussed in this book in individual sections, and you should re-read those sections in considering sensitive and shocking material to include in your collection.

Current “On the Edge” Titles

- Hopkins, Ellen. Crank (2004), Glass (2007), Fallout (2010). Issue: Drugs
- Asher, Jay. 15 Reasons Why (2007). Issue: Suicide
- Scott, Elizabeth. Living Dead Girl (2009). Issue: Kidnapping/Abuse
- Weiss, Laura. Such a Pretty Girl (2007). Issue: Sexual Abuse; Leftovers (2008). Issue: Bullying
- Ruby, Laura. Good Girl (2007). Issue: Sexting
- Anderson, Laurie Halse. Wintergirls (2009). Issue: Eating Disorders
- Brown, Jennifer. Hate List (2008). Issue: Bullying
- Efav, Amy. After (2009). Issue: Infanticide
- Hoban, Julia. Willow (2009). Issue: Cutting, Grief
- Williams-Garcia, Rita. Jumped (2009). Issue: Violence
- Borris Albert. Crash into Me (2009). Issue: Suicide
- Zarr, Sara. Once was Lost (2009). Issue: Alcoholism; Story of a Girl (2007). Issue: Reputation
- Reinhardt, Dana. Harmless (2007). Issue: Lying/Rumors/Sexual Abuse
- Summers, Courtney. Cracked up to Be (2008). Issues: Too many to

Spotlight: Chris Crutcher

The story goes that after reading Vision Quest (1982) by his friend Terry Davis, Chris Crutcher decided to try his hand at selling stories as well. The result was Running Loose, a story that dealt with loss, grief, and growing up. Crutcher was well suited to tell the stories of young people who were struggling to find their place in the world. After working at an alternative school in Oakland, California and with years of experience as a family and children’s therapist, Crutcher has a unique insight into the lives of children behind closed doors. In his books, Crutcher deals with runaways and disabilities (The Crazy Horse Electric Game, 1987), physical abuse and body image (Staying Fat for Sarah Byrnes, 1993), suicide and sexual abuse (Chinese Handcuffs, 1989), racism and domestic violence (Whale Talk, 2001), and emotional abuse (Ironman, 1995). His readers gain a lot of insight into the author’s own life and perspective as they read his autobiography (King of the Mild Frontier, 2005) and they revel in Crutcher’s take on the censorship efforts that have plagued his ground-breaking books when he satirizes some common situations in The Sledding Hill (2006).

In the beginning of 2005, Crutcher faced a new round of challenges for his novel Whale Talk and for a short story in Athletic Shorts (1991). He took the opportunity to address the censors and their concerns on his website at www.chriscrutcher.com. Greenwillow/HarperCollins has made available an eight-page booklet “A Guide to Teaching Challenged and Banned Books: Featuring the Novels of Chris Crutcher.” Links on Crutcher’s website will provide the procedure for requesting a copy. New articles about other initiatives featuring his books are also available on his website. Crutcher believes in giving voice to the difficulties teens face using authentic voice—and that can be shocking!

Thought Questions

- 1) How do you answer a parent concerned about the subject matter of titles recommended for teens?
- 2) What role does community values play in your selection policy in regards to controversial titles?
- 3) Why might patron privacy be important for teens, and in the school setting how do you balance that with in loco parentis?

Quick Picks and Thin Books for Reluctant Readers

There are a number of teens who can be classified as “reluctant readers,” teens who don’t like to read for any number of reasons. Research reveals that teenagers are the most reluctant readers, and boys in particular either stop reading or drastically reduce the number of hours a week they spend reading when they enter puberty. There are several reasons someone may not read.

The first, and perhaps most obvious, reason a teen might be considered a reluctant reader is reading difficulties. Readers who struggle due to a learning disability, gaps in their education, or other difficulties will usually not enjoy reading. They view it as a chore, often related to school. We tend to focus on struggling readers as the majority of reluctant readers, which may be inaccurate. Exceptional students who are overloaded with assigned school reading and homework may not read (outside of classroom assignments) either. Stephen Krashen puts forth the notion that “access to books is the first step. A number of studies confirm that given access to comprehensible and interesting reading material, ... adolescents [will read].” (www.sdkrashen.com/articles/literacy_campaigns/all.html)

There are books that traditionally appeal to reluctant readers.

Generally these books have cover art that appeals to teens. In today’s publishing world, covers are bright colors with limited graphics. Jimi 3 Me (2005) by Jamie Adoff is an excellent example of today’s successful cover art. Another enticing cover would be the eerily simple cover for Neil Gaiman’s The Graveyard Book (2008; Printz Award 2009).

Illustrations and glossy photographs also appeal to reluctant readers, especially with non-fiction titles. The print on the pages should be larger but not too large, making it easy to read and extra white space is used to make the text less intimidating. DK (a publishing house known for its graphic and captioned scrapbook style of presentation) has continued to evolve and is often popular with reluctant readers. If the book is a fiction title, the hook should come within the first ten pages and the characters should be well defined and encourage visualize. The most successful plots, with struggling readers, are linear, action-filled, and fairly straightforward. Plots that are non-linear and character driven may not be successful. The most popular fiction books are those narratives with a singular point of view, a believable treatment of a topic, and humor.

Non-fiction can be especially helpful in engaging reluctant readers. Topics that are current, sports and hobbies that are hot, and biographies with pictures on popular people often engage reluctant readers. Interest is a large factor in attracting reluctant readers of any age. A book about a high-interest topic can break all the other rules and still attract specific reluctant readers. Knowing your readers is always the best way to successfully engage readers.

For more tips about working with reluctant readers see

- Random House’s Guide for Teachers Reaching Reluctant Readers — Read articles online or download — www.randomhouse.com/highschool/RHI_magazine/reluctant_readers/
- YALSA also has a list of nominated quick picks books for teens, and an annual top 10 list, dating back to 1997. The list can be found: www.ala.org/yalsa/booklists/quickpicks

Books to Know

(A few select titles from the ALA 2010 & 2011 Quick Pick lists:

- Dope Sick by Walter Dean Myers (2009)
- Girl Stolen: A Novel by April Henry (2010)
- High Voltage Tattoo by Kat Von D (2009)
- I Will Save You by Matthew de la Pena (2010)
- Keep Sweet by Michele Dominguez Greene (2010)
- Lockdown by Walter Dean Myers (2010)
- Matched by Allie Condie (2010)
- Paranormal Caught on Film by Melvyn Willin (2009)
- Return to Paradise by Simone Elkeles (2010)
- Secret Saturdays by Torrey Maldonado (2010)
- Street Art Book: 60 Artists in Their Own Words by Ric Blackshaw and Liz Farrelly (2009)
- The Complete History of Why I Hate Her by Jennifer Richard Jacobson (2010)
- The Gardener by S.A. Bodeen (2010)
- The Vampire Book by Sally Regan (2009)
- Thirteen Days to Midnight by Patrick Carman (2010)

Spotlight: Orca Soundings

In 2002 Orca, a publishing company based in Canada, began a new line called Soundings. Orca Soundings titles are high/low titles but have been more successful by breaking the traditional model of high/low books. Although all teen selections are written at a second to fifth grade reading level, the subject matter is strictly young adult. The books deal with name-calling, parental relationships, crime, and drugs. Each book is approximately 100 pages long, and well-known young adult authors write the titles. The covers are realistic and eye catching. While the quality of each title varies overall, the Soundings books have proved popular with reluctant readers. www.us.orcabook.com

Recent releases include:

- B Negative by Vicki Grant
- Cellular by Ellen Schwartz
- Comeback by Vicki Grant
- Knifepoint by Alex Van Tol
- Last Ride by Laura Langston
- Masked by Norah McClintock
- Outback by Robin Stevenson
- Plastic by Sarah N. Harvey
- Reaction by Lesley Choyce
- Rock Star by Adrian Chamberlain

Thought Questions

- 1) What makes readers reluctant?
- 2) How important is access to books?
- 3) How can libraries work with reluctant readers to encourage reading?
- 4) How will programming encourage teens to experience the library?

“We Like Pink Books”: Books for Girls

It would be easy to believe that the “chick lit” revolution started with the British invasion of Bridget Jones’ Diary in 1998 followed by the Georgia Nicolson books by Louise Rennison in 2000. This view would overlook so many titles that laid the groundwork for these titles.

Forever by Judy Blume (1975) broke barriers when it related the story of two teens that fall in love, have sex, and are not “punished” by death, disease or pregnancy. Rather, they struggled with the emotional implications of a physical relationship.

As young adult literature entered the eighties, series fiction for girls became a staple in the publishing industry. Francine Pascal’s Sweet Valley High series (origin 1983) and its spin-offs were the standard bearers in the series industry and are the touchstones for other series such as Sweet Dreams, and Cheerleaders. In 1985 Phyllis Reynolds Naylor entered the field with her critically acclaimed “Alice” series. Over the years Alice has grown and developed coping with first boyfriends, peer pressure, and family, marking a unique series in which the character has aged throughout the long running series (21 books).

In the late 1990s the British invasion brought Bridget Jones’ Diary (Helen Fielding, 1998) followed by Louise Rennison’s books featuring Georgia Nicolson, and everyone began to watch this “new” genre. Meg Cabot capitalized on the phenomenon with The Princess Diaries series and Cecily von Ziegesar entered the market with the Gossip Girl. The Gossip Girl series quickly gained popularity with its focus on high fashion and snarky tone. The series was soon dubbed a high school Sex in the City in print, and skewered in the press. It spawned a television show, and was soon followed by Pretty Little Liars.

Not all series focus on fashion, dating and frenemies. In 2006 Kristen Miller developed a series about a group of girls who protect New York’s secret underground world, the Shadow City. The anchor title, Kiki Strike, features Ananka Fishbein, a young, female mastermind—a girl who lives by her own set of rules (not all of them good). She’s aided by the Irregulars, a group of five girls who have banded together. The obsession with boys, looks, and the glorious life have moved into the real world of adventure and excitement. The characters, as described by Kristen Miller, have “strength [that] comes from what’s inside their heads, not what’s inside their bras.”¹ Another spy series is The Gallagher Girls by Ally Carter. These series are the children of Nancy Drew and demonstrate independent (mostly) strong female characters.

Romantic titles are also popular. Stephanie Meyer’s Twilight series (Twilight [2005], New Moon [2006], Eclipse [2007], and Breaking Dawn [2008]) that followed the romance between a vampire and a regular girl, has been quite popular both as books and movies spawning Team Edward and Team Jacob. Other romantic titles can be found in reading Sarah Dessen, Maureen Johnson, e. lockhart, Stephanie Perkins, Susane Colasanti, and Elizabeth Scott. These are more traditional girls coming-of-age romances. Dessen, Scott, and Caletti’s protagonists often struggle with serious issues such as family, loss, rape, or pregnancy while experiencing first love. Maureen Johnson and e. lockhart write similar novels that are more comedic. Each of these authors contributes solid, quality fiction to the romance/chick lit genre. In fact, both Caletti and lockhart are National Book Awards finalists for Honey, Baby, Sweetheart (2004) and The Disreputable History of Frankie Landau-Banks (2008).

“Chick Lit” has developed into a genre with a wide range of material; serious and funny, quality and “summer beach read,” over-the-top and realistic, focused on fashion or girl power.

¹ Quoted from: TeenRead.com. “Interview with Kristen Miller. Online. www.teenreads.com/authors/au-miller-kirsten.asp#view060601 Accessed July 2006.

21st Century Girl Power!

From body image and love to adventure and friendships.

- Feeling Sorry for Celia (2000), The Year of Secret Assignments (2004), The Murder of Binky Mackenzie (2006), The Ghosts of Ashbury High (2010) by Jaclyn Moriarty
- Bloom (2007), Perfect You (2008), Soemthing Maybe (2009), Between Here and Forever (2011) by Elizabeth Scott
- What My Mother Doesn't Know (2001), What My Girlfriend Doesn't Know (2007), and One of Those Hideous Books Where the Mother Dies (2003) by Sonya Sones
- Gingerbread (2002), Steps (2003), Shrimp (2005), and Two Steps Forward (2006) by Rachel Cohn
- Suite Scarlett (2008), Scarlett Fever (2009) by Maureen Johnson
- The Summer I turned Pretty trilogy by Jenny Han
- The boyfriend list (2005), the boy book (2006), the treasure map of boys (2009) by e. lockhart
- The Nature of Jade (2007), In Search of Prince Charming (2009), Six Rules of Maybe (2010) by Deb Caletti

Caution:

It is easy to fall into the trap of categorizing books by gender. This may lead many to make assumptions about readers that prove to be false. Remember: girls may like “boy” books, and boys may like “girl” books!

Touchstone Titles

- Are You There God? It's Me, Margaret by Judy Blume (1970)
- The Cat Ate My Gymsuit by Paula Danzinger (1974)
- Forever by Judy Blume (1975)
- Are You in the House Alone by Richard Peck (1976)
- Homecoming by Cynthia Voigt (1981)
- Jacob, Have I Loved by Katherine Paterson (1990)
- The Face on the Milk Carton by Caroline Cooney (1990)
- Walk Two Moons by Sharon Creech (1994)
- Keeping the Moon by Sarah Dessen (1999)
- Angus, Thongs, and Full Frontal Snogging by Louise Rennison (2000)
- Dairy Queen by Catherine Murdock (2006)
- The Disreputable History of Frankie Landau Banks by e. lockhart (2009)

On the Horizon – Beauty Queens

In 2011 Libba Bray published a novel about a plane crash on island of teen beauty pageant contestants. More social commentary than a survival story the girls must survive, expose their secrets, and defeat an evil corporate plot. Bray tells their story with humor, while providing social criticism of reality television, beauty pageants, corporate culture, and politics. With e. lockhart's The Disreputable History of Frankie Landau Banks a new feminism is emerging in YA.

Thought Questions

- 1) What creates the idea that girls will read books with either boy or girl protagonists but boys will only read about boys?
- 2) Why are predictable romantic plots so attractive to female readers?
- 3) What trends in society are influencing the current trend to more emphasis on “real girl power”?

Boys Do Read

Do boys read? Of course they do, despite cries to the contrary. Research and anecdotal evidence suggest that boys read less and less as they hit puberty, with the idea that reading consists of narrative fiction or the reading done in school. Young adult males read magazines, informational texts, graphic novels, science fiction and fantasy, and hobby books. They may read manuals, game codes, box scores or comics in the newspaper, and email (or text messages) between friends. But are there books that boys will read? The answer is yes.

Before the advent of young adult publishing, books published for teen males were often series. Tom Swift was a popular series, first published in 1910. Next came The Hardy Boys in 1927 and Chip Hilton in the 1950s. Boys looked outside of series for good reads as well. The Catcher in the Rye (1951) was published for adults, yet teens quickly took it as their own. Holden Caulfield's journey, his disillusionment with the phonies (adults), and the general disaffected tone still speak to twenty-first century teens.

The 1960s changed the way publishers addressed teens, including teen boys. Titles like The Outsiders by S.E. Hinton and Robert Lipsyte's The Contender appealed to teen boys. Robert Cormier's titles published in the 1970s, including The Chocolate War and I Am the Cheese, have male protagonists coping with problems that teen boys faced: bullying, relationships with parents and peers, etc. Jay Bennett specialized in mysteries with male protagonists who actively solved mysteries and faced danger. While early young adult books broke barriers, these books eventually settled into a "problem novel" formula that had little appeal to boys.

In the 1980s authors emerged that had strong male appeal. Walter Dean Myers entered the scene with such books as Hoops (1981) and Fallen Angels (1988). Gary Paulsen brought adventure and a lot of teen appeal with Hatchet (1987), a survival novel that was soon followed by other man vs. nature titles. Chris Crutcher authored novels that focused on athletic young men coping with various problems, including racism, prejudice, abuse, and disabilities.

In the 1990s Will Hobb's wilderness adventure books attracted wide readership among teen boys. Jerry Spinelli wrote books filled with humor and insight, including Maniac McGee (1990). In 1998 Louis Sachar's Holes was published and became popular with all readers, particularly reluctant male readers. Holes became the 1999 Newbery Award winner and was later made into a successful movie. Paul Zindel began publishing horror/monster stories such as Loch (1994) and Rats (1999). In recent years the Alex Ryder series by Anthony Horowitz has been a sure-fire hit with reluctant male readers. As more and more attention has been paid to boys and reading, more booklists and books for boys seem to appear. Jon Scieszka started a reading initiative directed at boys called "Guys Read" (www.guysread.com) and has a book: Guys Write for Guys Read (2005). These resources provide lists that guys would be attracted to and to help them feel more comfortable with reading. Although this site is flashy, it sometimes lacks a good list of recommendations. A more informative site for the male teen is Dr. Danny Brassell's Lazy Reader's Book Club (lazyreaders.com). Dr. Brassell tries to recommend books that are 250 pages or less and books that will have appeal to reluctant teen readers. In 2005, a small group of Ontario, Canada school teachers established a website to support literacy for boys. Their site, boysread.com, includes many reviews that will appeal to reluctant teen male readers.

It is important to remember the role of science fiction and fantasy in boys' reading. Popular series include Orson Scott Card's Ender's series, Terry Pratchett's Discworld, Robert Jordan's Wheel of Time, Piers Anthony's Xanth series, Terry Brooks (any books), Philip Pullman's His Dark Materials, and of course J.K. Rowling's Harry Potter. In fact, these readers may frustrate teachers and parents who cannot convince them to read beyond this genre. Don't get frustrated. The important thing is that they're reading.

Another overlooked genre of reading for boys is informational texts. A young man who won't read anything else may spend hours pouring over a book on cars or a biography of their favorite athlete. In 1988 DK publishing introduced the Eyewitness series. The ample white space, graphics, and chunks of text proved a popular format and spawned more publishers to follow. Narrative non-fiction, such as Stiff: The Curious Lives of Human Cadavers by Mary Roach (2003) and Phineas Gage: A Gruesome but True Story About Brain Science (2002), have also proved popular with male readers.

Touchstone Titles

- The Contender by Robert Lipsyte (1967)
- The Chocolate War by Robert Cormier (1974)
- Hatchet by Gary Paulsen (1987)
- Maniac McGee by Jerry Spinelli (1990)
- Ironman by Chris Crutcher (1995)
- Harry Potter series by J.K. Rowling
- Monster by Walter Dean Myers (1999)
- Holes by Louis Sachar (2000)
- Alex Ryder series by Anthony Horowitz (2001)
- Eragon by Christopher Paolini (2003)
- The Lightning Thief by Rick Riordan (2005)
- Ball Don't Lie by Matt de la Peña (2005)
- Claws by Will Weaver (2003)
- Acceleration by Graham McNamee (2003)
- Demon Keeper by Royce Buckingham, (2007)
- He Forgot to Say Goodbye by Benjamin Alire Saenz (2008)
- Trouble by Gary D. Schmidt (2008)
- The Spectacular Now by Tim Tharp (2008)
- Pop by Gordon Korman (2009)

Thought Questions

- 1) Is there such a thing as "girl books" and "boy books"?
- 2) What are the dangers about making recommendations based on gender?

Spotlight: Guys Read

Guys Read is a program that was started by Jon Scieszka. He realized that so many boys fall behind in reading and don't count reading on their "Fun Things to Do" list. So Scieszka created Guys Read, a website and support group, to get boys to read. On the website (www.guysread.com), there are lists of books boys of all ages might be interested in. There is also information on how to form your own Guys Read group. These groups are basically getting teachers, librarians, and adults to pay attention to books that boys would like. The website provides free downloads of a poster, bookmarks, and stickers to help bring attention to this program. There are also good hints for adults when dealing with boys and literature.

Non-Fiction Options

- Phineas Gage: A Gruesome but True Story About Brain Science by John Fleischman (2002)
- Left for Dead: A Young Man's Search for Justice for the USS Indianapolis by Pete Nelson (2002)
- Getting Away with Murder: The True Story of the Emmett Till Case by Chris Crowe (2003)
- The Radioactive Boy Scout: The True Story of a Boy and his Backyard Nuclear Reactor by Ken Silverstein (2004)
- 10,000 Days of Thunder: A History of the Vietnam War by Philip Caputo (2005)
- The Trouble Begins at 8: The Life of Mark Twain in the Wild, Wild West by Sid Fleischman (2008)
- Chasing Lincoln's Killer by James Swanson (2009)
- Stitches By David Small (2010)

Series Titles for Young Adult Readers

Teen readers, as do younger readers before them, gravitate toward books written as a series but are often ignored by educators as they are perceived to be somewhat of a lesser quality than books written as individual titles. But series books are often immensely popular with readers. The comfort of not having to acclimate oneself to a new set of characters or a new setting with each book allows the reader to get right into the action or plot of the stories. Some readers are adamant about reading every book in absolute order. Because much of what is considered young adult literature ignores series fiction, librarians have some difficulty in managing it and in helping those readers know the series order of individual titles. Some books are written to a formula for the writing, but other series are fresh and unique. The familiarity of series reading is a great aid to developing fluency among readers and building confidence in the less-able reader. There are series of books for younger teens, for older teens, for males, for females, for horse lovers, for mystery lovers, and for everyone in-between. Bibliographic resources that might be of assistance include:

- Thomas, Rebecca L. and Catherine Barr. Popular Series Fiction for Middle School and Teen Readers. Libraries Unlimited, 2008.
- Levetzow, Maria. "Young Adult Books in Series and Sequels." Bettendorf Public Library Teens' Page. www.bettendorflibrary.com/bpl-bin/series.pl
- Mid-Continent Public Library—Juvenile Series and Sequels. www.mcpl.lib.mo.us/readers/series/juv/

Selected List of Popular Series for Readers

- Ranger's Apprentice by John Flanagan — A battle of good and evil finds Will at the center as a Ranger in training, a medieval CIA agent.
- Artemis Fowl by Eoin Colfer — Boy genius holds a fairy for ransom in the hopes of building his family fortune.
- His Dark Materials by Phillip Pullman — Children cross worlds to fulfill their destinies in this unforgettable trilogy.
- Sweep by Cate Tiernan — New boy Cal introduces Morgan to Wicca, where she discovers she is a "blood witch."
- The Clique by Lisi Harrison — Mean girls in middle school.
- Redwall by Brian Jacques — In this animal kingdom, battles of good and evil are center stage.
- Percy Jackson and the Olympians by Rick Riordan — The modern day son of Poseidon, Percy often finds himself on an adventure to save his friends, or even Mt. Olympus.
- Maximum Ride by James Patterson — Genetically engineered teens with wings must save themselves and fight the secret government lab.
- Chronicles of Prydain by Lloyd Alexander — Adventure and enchantment, epic quest tales where good conquers evil.
- Cirque du Freak by Darren Shan — Two boys visit a weird traveling circus and adventure ensues, from joining vampires to training large spiders.
- The 39 Clues by Rick Riordan and others — easy tween reads challenging everyone to find a treasure that will unfold across the ten-book series.
- Saga of Daren Shawn (Cirque du Freak) by Darren Shawn — mystery and intrigue.

More Series Titles

- Pretty Little Liars by Sara Shepard
- A-List by Zoey Dean
- Gossip Girls and The It Girl by Cecily von Ziegesar
- Alice by Phyllis Reynolds Naylor
- Discworld by Terry Pratchett
- Hatchet by Gary Paulson
- The Lord of the Rings by J.R.R. Tolkien
- A Wrinkle in Time by Madeline L'Engle
- Tales of the Frog Princess
- A Series of Unfortunate Events by Lemony Snicket
- Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants by Anne Brashares
- Sammy Keyes by Wendelin Van Draanen
- The Dark is Rising by Susan Cooper
- Nine Lives of Chloe King
- TrueColor series by Melody Carlson
- Twilight by Stephanie Meyer
- Young Bond by Charlie Higson
- The Circle Opens by Tamora Pierce
- Secrets of the Immortal Nicholas Flamel by Michael Scott

Author Series

- Caroline B. Cooney
- R.L. Stine
- Cynthia Voigt
- Phyllis Reynolds Naylor
- Lois Duncan
- James Patterson
- Anthony Horowitz
- Cathy Hopkins
- Ellen Hopkins

Spotlight: Meg Cabot

Meg Cabot was born in Bloomington, Indiana. From a very young age, she found, and loved, the library. After getting a BA from Indiana University, she moved to New York to be an illustrator. That didn't work out, so she began writing. She wrote for adults and teenagers, finding the most success with teens. She created The Princess Diaries series, which was later made into two movies by Disney. Other series include 1-800-Where-R-You (written under her pseudonym Jenny Carrol, now a TV series) and The Mediator. She has added new series: All American Girl, and Avalon High, as well as series for adults, such as Heather Wells mysteries that cross over well for older teens. She has written many other YA novels that have found success in the tween-teen market. Although her series are very formulaic, Cabot has found the way to make the modern Babysitter's Club or Sweet Valley High. New times call for new formulas, and Meg Cabot has found that new formula.

Keeping Up

Run, don't walk, to the nearest bookstore and inspect the teen series shelves. You may discover, as we did, no Sweet Valley series and no Fear Street series. Of course, this will differ from what you find, but a comparison of bookstore shelves with library series shelves will be quite revealing and the only way to keep your pulse on this ever-changing market.

Thought Questions

- 1) Check the circulation system of a library near you to discover what teen series circulate. Compare this with the impression of the teen librarian of which series are actually read. Do these two sources of data match? If not, why not?
- 2) Interview several teenage girls and boys about their preferences for series books. What percentage of their reading is series versus non-series?

Don't Judge a Book by its Movie

For many or perhaps most teens, movies have replaced books as the central focus of entertainment. We may complain about the "Hollywoodization" of literature that we are certain should have been experienced only as a print/personal experience, but most teachers and librarians are resigned to the fact that movies may be the only way to motivate teens to experience a real book. There are exceptions, of course, as the Harry Potter phenomenon or Lord of the Rings trilogy books-to-movie events have brought intense scrutiny into the filmmakers' interpretation. For these few exceptions, there is no end to the possibilities for discussion, comparison, and delicious controversy sparking both movie and literary criticism.

As anyone who has been to the movies lately knows, Hollywood is in desperate need of good scripts to feed their multi-billion-dollar industry. And Hollywood often turns to books for plots and ideas. We usually classify the tie between movies and books into three categories:

- Movies made from books in an attempt to be faithful to the original.
- Adaptations or modernizations of a book
- Original movies for which a novel appears close to the movie release date.

In the first category, Twilight, A Series of Unfortunate Events, the Harry Potter movies, Holes, or The Mighty (Freak the Mighty) try to stick as close to the books as possible given that a typical movie script is about 40 pages of dialogue compared to several hundred pages of feelings, actions and dialogue in the book. Just say to almost any teen: "The Fellowship of the Ring was the most faithful to the book, but I liked The Return of the King best," and you are sure to get a response that might make you wish you hadn't expressed an opinion. English teachers desperate to teach the classics often search for the best play-to-movie interpretation to help young people understand the plots so they can teach the nuances of the language and the deep meanings of the text as both film and word merge. For many teens, if they experience the "classics" at all, it is through film, and we hope they have seen a good one. History teachers may also use film adaptation to encourage the reading of books and the in-depth study of events. Examples include Schindler's List, Cold Mountain, Seabiscuit, or even October Sky.

In the category of adapted films, Hollywood takes great liberties with the original text to create something they feel will appeal to a modern audience. The most obvious example is Disney's adaptation of the story of Aladdin and the folktales of Snow White, Cinderella, and Mulan. Hollywood never tires of adapting Shakespeare as evidenced by 10 Things I Hate About You (Taming of the Shrew), O (Othello), and William Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet (1996 with Leonardo DiCaprio and Claire Danes). Sometimes Hollywood's version actually improves upon the book, such as Forrest Gump. In any case such adaptations provide plenty of opportunity for teachers and librarians to compare and contrast what Hollywood does versus the original intent of the author. For example, The Village was adapted from The Messenger by Phyllis Reynolds Naylor. Both versions are fascinating in their own right as they sometimes duplicate and at other times depart in the plot and action sequences. The latest rage is to use comic books as a source of plots, mostly adapted from the series as a whole. Titles include Batman, Spiderman, The Hulk, Green Lantern, Transformers, Thor, to name a few.

In the last category, original scripts are adapted to print as a promotional event corresponding with the release of the movie. We think of Star Wars and Star Trek that have triggered entire series of books because their movie scripts grabbed the imagination of audiences everywhere and left enough space for more stories to be told. Other successful movie novelizations include Whale Rider, The Matrix, Titanic, and Buffy: The Vampire Slayer.

To teens, informational books that supplement the movie are more interesting. DK publishing has had success with its Star Wars Visual Dictionaries and Cross-Sections. The Matrix (1999) was very popular with teens, and the two books, The Art of The Matrix (2000) and Beyond the Matrix: Revolutions and Revelations (2004), also have a teen audience. As special effects become more complicated, more books that detail the movie making find their way into the market. It is not surprising to find whole books on the making of...

There is now a whole new culture developing around movies and books as Hollywood tries to maximize its revenues. DVDs or Blue Ray with Director's cuts, accompanying books packaged with the DVD, websites, discussion groups, chat rooms, documentaries on making of the movie, and action figures are just a small sampling of spin-offs. These give plenty of room for movie-book discussions, screenings, read-ins leading to critical writing, and perhaps even teens creating a movie adaptation of their own.

YA Books to Films and Films to YA Books

Movie Title (Book Title)

- Confessions of a Teenage Drama Queen
- The Golden Compass
- Speak
- *Princess Diaries
- How to Deal (That Summer and Someone Like You)
- Whale Rider
- *Millions
- Holes (Book by Louis Sachar)
- I Know What You Did Last Summer
- The Outsiders, Tex, and Rumble Fish
- A Cry in the Wild (Hatchet)
- The Mighty (Freak the Mighty)
- Angus (Short Story in Athletic Shorts)
- *Because of Winn-Dixie
- Harry Potter 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6
- The Chosen
- The Seeker (The Dark is Rising)
- Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants
- The Chronicles of Narnia (3 movies)
- Hoot
- Twilight
- *Inkheart
- Alice in Wonderland
- The Last Song
- The Lovely Bones
- Disney's A Christmas Carol
- The Boy in the Striped Pajamas

* For a younger audience
To keep up-to-date on this genre, visit www.teenreads.com

Spotlight: Mean Girls

In 2002 Rosalind Wiseman published Queen Bees and Wannabees. The book was an exploration of emotional bullying and teen girls' social structure. The audience was composed of the parents of teen girls, and the book was a revelation to many.

Tina Fey, of Saturday Night Live fame, read the book and saw in it potential for a movie. She adapted the book for a movie, and in 2004 Mean Girls, starring Lindsey Lohan, hit movie screens across the United States. It was a novel idea: turn a pop psychology book for parents into a movie for teens. The outcome may have been considered less than successful. While the movie successfully illustrated the techniques girls use to manipulate and control one another, the overall message of the book may have been lost in the comedy of the movie. Still, it was an interesting experiment in crossover appeal.

Also published on the topic are Odd Girl Out (2002) (also a movie on Lifetime television) and Odd Girl Speaks Out (2004) by Rachel Simmons.

Thought Questions

- 1) What techniques could teachers use to explore classical literature through the use of film?
- 2) What types of activities centered in the library could capitalize on the interest of a teen blockbuster in the original book?
- 3) What book would you like to see as a movie? Who would star in the film?

Christian Romance and Literature

By Tracey Wilson

Most of the Christian fiction books marketed for young women tend to be romance stories. A great number of these books deal with the issue of sexual abstinence before marriage, a commonly held belief among many Christians that is based on Biblical passages. Understandably, this is a topic of much concern among Christian teens that find that most of their non-Christian peers are already sexually involved. These books deal with the reality of peer pressure and attempt to provide a Biblical perspective on relationships and intimacy. Christian romances usually describe situations in which the protagonist struggles with the pressure to become sexually involved, but with support from a network of Christian friends or family the protagonist finds that she can be romantically involved without having sex. Christian publishers tend to market books with similar themes in the genre, explaining why several books have only slightly different plots. For example, many of the female protagonists in fantasy or period romances were sterling models of Christian behaviour, and though they face various temptations, they successfully resist those temptations. Publishers know these are popular with a particular audience, so they continue to market them.

Upon saying that, there is an effort by authors to expand fiction romance to address a public that is embracing secular romances and romantic comedies. As a result, a number of series are loosely based on secular movies or books. For example, The Yada Yada Prayer Group series by Neta Jackson is a Christian version of the secular Ya Ya Sisterhood. In general most Christian fiction has a very strong thread of morality throughout. Conversion remains the backbone of evangelical stories, but more and more Christian novels being published today concern the messiness and issues of everyday life. Christian fiction has become less dogmatic and overt in an effort to embrace a larger readership.

Young adult romance is marketed to the following audiences: pre-teen and teen. Pre-teen romances are generally more “innocent” and predominantly deal with issues of friendship and first love. Romantic plots and sub-plots are less obvious and are not always the primary theme. In contrast, teen romance tends to feature a protagonist of marrying age and more complex romantic plots with more permanent outcomes. They are frequently more reality-based. Aside from age divisions, these romances can also be divided into the following categories: period romance, allegories, realistic fiction, and devotionals. Period romance takes place in a historical setting and portrays life as it most likely was experienced during that historical period. Allegories feature symbolic fictional figures and actions of truths or generalizations about human existence, and realistic fiction deals with modern issues confronted by today’s Christian teenagers: sex, peer pressure, body image, drugs, and other relevant issues. Devotional romances are typically written to be meditative and often pose questions to the reader intended to prompt reflection.

Christian Advice for Teens

There is no shortage of adult advice for the Christian teen on every aspect of teen living with a Christian perspective. Titles include

- God Wants You Happy by Johnathan Morris (2011)
- Getting to Heaven by Don Piper (2011)
- Max on Life by Max Lucado (2011)

A Sampling of Christian Lit

- Dickerson, Melanie. The Healer's Apprentice (Zondervan), 2010
- Martinusen-Coloma, Cindy. Beautiful (Thomas Nelson), 2009
- Mason, Mike. The Blue Umbrella (David C. Cook), 2009
- Pererson, Andrew. North! Or Be Eaten (WaterBrook Multnomah Publishing Group), 2009
- Samson, Lisa. Hollywood Nobody (Thomas Nelson), 2008
- Gohlke, Cathy. William Henry Is a Fine Name (MoodyPress), 2007
- Gunn, R.J. Whispers: The Glenbrooke Series (Multnomah Publishers), 1999
- Leppard, L.G. Mandie and the Secret Tunnel (Mandie Mysteries). Bethany House Publishers, 1983.

Thought Question

- 1) Can you make a list of YA romance books, not necessarily Christian, where the characters live high moral and virtuous lives as a part of their religious beliefs?

Web Resources

Best-selling author Robin Jones Gunn's website:
www.robingunn.com

Christian and inspirational fiction information and links:
www.overbooked.org/genres/inspirational/

Christian Romance Book Club:
www.heartsongpresents.com

Christy Awards: www.christyawards.com

Evangelical Christian Publishers Association:
www.ecpa.org

Other Recent Recommended Romantic Reads

Rue, Nancy. Motorcycles, Sushi, and One Strange Book. Zondervan, 2010.

Rogers, Jonathan. The Charlatan's Boy. Waterbrook Press, 2010.

Gunn, Robin Jones. Until Tomorrow. Bethany House, 2008.

Ryan, Carrie. In the Forest of Hands and Teeth. Delacorte, 2009.

Adima, Shelley. The Fruit of My Lipstick. Faithwords, 2008.

Samson, Lisa. Hollywood Nobody. NavPress, 2007.

Buckman, Michelle. Maggie Come Lately. NavPress, 2007

Carlson, Melody. Stealing Bradford. Zondervan, 2008.

Herald, Diana Trixie. Genreflecting: Christian Fiction. 6th ed., Libraries Unlimited, 2005.

GLBTQ Literature for Teens

Different studies suggest different numbers, but it is safe to assume that there are Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender, and Questioning teens (GLBTQ) in your classroom or library. The history of GLBTQ literature for teens is not unlike the history of young adult literature in general. According to www.glbtc.com only five novels were published in the eight years between 1969 and 1976, with gay and lesbian themes: John Donovan's I'll Get There. It Better Be Worth the Trip (1969), Isabelle Holland's The Man without a Face (1970), Sandra Scoppettone's Trying Hard to Hear You (1974), Rosa Guy's Ruby (1976), and Mary W. Sullivan's What's This About, Pete? (1976). But since then, the number has increased significantly. As the field struggles to catch up with mainstream titles, GLBTQ literature continues to be dominated by male characters in white middle class settings. But that has begun to change—just as mainstream young adult literature has emerged with more diversity than it once had.

Nancy Garden's Annie on My Mind, in 1982, created a milestone in GLBTQ literature when she wrote the gentle love story between two girls, which isn't to say it doesn't have its share of teen angst and eventual sorrow. However, the quality of the story redeemed it from being another problem novel in which the characters are punished for their homosexuality. While the two lesbian teachers are fired from their teaching positions, the main characters find some support from family and potentially find their way back to each other. In 2003 Nancy Garden received the Margaret A. Edwards award, largely from the strength of Annie. The '80s also brought readers Night Kites (1986) in which the main character's family struggles not only with the news that the oldest brother is gay, but that he is dying of AIDS. Other titles during that era, in which characters dealt with AIDS, placed the disease on family members instead of the main character.

A new era was ushered in when two decades ago, in 1989, Francesca Lia Block authored Weetzie Bat. Block introduced characters that dealt with their sexuality in a frank manner. It was not, however, the major conflict in the novel. When Dirk came out the result was a blended family: Dirk; Weetzie; Weetzie's Secret Agent Lover Man; his daughter, Witch Baby; and their daughter, Cherokee Bat. Ellen Wittlinger's Hard Love (1999), published on the cusp of the millennium, explored a new theme: a relationship between a straight boy with a crush on a lesbian. Titles began to appear in which gay and lesbian characters had healthy, productive lives; or openly gay characters face other problem-novel type issues.

David Levithan's book Boy Meets Boy (2003) introduced a world where characters not only know they are gay by kindergarten, but their homosexuality is accepted, the cheerleaders ride Harley's, and the quarterback is also the homecoming queen. Boy Meets Boy is light-hearted; it treats all characters equally whether they're gay, straight, or cross-dressing. In 2004, Julie Ann Peters published Luna, a story about a transgender teen, and three years later Ellen Wittlinger published Parrotfish (2007) about the same topic. In the new millennium Alex Sanchez, Brent Hartinger, Julie Peters, David Leviathan, and Brian Sloan consistently publish novels that show a diverse range of quality GLBTQ literature.

For a thorough and analytical analysis of history of GLBTQ literature read Melinda Kanner's essay on Young Adult Literature in the online publication: GLBTQ: An Encyclopedia of Gay, lesbian, Bisexual, Tranagender, e³ Queer Culture. The essay (updated August 2008) can be read at www.glbtq.com/literature/young_adult_lit.html

Titles to Consider

In addition to the titles cited in the preceding paragraphs consider reading the following exemplary GLBTQ teen books.

- Keesha's House by Helen Frost (2007)
- The Geography Club by Brent Hartinger (2004) Order of the Poison Oak (2006), Split Screen (2007)
- Wide Awake by David Levithan (2006)
- Will Grayson, Will Grayson (2010) by David Levithan and John Green
- Rainbow Boys (2001), So Hard to Say (2006), Rainbow Road (2005) Getting It (2006), by Alex Sanchez
- Keeping You a Secret (2005), Far from Xanadu (2007), Luna (2006), Rage: A Love Story (2009) by Julie Ann Peters
- Tale of Two Summers (2006), A Really Fine Prom Mess (2008) by David Sloan
- Empress of the World (2003), The Rules for Hearts (2007) by Sara Ryan
- Shine (2011) by Lauren Myracle

Spotlight: Julie Ann Peters

Julie Ann Peters spent decades establishing herself as an author of children's books. Having just completed Define "Normal"—the story of a psycho freaky punker and a "normal" teen—she was feeling quite successful. And then, in 2000, Peters's editor asked her to write a book about teenage lesbians falling in love. Peters was very surprised and very apprehensive. At first she thought writing such a book might be the death of her writing career. As an "out lesbian" she knew the subject well and also knew the need for literature that dealt with the subject honestly. But she also knew writing such a book was likely to change her life forever. And it did, but not exactly in the way Peters envisioned. Three years later, in 2003, Keeping You a Secret was released to stunning success. That success encouraged her to write more books for the GLBTQ teen reader. Peters's book about a transgendered teen, Luna (2004), was nominated for a National Book Award. It did not win but the experience was affirming for both Peters and her partner of more than three decades, Sherri Leggett. It was Sherri who inspired the character in Far from Xanadu (2005). Mike, a butch lesbian, falls in love with a straight female. This book, besides having the gay theme, is hilariously humorous. Between Mom and Jo (2006) is an exploration of the relationship between a young man and his mother and with his other mom. When the moms break up, the teenager is caught in the middle and wants to stay with his non-biological mom. Fortunately for him, his biological mom loves him enough to let him go.

More recently Rage: A Love Story (2009) explores a dangerous relationship between two teenage girls. In 2010, Peters explores another aspect of teen existence. The book, By the Time You Read This, I'll Be Dead, has the reader going along with Daelyn as he looks at "23 days and counting." Learn more about Julie Anne Peters and her books on her website www.julieannepeters.com.

Keeping Up—Professional Resources

The Heart Has Its Reasons: Young Adult Literature with Gay/Lesbian/Queer Content (1969-2004) by Michael Cart and Christine A. Jenkins (Scarecrow, 2006). Examines historical changes and critical commentary with annotated bibliographies of related fiction.

On the Representation of GLBTQ Teens

"It is not only a librarian's job to make this representation as welcoming and as accurate as possible. It is a librarian's obligation to do so." —David Levithan

From "Supporting gay teen literature: an advocate speaks out for representation on library shelves." School Library Journal. October 2004.

Teen Books in a Variety of Formats

In the wonderful world of technology, new formats have opened the doors for many teens to enjoy literature and non-fiction both for school and for pleasure. The most obvious format is audio books, which is now available as cassettes, CDs, or MP3 files for iPods or other listening devices. Still other formats, such as Braille, large print books, or e-books that can be either read by the user or read by technology to the user, provide avenues for those with disabilities and everyone else through devices such as the Kindle or iPad. Today, literally any print that can be shown on a screen can also be read aloud by a computer. This includes email, word-processed documents, and also pdf formats. Consider the many reasons for using these technologies to promote reading.

1. Teens with language difficulties
2. Learning disabilities
3. Visual problems
4. Teens who lag behind in comprehension or are challenged with normal reading
5. Teens who are accustomed to reading and writing online and to using Kindles or iPads.

Even to avid readers who have time to spare while riding in cars or buses or that just enjoy books being read aloud, audio books can provide a wonderful change of pace, particularly when the performers are exceptional, making an audio experience superior in some ways to the reading experience. For example, one thinks of Judy Kaye's reading of any of the Sue Grafton novels that bring Kinsey Millhone's personality alive. Or one can experience the Grammy-Award-winning Jim Dale's reading of the Harry Potter series. And then there are the Los Angeles Players' renditions of many plays read aloud that are understandable and exciting when done in the audio format. Few teens would read Away Laughing on a Fast Camel: Even More Confessions of Georgia Nickolson by Louise Rennison, but they would be fascinated by the hilarious audio rendition read by the author (Listening Library, 2005) in the real British flavor.

In any case for an audio experience, the reader is everything. Let us repeat: the reader is everything. Nothing is worse than a voice with a drone or a gushy overdramatic rendition. Once you've heard Jim Dale's presentation of Harry Potter, you know what high quality audio is, and you can use him as the standard to achieve by any other audio reader. The pace of the reading and flawless pronunciation are also important qualities for any audio reader. Some readers try to change their voices for different characters, such as Dale's 20+ voices for differing characters. Others are successful at reading multiple parts using cadence rather than vocal character imitation. By the time you have listened to 10 or more audio renditions, you certainly pick up the ability to judge quality when choosing audio books.

For books in unique formats, such as large print or print that must be spoken by computer or magnified by cameras such as Jordy or Kindle, working with individual teens with disabilities will provide a repertoire for what works and what doesn't work for particular individuals. All libraries and classrooms should have a variety of assistive devices to help open the world of print to every teen. And, don't forget the services to the blind from the Library of Congress. They are now distributing audio books as MP3 files that can be downloaded directly from their website and they have a new digital cartridge player (2009).

List of Great Audio Books

- Alchemy and Meggie Swann (2010). Read by Katherine Kellgren. Listening Library.
- Because of Winn Dixie by Kate DiCamillo (2001). Read by Cherry Jones. Listening Library.
- Bible Has a Voice (2008) Old and New Testaments; many actors. Zondervan.
- Eragon by Christopher Paolini (2003). Read by Gerard Doyle. Listening Library.
- Fat Kid Rules the World by K. L. Going (2003). Read by Matthew Lillard. Listening Library.
- Graveyard Book by Neil Gaiman (2009). HarperCollins Audio.
- Harry Potter books by J.K. Rowling. Read by Jim Dale. Listening Library.
- If I Stay by Gayle Forman (2009). Read by Kirsten Potter.
- Indigo Notebook by Laura Nesau (2009). Read by Justine Eyre.
- Maggie's Door by Patricia Reilly Giff (2003). Read by Fionnula Flanagan. Listening Library.
- Marcelo in the Real World by Francisco Stork (2009). Read by Lincoln Hoppe.
- Solace of the Road by Siobhan Dowd (2004). Read by Sile Bermingham (Amer.).
- Tree Girl by Ben Mikaelson (2009). Read by Amber Sealey.
- True Meaning of Sneakday (2010). Read by Bajmo Tir[om]/ Recorded books.
- Truth About Forever by Sarah Dessen (2005). Read by Stina Nielsen. Recorded Books.
- Wildwood Dancing by Juliet Marillier (2007). Read by Kim Mai Guest.
- Zen and the Art of Faking It by Jordan Sonnenblick (2007). Read by Mike Chamberlain.

Spotlight: Jim Dale

Jim Dale has been a performer his whole life. He grew up in England, and at the age of 9 Dale started to take dancing lessons. He performed in many amateur shows. By age 18, when he joined the Royal Air Force, he added comedy to his performance and entertained troops in England and Germany. Dale is a British pop phenomenon; he has been in countless plays, television programs, and movies. He has been nominated several times for the Tony award, winning once for his performance in the play Barnum. Dale has been the reader for the Harry Potter audio books, being nominated for the Grammy for each book. He won the Grammy for Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire. On a fun note, Dale also holds the Guinness World Record for the "Most Character Voices in an Audio Book." Dale's other accomplishments include being honored with a MBE (Member of the Order of the British Empire), Audie Award, and numerous Audio File Earphone awards.

Visit Dale's website at www.jim-dale.com

Companies Making Quality Recordings Available for All Readers

Recorded Books
www.recordedbooks.com

Full-Case Audio
www.fullcastaudio.com

Listening Library
www.listeninglibrary.com

OverDrive
<http://overdrive.com/>

In addition to these specific sites many book publishers are making audio recordings available and those are obtainable through the publishing house or through such venues as Amazon.com, BarnesandNobel.com, and Audible.com

Thought Question

- 1) What do you need to do to enhance your understanding of the world of audio or other technology assists to help every teen succeed in the world of print?

Self-Help Literature

Navigating teenage years is a difficult and confusing process. Teens have questions and face new situations that range from etiquette questions to relationships with friends, family, and the opposite sex. They have concerns about puberty and sexual health. They struggle with identity and finding a place in the world where they are comfortable. While today's teens seem more willing to talk to their parents regarding their questions, there is still a market and a need for materials that answers teens' questions and perhaps provide guidance as teens make their way through the turbulent waters of adolescence.

Originally, etiquette books seemed to be connected to debutantes and the upper class, but they have found their way into the teen market. While some etiquette books still cover topics teens are less likely to participate in, such as fox hunting and croquet, there are others that take a more humorous approach and cover topics such as relationship rules and hygiene. Free Spirit publishing publishes a set of How Rude! handbooks that cover rules of family life, dating, friends, and school such as: The How Rude! Handbook Of School Manners For Teens: Civility In The Hallowed Halls, 2004, or the The Teen Girl's Gotta-Have-It Guide to Embarrassing Moments (2007), and Talk Withy Teen About What Matters Most (2011)

Etiquette books are not the only self-help titles available. There are plenty of advice books for teens that cover family, relationships, sexual health and identity, drugs, and school. Gurl.com has a book for girls, Deal with It! A Whole Approach to your Body, Brain and Life as a gURL (1999), that covers body, sexuality, brain, life, emotions, religion, friends, and family. Mavis Jukes has several titles for girls as well as The Guy Book, An Owner's Manual (2002) in which she answers similar questions about life. Another title for boys is The Teenage Guy's Survival Guide (1999), which features graphic design and covers the topics common to advice titles. Boyology: A Teen Girl's Crash Course in All Things Boy (2009) combines advice with an attractive format to attract the readers' attention. The Girlosophy series cover a wide variety of advice across a wide range of topics. Check out the SOS series – Stressed Out Student's Guides published late 2000s. As one compares the earlier titles with the later ones, format, format, format is everything in an attempt to attract the current teen scanner/skimmer.

Puberty presents new issues and questions, and there are several health books that address the changes teens are experiencing physically. The classic What's Happening to My Body, 3rd ed. 2007, for boys and girls explain the changes of puberty as well as information on sexual health. Another popular title is The Teenage Body Book (2008).

Other self help titles fall more into the psychology area. Some titles deal directly with teen behaviors, such as cutting, eating disorders, and teen depression. Other titles are more inspirational and fall within the realm of the Chicken Soup for the Soul-type books, including Chicken Soup for the Teenage Soul (I and II) and Tasteberries for teens. Popular psychology books for adults often appear in teen versions such as Seven Habits for Highly Effective Teens (1998) and sequels, Knowing Me, Knowing You: The I-Sight Way to Understand Yourself and Others (2001), and Who Moved My Cheese? for Teens: An A-Making Way to Change and Win! (2002) or, The 6 Most Important Decisions You Will Ever Make (2008). The Top 20 Teens (2006) is targeted at teens but provides great advice for "teens" of all ages. Older teens will appreciate the popular Change the Way You See Everything through Asset-Based Thinking (2006).

Self-help titles for teens usually take a humorous approach to answering difficult questions. An excellent example of this is Shaw's What's That Smell (2005). While diverse in topic, and occasionally tone, self-help titles are an essential element of any collection for teens.

As with all advice, whether in a printed book or the plethora of websites, and, of course, personal friends, every teen needs to learn who ask basic questions: “Who is saying what to me, for what reasons, and for what gain?” Advice from spiritual advisors may be quite different than advice in teen magazines, books, or websites. Sources that recommend to teens that they consider advice from a variety of trusted sources before making major life decisions are preferable to sources that give advice freely with a decided bent. For example, who do I believe and take into consideration when trying to decide if I will become sexually active? Parents, spiritual advisors, friends, my boyfriend, a person of the same sex...

Core Titles

- Lewis, Barbara A. The Teen Guide to Global Action. Free Spirit Press, 2010.
- Bradley, Michael J. Yes, Your Parents Are Crazy!: A Teen Survival Guide. Harbor Press, 2004.
- Crist, James J. Mad: How to Deal With Your Anger and Get Respect. Free Spirit, 2007.
- Drill, Esther, Heather McDonald, and Rebecca Odes. Deal with It! A Whole New Approach to Your Body, Brain, and Life as a Gurl. Pocket Books, 1999.
- Fox, Anne. Can You Relate? Real World Advice for Teens on Guys, Girls Growing Up and Getting Along. Free Spirit Publishing, 2000.
- Heugal, Kelly. GLBTQ (Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender, Questioning): The Survival Guide For Queer & Questioning Teens. Free Spirit Publishing, 2003.
- Hipp, Earl. Fighting Invisible Tigers: Stress Management for Teens. Free Spirit, 2008.
- Hyde, Margaret O. Safe Sex 101: An Overview for Teens. Twenty-First Century Books, 2006.
- Jukes, Mavis. Guy Book: An Owner's Manual. Random House, 2002.
- Keel, Philipp. All About Me Teenage Edition: The Story of Your Life. Broadway, 2004.
- Lewis, Barbara A. A Teen Guide to Global Change. Free Spirit, 2008.
- MacGregor, Marium. Everyday Leadership. Free Spirit, 2007.
- Madaras, Lynda. What's Happening to My Body? Book for Boys: A Growing Up Guide for Parents and Sons. Newmarket Press, 2000.
- Madaras, Lynda. What's Happening to My Body? Book for Girls: A Growing Up Guide for Parents and Daughters. Newmarket Press, 2000.
- Schab, Lisa M. An Anxiety Workbook for Teens. Free Spirit, 2008.
- Volkmann, Chris and Toren Volkmann. From Binge to Blackout: A Mother and Son Struggle with Teen Drinking. Penguin Group, 2006.

Spotlight: Free Spirit Press

Free Spirit publishers offer a wide range of self-help books for teens. Free Spirit began publishing in 1983 with a mission to bring high-quality materials to help children and teens. Free Spirit focuses on self-help titles including books for learning populations, such as The Survival Guide for Kids with LD and The Gifted Kids' Survival Guide: A Teen Handbook.

The titles in the Free Spirit catalog include titles for professionals and parents as well as teens. They publish a number of items focusing on character education, behavior disorders, gender issues, and bullying in the classroom as well as titles on school success, test taking, stress, and service learning.

The self-help titles for teens include Boy V. Girl? How Gender Shapes Who We Are, What We Want, and How We Get Along (2002); Bringing up Parents (1992); Life Lists for Teens. Tips, Steps, Hints, and How-Tos for Growing Up, Getting Along, Learning, and Having Fun; and Wise Highs: How to Thrill, Chill & Get Away From It All Without Alcohol or Other Drugs (2006). The titles cover school, sexual identity, healthy alternatives to drugs, and other areas in which teens might have questions.

Free Spirit is not the only publisher producing self-help titles for teens, but it has been a leader in the industry.

Thought Questions

- 1) What role does the library play in developing teens' lives?
- 2) What are the issues teens struggle with and how might the library fill an information void?

Sports

Historically, sports books have been used to attract males to reading. There was Matt Christopher for younger readers and Thomas J. Dyard for older teenagers. Interest in sports literature has gained many enthusiasts in the United States and Canada, in the past decades. Currently the interest has gone beyond the major sports of baseball, football, and basketball. Teen readers have developed an interest in other sports, such as golf, rollerblading, skateboarding, soccer, snowboarding, BMX, and others. And females have become part of the target audience.

Mastering the Current Scene

Attracting readers demand books (and authors) who know the vocabulary and who have built a repertoire sufficient to attract the teen into the print world. Those writers who succeed in writing authentic stories/information books on sports topics will certainly attract the attention of avid sports enthusiasts who will revel in the authenticity.

Instilling the idea of sports in print might begin with the magazine shelf in libraries, grocery stores, and bookstores, plus the ESPN networks and sports news broadcasting on television. All are good places to start. Sports Illustrated is still the number-one title, but every popular sport from biking to snowboarding has a periodical trying to find space on the commercial shelf. Teens know these sources; ask them for recommendations. Look for ephemeral biographies of sports figures. Use the sports pages of both local and national newspapers as reading materials and parlay the interest into research and reading. Articles will often refer to other sources and to websites with more information.

Next, keep up-to-date on the sports movies that continue to be produced in Hollywood with a few classics such as Remember the Titans (2000), Friday Night Lights (2004), The Tao of Pong (2004), Grind (2003), and Million Dollar Baby (2004), and more recent favorites such as, The Final Season (2007). A great list of sports movies can be found at www.filmsite.org/sportsfilms.html.

Into the Book World

Beginning in 2011 the YALSA "Best Books for Young Adults List (BBYA)" evolved as the "Best Fiction for Young Adults (BFYA)" list. No sports books appeared on the BFYA 2011 list and few sports books appeared in BBYA lists. In 2009, two titles did appear. Tim Wendel's and Jose Luis Villegas's nonfiction title, Far From Home: Latino Baseball Players in America made the list. Matt de la Pena's Mexican WhiteBoy which used baseball as one of the story elements also appeared. No sports titles appeared on the 2008 or 2006 list, Alan Gratz's Samurai Shortstop (2006), a historical sports novel appeared in 2007. Currently, Chris Crutcher receives much praise from librarians who are interested in good sports-themed literature. There are a number of sub-genres in the sports book world. Baseball's Greatest Hit: The Story of Take Me Out to the Ball Game by Robert Thompson, Tim Wiles, and the most enthusiastic baseball fan, Andy Strasberg, will interest even adult readers. Together the three authors share fascinating anecdotes, musical renditions, and many inside tales about the 100-year history of this song first written by Jack Norworth. Younger teens will enjoy the reissue of Fred Bowen's All Star series; and five new titles in 2010, including the latest three: Throwing Heat, Dugout Rivals, and Hardcourt Comeback. Bowen writes fiction with a final chapter explaining the historical element used in the story. Great reads! Find out more about Fred Bowen and his books at www.fredbowen.com, including his illustrated biography of Ted Williams, No Easy Way.

Like Fred Bowen, Mike Lupica is a sports columnist. Younger teen readers will relish reading books in his "Comeback Kid" series. Readers who love sports will enjoy such titles as Hot Hand, Long Shot, Safe at Home, and others, while any player who has been cut from a sports team will identify with the situation in Lupica's Travel Team. Lupica's books deal with more than sports. For example: Safe at Home is a story of a foster child who loves baseball and readers find that "safe at home" has more than one meaning. Lupica's The Big Field explores father and son relationships. The Batboy takes on fallen heroes. Mike Lupica's website, www.mikelupicabooks.com, will provide additional information and a video of his appearance on his March 2010 appearance on the Today Show.

SPORTS – and connections

- Alphin, Elaine Marie. Perfect Shot. (2005) – mystery
- Bennett, J. Plunking Reggie Jackson. (2001) – romance
- Blumenthal, Karen. Let Me Play: The Story of Title IX, the Law That Changed the Future of Girls in America. (2005) – reference
- Brown, Gerry and Michael Morrison. ESPN Sports Almanac 2009: America's Best-Selling Sports Almanac. (2008) – reference
- Carroll, Lewis and Christopher Myers. Jabberwocky. (2007) – poetry
- Clark, Liz. One Helluva Ride: How NASCAR Swept the Nation. (2008) – extreme sports
- Cohen, Sasha and Kathy Goedeken. Fire on Ice: Autobiography of a Champion Figure Skater. (2005) – biography
- Cross, Shauna. Derby Girl. (2007) – problem novel
- Curlee, Lynn. Ballpark: The Story of America's Baseball Fields. (2005) – reference
- Dedijer, Jevto. Base 66: A Story of Fear, Fun, and Freefall. (2004) – extreme sports
- Deuker, Carl. Gym Candy. (2008); On the Devil's Court. (2008 pb) – problem novel
- Deuker, Carl. Runner. (2006) – mystery
- Feinstein, John. Last Shot: A Final Four Mystery (Final Four Mysteries). (2005) – mystery
- Ferruggia, Jason. Fit to Fight: An Insanely Effective Strength and Conditioning Program for the Ultimate MMA Warrior. (2008) – extreme sports
- Gibson, Bob, and Reggie Jackson and Lonnie Wheeler. Sixty Feet, Six Inches: A Hall of Fame Hitter & a Hall of Fame Pitcher Talk About How the Game is Played. (2011) – biography/information
- Gorman, Carol. Stumptown Kid. (2005) – mystery
- Grisham, John. Playing for Pizza: A Novel. (2007; adult) – mystery
- Gutman, Dan. Roberto & Me. (Baseball Card Adventures) (2010) – mystery
- Hawk, Tony, and Sean Mortimer. Tony Hawk: Professional Skateboarder. (2002) – extreme sports
- Heisuer, John. 100 Things Notre Dame Fans Should Know and Do Before they Die. (2009)
- King, Stephen. Blockade Billy. (2010 – macabre
- Klass, David. Home of the Braves. (2002) – romance
- Larsen, Christopher E. Paintball and Airsoft Battle Tactics. (2008) – extreme sports
- Mackey, Weezie Kerr. Throwing Like a Girl. (2007) – problem novel
- McKissack, Fredrick, Jr. Shooting Star (2009) – problem novel
- Morrison, Lillian. Way to Go! Sports Poems (2007) – poetry
- Murdock, Catherine Gilbert. Dairy Queen. (2006) – problem novel
- Parker, Robert B. Edenville Owls. (2007) – mystery
- Radcliffe, Paula. How to Run: All You Need to Know About Fun Runs, Marathons and Everything in Between. (2011) – information
- Reed, Rob. The Way of the Snowboarder. (2005) – extreme sports
- Rhodes, Dusty with Howard Brody. Dusty: Reflections of an American Dream. (2006) – biography
- Ripslinger, Jon. How I Fell in Love and Learned to Shoot Free Throws. (2003) – romance
- Sheen, Barbara. Danica Patrick. (People in the News) (2009) – biography
- Smith, Charles R., Jr. Short Takes: Fast-Break Basketball Poetry. (2001); Hoop Kings. (2004; 2007 pb) Hoop Queens. (2003; 2007 pb) – poetry
- Smith, Roland. Peak. (2007) – problem novel
- Sports Illustrated editors. Sports Illustrated: Almanac 2010. (2009) – reference
- Sports Illustrated editors. Sports Illustrated: The Football Book Expanded Edition (2009) – reference
- Takehiko, Inoue. Slam Dunk, Volume 5. (2009, Manga) – problem novel
- Todd, Anne M. Venus and Serena Williams. (Women of Achievement) (2009) – biography
- Vincent, Fay. It's What's Inside the Lines That Counts: Baseball Stars of the 1970s and 1980s Talk About the Game They Loved. (2011) – information
- Zusak, Markus. Getting the Girl. (2003) – romance

Selected Magazines for All Sports

Golf.Com (up-to-date news of the golf world) at www.golf.com

National Geography Adventure (Adventure and sports) www.nationalgeographic.com/adventure/

Sporting News www.sportingnews.com

Sports Illustrated www.si.com

Tennis Magazine www.tennis.com

Websites for More Sports Books

Plymouth District Library: plymouthlibrary.org/yasportsbib.htm

Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh: www.carnegielibrary.org/teens/books/sports.cfm

San Francisco Public Library: (sports fiction) sfpl.org/teen_blog/index.php?page_id=215
(sports non-fiction) sfpl.org/teen_blog/index.php?page_id=219

Spotlight: John H. Ritter

John H. Ritter grew up in the hills of San Diego where he spent many days playing “one-on-one” baseball with his brothers. His family was a “baseball family” but they also enjoyed music, poems, and enjoyed mathematics. His father was a sports editor for the San Diego Union. Ritter was only four when his mother died and his father moved the family to a rural area near the Mexican border. It was in those rural hills that Ritter began to imagine baseball games—to finish the action he and his brothers started. Those imaginary games entered into his writing life as he wrote Choosing Up Sides (1998) and told the story of Luke Bledsoe who is torn between his religion’s demand for him to use his right hand and his success as a baseball player using his left hand. Ritter’s success as a writer enabled him to leave his 25-year career as a house painter behind and to become a full-time writer. More sports books followed: Over the Wall (2000), The Boy Who Saved Baseball (2003), Under the Baseball Moon (2006)

One of his most recent books, The Desperado Who Stole Baseball (2009), brings sports to the Old West. In a rollicking narrative Ritter reveals the secret behind Dillontown and Cruz de la Cruz. Who is Cruz and what does Billy the Kid have to do with all of this? A Junior Library Guild Selection.

Learn more about Ritter at: www.johnhritter.com

Keeping Up

Websites to keep one up-to-date on the latest sports happenings.

- Sports Links Central—www.sportslinkscentral.com
- Sports Reference—www.sports-reference.com

Promote Reading —WrestleMania Reading Challenge www.pla.org/ala/mgrps/divs/yalsa/teenreading/wrmc/wrmc.cfm

Thought Questions

- 1) Should a collection of young adult literature include books about sports heroes that are destined to be short-lived? Why or why not?
- 2) Defend this comment: Young adults are often more interested in books that talk about the sport rather than fiction titles about the sport. What evidence can you cite to support your position?

Adventure and Nature

Early classic tales such as, Black Beauty by Anne Sewell (1877) and Call of the Wild (1903) by Jack London, were adventure stories that were basically animal and survival stories told from the animal's perspective. The “boy and his dog” genre was popularized by Fred Gipson’s Old Yeller (1957). Soon there followed: boy and his falcon, boy and his bear, and of course, boy and his horse. The popularity of such stories grew. Books in any genre, with female protagonists, were often lacking in action so animal/adventure tales attracted female readers who wanted to read interesting adventurous tales—although most human characters were still male. Lynn Hall contributed “girl and her horse” stories—and they became very popular, while Marguerite Henry’s titles, King of the Wind, Misty of Chincoteague (and others), were characterized by the historical events that were the basis for many of her stories.

The Western genre that began with James Fenimore Cooper, Owen Wister, and Cormac McCarthy evolved, in the 1950s (thanks in part to the movie hero John Wayne), into popular reading fare. Fueled by the novels of Louis L’Amour, the romance of the West and the American cowboy became popular topics. Largely written for an adult audience, young adults sought the adventure that they held.

When publishers began to recognize the young adult audience, success came with the survival novel. Teen readers relished the idea of being independent and self-reliant; being able to survive on their own without the help of (or interference from) adults. Building on the success with My Side of the Mountain (1959), a Newbery honor book, Jean Craighead George wrote Julie of the Wolves (1972) while Gary Paulsen found his own phenomenal success with Hatchet (1987) and dozens of other adventure/outdoor tales. As writers have begun to look for ways to tell stories, survival and adventure have mixed with fantasy—Airborn by Kenneth Oppel (2004), or set in a post-apocalyptic environment—Tomorrow series by John Marsden or Peak by Ronald Smith (2007). The 2007 Broken Key trilogy by Brian S. Pratt that included Shepherd’s Quest, Hunter of the Horde, and Quest’s End is a touchstone example of a fantasy adventure series for young adult readers. Elements of the Western genre are often incorporated into other types of stories. A recent example includes John H. Ritter who mixed the appeal of a Western with a 2009 sports book, The Desperado Who Stole Baseball.

Don’t overlook true stories of survival and adventure that appeal to teens with a wonderlust or just for a taste of real courage. From the classic retelling of Heinrich Harrer’s Seven Years in Tibet (1952; 1997) to the quest onto the highest Himalayan peaks in Peter Matthiessen’s The Snow Leopard (2008) these tales will stop the heart from beating. Historical survival tales include Slavonmi Rawicz’s account, The Long Walk: The True Story of a Trek to Freedom (2006), of a Polish prisoner of war who escapes from the Red Army (in 1939) and flees 200 miles, on foot, to safety.

Adventure of Another Kind

Sometimes an adventure goes astray and that is what happened when Greg Mortenson, an American nurse, attempted to climb the world’s second tallest mountain (K2). He returned from the mountain and his failed attempt, seriously ill for seven weeks. He was nursed back to health by Pakistani villagers. Three Cups of Tea: One Man’s Mission to Promote Peace . . . One School at a Time (2007) is Mortenson’s tale of his return to health and his promise to the Pakistanis who helped him. In Mortenson’s account readers meet many people. This book is best read for its inspirational value and the adventure—not necessarily for its literary value. It is captivating and full of suspense and adventure.

Adventure, Survival, and Environmental Episodes

- Allende, Isabel. (2002) City of the Beasts. On the hunt for a “beast” in the Amazon the supernatural and the natural cross over. Fiction
- Armstrong, Jennifer. (1998) Shipwreck at the Bottom of the World. Details Shackelton’s Antarctic expedition. Non-fiction
- Bauer, Joan. (1999; 2005) Backwater. Ivy is "different" and she thinks her long-absent aunt (a hermit in the mountains) holds the secret to her own differentness—a trip deep into the Adirondacks brings danger and face-to-face encounters with her own fears. Fiction
- Cowley, Joy. (2003) Hunter. A plane crash survivor alone on a deserted island shares visions with a Maori boy living in the early 1800s. Fiction
- Goldsmith, Connie. (2004) Lost in the Desert: The True Story of Four Families in California’s Gold Rush. Lesser known than the Donner Party, this tells the story of a group crossing Death Valley in 1849. Non-fiction
- Hobbs, Will. (2004) Leaving Protection. Robbie manages to get his dream job on a salmon fishing troller—but the dream soon turns dark when he discovers the captain’s secret. Fiction
- Hobbs, Will. (2006) Crossing the Wire. Fifteen-year-old Victor must deal with ruthless drug traffickers as he strives to cross the border, survive in the north, and provide for his fatherless family. Hobbs’s Far North (1996) is a classic survival tale. Fiction
- Junger, Sebastian. (1997) The Perfect Storm. In 1991, the Andrea Gail was caught in the “perfect storm” and lost at sea. Non-fiction
- Key, Watt. (2010) Dirt Road Home. The Hellenweiler Boy's Home is not what authorities think it is; and Hal finds it difficult to stay out of trouble.
- Krakauer, Jon. (1997) Into Thin Air: A Personal Account of the Everest Disaster. The story of the ill-fated climb to the top of Everest. Non-fiction
- Malnor, Carol and Bruce Malnor. (2009) Earth Heroes: Champions of the Wilderness. Eight environmentalists face dangers and struggles to protect the environment. Fiction
- Martel, Yann. (2002) The Life of Pi. A young man is caught on a life raft with a tiger. Fiction
- Mikaelsen, Ben. (2004) Tree Girl. Based on survivor’s accounts of the 1980s Guatemalan civil war. Gabriela Flores tells of her own survival and its aftermath. Fiction
- Neale, Jonathon. (2003) Himalaya. Alternating chapters detail a mountain climbing expedition. Fiction
- Northrop, Michael. (2011) Trapped. At first being snowed in at school was an adventure; but then the days and the snow kept piling up. The trapped teens faced a desperate decision.
- Niven, Jennifer. (2003) Ada Blackjack: A True Story of Survival in the Arctic. Non-fiction
- Paulsen, Gary. (1987) Hatchet, (1991) The River, (1996) Brian’s Winter, (1999) Brian’s Return and (2003) Brian’s Hunt. Brian survives a plane crash, in a river, with only his hatchet and fortitude. Sequels explore similar adventures/survival episodes. Fiction
- Ralston, Aron. (2004) Between a Rock and a Hard Place. After a climbing accident leaves him pinned, he must make a gruesome sacrifice. Non-fiction
- Read, Piers Paul. (1974; 2005) Alive: The Story of Andes Survivors. A team of rugby players crashed in the remote snowy peaks of the Andes (1972). Ten weeks later, only sixteen of the forty-five passengers were found alive. This is the story of those ten weeks. Non-fiction
- Smith, Roland. Elephant Run. (2008) An environmental, mystery, adventure tale. Fiction
- Torrey, Michele. (2004) Voyage of Ice: Chronicles of Courage. In the 1850s two teens find work on a whaling ship. Fiction
- Weaver, Will. (2001) Memory Boy. Miles and his family begin a new life in the wilderness after a cataclysmic volcanic eruption. Fiction
- White, Robb. (1972) Deathwatch. Stranded in the desert and being hunted by a man with a rifle Ben fights to stay alive. Fiction

Suggestions for the Near Adult Reader

Visit NileGuide: Top 50 Adventure Books of All Time at <http://blog.nileguide.com/2009/01/21/top-50-adventure-books-of-all-time/>

Two Real Life Adventure Stories — Not to be missed:

A Long Walk to Water: Based on a True Story by Linda Sue Park (2010)

Two lives — two parallel stories: Nya whose story (2008-09), in southern Sudan, is consumed by the daily trek for water; and Salva whose life is consumed by a more brutal quest for survival (1985-2009). An afterward by Salva Dut heightens the impact of this real life adventure and what comes after.

War Games: Based on a True Story of World War II by Audrey Coulombis and Akila Coulombis (2009) Inspired by Akila's family's experiences in Greece when the Nazis invade and a German commander takes up residence in the family's home, Newbery award winning author Audrey Coulombis and her husband craft a compelling tale. The family's ties to America and a cousin who has escaped the Gestapo, and who is hiding in a cistern at the family's home contribute to the heart-stopping adventure/suspense.

Spotlight: Roland Smith

When, at the age of five, Roland Smith received an old typewriter from his parents, his writing career began. When Smith was grown, he got a job at a children's zoo. He soon impressed the zookeepers with his ability to find and catch escaped animals and birds. At one point he decided that some of his experiences might make good books, and, eventually, he was able to have several of his books published. Some of his earlier books included informational books about animals in the zoo: whales, dolphins, porpoises, big cats, snakes, primates, elephants, and other animals. Thunder Cave (1995), Jaguar (1997), and Sasquatch (1998) became very popular adventure stories. The Last Lobo (1999) was the last of the thrilling action-filled environmental adventure featuring Jacob Lansa. Later books included fast-paced adventure touched with drug trafficking (Zach's Lie, 2001 and its sequel, Jack's Run, 2005), anthropology (Cryptid Hunter, 2005), and a quest to be the youngest person to reach the Everest summit (Peak, 2007), and Elephant Run (2008). In 2008, Smith published the first book of a new series, I. Q. (I.Q. Series). When Q's (Quest's) father marries 16-year-old Angela's mother, the two teens are faced with an entirely new life — adventure, suspense, humor, fascinating characters, magic, spy games, and martial arts. The second book in the series, The White House, was released in 2009.

For more information check out the author's website at www.rolandsmith.com. Check out Smith's Kindle book Legwork (2011)

Newer Western Titles for Teens

- Sacajawea by Joseph Bruchac (2000)
- Spanish Jack: A Novel of the Real People by Jack Conley (2001)
- Cowboy Ghost by Robert Newton Peck (2001)
- Stop the Train! by Geraldine McCaughrean (2003)
- Twelve Travelers, Twenty Horses by Harriette Gillem Robinet (2003)
- Blood Gold by Michael Cadnum (2004)
- Black Storm Comin' by Diane Lee Wilson (2005)
- The Misadventures of Maude Marche: Or Trouble Rides a Fast Horse (2005) and Maude Marche on the Run by Audrey Coulombis (2007)
- Cowboy Stories collected and illustrated by Barry Moser (2007)
- Adventurous Deeds of Deadwood Jones by Helen Hemphill (2008)
- I Witness: Hard Gold: The Colorado Gold Rush of 1859: A Tale of the Old West by Avi (2008)
- Bull Rider by Suzanne Morgan Williams (2009)

Readers who are serious about reading Western genre books should not miss the classic titles by Louis L'Amour, John Jakes, and Zane Grey.

Thought Question

What role does the outdoor adventure and survival novel play in today's increasingly developed world?

History and Historical Fiction

History is a story well told. Few (if any) history textbooks can compete with the stories of individuals that are connected emotionally with historical events. Today's selection of books includes an enormous amount of historical material leaving little excuse for lack of interest (or knowledge) by teens. The publishing world offers much to young adult readers.

Events

Specific events comprise the totality of history. Several authors zero in on significant events that shaped part of the historical landscape. Some powerful examples include:

- Susan Campbell Bartoletti's Black Potatoes: The Story of the Great Irish Famine, 1845–1850 (2001); and Hitler Youth: Growing Up in Hitler's Shadow (2005);
- Russell Freedman's Lafayette and the American Revolution (2010);
- Catherine Gourley's The Horrors of Andersonville: Life and Death Inside a Civil War Prison (2010);
- Gail Jarrow's Lincoln's Flying Spies: Thaddeus Lowe and the Civil War Balloon Corps (2010), and
- Sid Jacobson's and Ernie Colon's The 9/11 Report: A Graphic Adaptation (2006).

Time Periods

Teens are often required to research the life and times of peoples or countries. Cartographies of Time: A History of the Timeline by Anthony Grafton and Daniel Rosenberg (2010) crafts a lively history in their comprehensive history of graphic representations of time in Europe and the United States from 1450 to the present. Searching the Library of Congress site (www.loc.gov) and its American Memory section will yield more titles and suggestions for studying the decades.

Places

Atlases provide graphical representations of events that can help visualize geographic settings over a period of time. Derek Hayes and the University of California Press have worked together to publish several extraordinary historical atlases for regions in the United States and Canada. Representative titles include: Historical Atlas of the United States (2006), Historical Atlas of the American West (2009), and America Discovered: A Historical Atlas of North American Exploration (2009). Hayes's titles are noted for their comprehensive maps and the expansive text that provides information about the importance of maps in the history of area being examined.

Revisionist History

While many authors write sympathetic histories, usually of recent events, other authors create quite different interpretations of what really happened. For example, many Revolutionary War histories ignored the contribution of African Americans in the conflict. Clinton Cox adds information others have left out—information about 5,000 plus Black soldiers in the American Revolution, in Come All You Brave Soldiers: Blacks In The Revolutionary War (1999). Catherine Adams and Elizabeth H. Pleck focuses on the unique circumstances that faced Black women in Love of Freedom: Black Women in Colonial and Revolutionary New England (2010).

Primary Sources

Current research practices have put a new emphasis on the use of primary sources in addition to secondary sources—the best resource for primary sources is the Library of Congress' American Memory Collection. (Online at memory.loc.gov)

Oral History Recorded in Print

History is not just an account of happenings in far away places and people, but also, of places and people next door. Local history can be preserved after interviewing, filming, and recording events, and stories from members of the neighborhood. Teens might interview a World War II hero, the oldest mayor in town, grandparents, or even teen sports stars. Such experiences can lead to a fascination with both history and biography. Peter Hoehnic compiled a history of his community (Amana, Iowa) in Amana People: History of a Religious Community (2003). This book can serve as a model for parlaying factual information into a readable local history narrative.

Don't Forget Historical Fiction

Thanks to wonderful teen book authors, literally any historical time period can be brought to life with fictional stories. The line between history and historical fiction is blurred because so many authors use narrative in both fiction and information titles. Interest in historical fiction has increased dramatically in the last decades due to such authors as Avi (The True Confessions of Charlotte Doyle [1990]), Karen Cushman (The Midwife's Apprentice [1995]), Richard Peck (The River Between Us [2003]), Christopher Paul Curtis (The Watsons Go To Birmingham — 1963 [1995]), Laurie Halse Anderson (Chains [2008]), and Audrey Couloubis (War Games [2009]; See page 87 of this book.), provide a bridge from the world of fiction to the world of real history. For more information about the genre of historical fiction read "Getting It Right: Historical Fiction or Not?" by Sharron L. McElmeel. Library Media Connection, Jan/Feb2009, Vol. 27 Issue 4, p40-41.

History in Film

Numerous filmmakers try to document historical events or persons either loosely constructed on the facts or in some form of documentary. These films can spark conversation and further exploration as teens view the films. Some examples include Michael Moore's Fahrenheit 9/11 (an expose on George W. Bush), Thirteen Days (the Cuban Missile Crisis), Apollo 13 (a dramatic retelling of disaster), Schindler's List (concentration camps of WWII), Titanic, Seabiscuit (Depression era), The Patriot (Revolutionary War), The Aviator, and Cinderella Man.

Other Readable Histories

- Beah, Ishmael. A Long Way Gone: Memoirs of a Boy Soldier. (2008)
- Coventry, Susan. The Queen's Daughter. (2010)
- Giblin, James Cross. The Many Rides of Paul Revere. (2007)
- Klein, Lisa M. Cate of the Lost Colony. (2010)
- Lawton, Clive A. Auschwitz: The Story of a Nazi Death Camp. (2002)
- Murphy, Jim. An American Plague: The True and Terrifying Story of the Yellow Fever. (2003)
- O'Connor, Jane. The Emperor's Silent Army: Terracotta Warriors of Ancient China. (2002)
- Park, Linda Sue. A Long Walk to Water: Based on a True Story. (2010) See page 87 of this book.
- Sis. Peter. The Wall: Growing Up Behind the Iron Curtain. (2007)

Spotlight: Local History Photographed

In a variation on collecting only historical narratives, in 1984, Peter Feldstein photographed residents of a small town; twenty years later he photographed them again. Feldstein's photographs showed the passage of time while Feldstein's friend, Stephen G. Bloom, helped to mold the residents' words into a personal and collective history. Their book, The Oxford Project (2008), was named a 2009 Alex Award book and was included on many best book lists.

Thought Questions

- 1) What historical events captured in film represent the best and most authentic retelling of history?
- 2) How can a single historical fiction novel lead the way to a fascinating exploration of the time or period presented?
- 3) What historical museums are in your local area that teens could benefit from visiting?

Biography

Biographies allow young adults to explore the lives of other people and experience a slice of the time-period, often historical, in which the subject lived. An account of a person's life, whether written by someone other than the subject (biography) or by the subject him- or herself (autobiography) provides the reader with a view into another time period or culture. The setting in any biography must be historically accurate, but the focus must remain on its subject and the people who influenced him or her.

Traditionally, biographies were most often written about hero types who were intended to be models for the type of life young readers should live. Even if the subject was not entirely moral and worthy of emulation, the biography focused only on the positive traits. Jean Fritz became one of the first biographers for young readers to include some of the frailties of her subjects. Presently the standards for the biographies require a balanced profile of the subject, showing both their strengths and their weaknesses. James Cross Giblin does that remarkably well in Good Brother, Bad Brother: The Story of Edwin Booth and John Wilkes Booth (2005). Giblin manages to keep the focus on the Booth Brothers and their compelling theatrical presence. But the solid research also shows John Wilkes as a man consumed with his love for the Confederacy and the plots he and his colleagues hatched to kidnap Lincoln. It portrays John as a man who is impulsive and his brother as an actor whose life's accomplishments were always in the shadow of his brother's role in assassinating President Lincoln.

Subjects for biographies generally fit into three basic categories:

- Historically/culturally significant
- Contemporarily significant
- Ordinary people with extraordinary stories.

Many biographies are written about well-known figures whose influence and accomplishments will endure through generations. The biographies about them would be considered historically and culturally significant. Examples include:

- The Great and Only Barnum: The Tremendous, Stupendous Life of Showman P.T. Barnum by Candace Fleming (2009) — A brilliant account of the amazing and thrilling life of the great P.T. Barnum, the father of the American circus.
- Charles and Emma: The Darwins' Leap of Faith by Deborah Heiligman (2009) — A lively biography of the Darwins' family life of one of the world's most famous scientists.

A second category of subjects includes those that are significant in the current culture or political scene — contemporarily significant. The major claim to fame by these subjects is their present popularity or notoriety. Some retain a relatively small amount of significance but others are considered “flashes in the pan.” Barbara Bush, the First Lady during George Bush's presidency, was the subject of Arleen McGrath Heiss's Barbara Bush (1992). Interest in her has waned and the book is now out-of-print. She will be included in collective biographies of presidential wives so she cannot be legitimately considered a “flash in the pan.” Books such as Hilary Duff: A Not-So-Typical Teen by Nancy Krulik (2004), Christina Aguilera: A Star is Made: The Unauthorized Biography by Pier Dominguez (2002), or John Lennon: All I Want is the Truth by Elizabeth Partridge (2005) are books whose subjects may or may not be short-lived depending on their over-all contribution to society in general. Once the subjects' popularity wanes, so too will the interest in the presently popular figure.

Increasingly biographies are being written about ordinary people with extraordinary stories. Phillip M. Hoose wrote about Claudette Colvin, a young teen who sparked the Montgomery Bus Boycott (and Rosa Parks actions), in Claudette Colvin: Twice Towards Justice (2009). The diary of nineteen-year-old Thura al-Windawi records her account of the war in Iraq in Thura's Diary (2004). Adeline Yen Mah, a successful physician, writes about her childhood and struggles to rise above her family's perception of her as being “bad luck” after her mother dies giving birth to her. Chinese Cinderella: The True Story of an Unwanted Daughter (2001) puts a personal face on the struggle to rise above the cultural mores present in the Chinese culture in the 1940s. Claudette Colvin, Thura al-Windawi, and Adeline Yen Mah are ordinary people, but their stories are riveting tales with a unique perspective on a culture/period of time that many have only facts and outsider observations available.

Biographies/autobiographies regardless of the subject are generally of two types:

- Event Account— focuses on a historically or culturally significant event in a subject’s life. Russell Freedman’s Lincoln: A Photobiography (1987) focuses on Lincoln’s presidency while providing functional information about Lincoln’s life. Tanya Lee Stone’s collective biography, Almost Astronauts: 15 Women Who Dared to Dream (2009) focuses in on one period of the lives of 13 women who aspired to be among the first in space.
- Life Account— a birth to death (or birth to present) account of the subject’s life. In Daniel Tammet’s autobiography, Born on a Blue Day: A Memoir Inside the Extraordinary Mind of an Autistic Savant (2007), we learn of an extraordinary 27-year-old with an extraordinary mind and intriguing life.

Some teens are ready for the world of adult biography with its friendly, adversarial or reassessment of people in their times and places. It is difficult to find a better biography than David McCullough’s John Adams, Truman, or Mornings on Horseback: The Story of an Extraordinary Family, A Vanished Way of Life and the Unique Child Who Became Theodore Roosevelt (2001). Advanced teen readers will enjoy the magnificent writing and a picture of time, place, and personality that is unique to these complete and intriguing biographies.

Checklist for Evaluating Biographies and Biography Collections

- Language or dialect must be consistent with the time and place.
- Realistic and balanced approach— recognize warts and all.
- Equal representation in collections— Ratio of minorities in the collection and a representation of both male and female should be appropriate.
- Facts and details accurate.
- Facts and storyline are seamlessly presented.
- Source material acknowledged.
- Characters accurately portrayed without stereotypes.
- Writing is readable and interesting.

Other Significant Biographers:

- Russell Freedman
- James Cross Giblin
- Patricia and Fredrick McKissack
- Milton Meltzer

The Winter Park Florida Public Library has a list of links to many categories of biographies/autobiographies – Check out the links at www.wppl.org/teens/readnext_biographies.htm

Spotlight: Candace Fleming

On her website, www.candacefleming.com, Candace Fleming tells us that she became interested in writing and history in her elementary school days. She says, “History is really just an extension of my love of stories. After all, some of the best stories are true ones— tales of heroism and villainy made more incredible by the fact they really happened.” Her biographies have set a new benchmark for the genre. She combines facsimiles of tickets, posters, ledgers and other primary source material with solid research to compile stunning and incredibly interesting scrapbook accounts of her subjects: Ben Franklin’s Almanac: Being a True Account of the Good Gentleman’s Life (2003); Our Eleanor: A Scrapbook Look at Eleanor Roosevelt’s Remarkable Life (2005); Lincolns: A Scrapbook Look at Abraham and Mary (2008); and, The Great and Only Barnum: The Tremendous, Stupendous Life of Showman P.T. Barnum (2009).

Thought Questions

- 1) How can biographies contribute to the knowledge of a historical period of time?
- 2) Are biographies superior to or equal to historical fiction about the same person? How do the genres compare?
- 3) Can we consider memoirs to be biographies? Investigate and explain why or why not.

More Biographies (In addition to the titles included in the preceding narrative try these biographies, autobiographies, and collective biographies)

- Adler, David. Frederick Douglass: A Noble Life. (2010)
- Andreasen, Don. River Boy: The Story of Mark Twain. (2003)
- Angel, Ann. Janis Joplin. (2010) – 2011 YALSA Award for Excellence in Nonfiction for Young Adults.
- Armstrong, Lance. It's Not About the Bike: My Journey Back to Life. (2000)
- Beah, Ishmael. A Long Way Gone: Memoirs of a Boy Soldier. (2007)
- Belth, Alex. Stepping Up: The Story of Mark Twain. (2006)
- Bolden, Tonya. Maritcha: A Nineteenth Century American Girl. (2005)
- Caravanes, Peggy. Petticoat Spies: Six Women Spies of the Civil War. (2002)
- Chen, Da. China's Son: Growing Up in the Cultural Revolution. (2003)
- Cyrus, Miley, and Hilary Liftin. Miley Cyrus: Miles to Go. (2009)
- Edelson, Edward. Gregor Mendel: And the Roots of Genetics. (2001)
- Fleischman, John. Phineas Gage: A Gruesome But True Story About Brain Science. (2002)
- Fleischmann, Sid. Sir Charlie: Chaplin, The Funniest Man in the World. (2010)
- Fradin, Judith Bloom and Dennis B. Fradin. 5,000 Miles to Freedom: Ellen and William Craft's Flight From Slavery. (2006)
- Gibling, James Cross. Life and Death of Adolf Hitler. (2002)
- Gibling, James Cross. The Rise and Fall of Senator Joe McCarthy. (2009)
- Goldberg, Enid A., and Norman Itzkowitz. Vlad the Impaler: The Real Count Dracula. (2008)
- Greenberg, Jan. Vincent Van Gogh: Portrait of an Artist. (2003)
- Harness, Cheryl. Rabble Rousers: 20 Women Who Made a Difference. (2003)
- Heiligman, Deborah. Charles and Emma: The Darwins' Leap of Faith. (2008)
- Helfer, Andrew. Malcolm X: A Graphic Biography. (2006)
- Kirkpatrick, Katherine. The Snow Baby. (2006)
- Kamkwamba, William and Bryan Mealer. The Boy Who Harnessed the Wind: Creating Currents of Electricity and Hope. (2010)
- Lasky, Kathryn. A Voice of Her Own: The Story of Phillis Wheatley, Slave Poet. (2003)
- Lipsyte, Robert. Heroes of Baseball: The Men Who Made it America's Favorite Game. (2006)
- Lutes, Jason. Houdini: The Handcuff King. (2007)
- Macdermot, Molly. Mandy Moore: The Unofficial Book. (2000)
- Murphy, Jim. The Real Benedict Arnold. (2007)
- Oppenheim, Joanne. Dear Miss Breed: True Stories of the Japanese American Incarceration During World War II and A Librarian Who Made A Difference. (2006)
- Reef, Catherine. e.e. cummings: a poet's life. (2006)
- Robinson, Sharon. Promises to Keep: How Jackie Robinson Changed America. (2004)
- Rubin, Susan Goldman. Searching for Anne Frank: Letters from Amsterdam to Iowa. (2003)
- Sinnott, Susan. Extraordinary Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders. (2003)
- Small, David. Stitches: A Memoir. (2009)
- Spitz, Bob. Yeah! Yeah! Yeah!: The Beatles, Beatlemania, and the Music That Changed the World. (2007)
- Thomas, Garen. Yes We Can: A Biography of President Barack Obama. (2009)
- Wooldridge, Connie. The Brave Escape of Edith Wharton: A Biography. (2010)
- Zenatti, Valérie. When I Was A Soldier: A Memoir. (2005)

Real Science and Technology

In elementary school libraries, books about animals are prevalent, plus topics such as dinosaurs and picture books on space, rockets, and other amazing phenomenon. Somewhere between childhood and the teenage years, interest in science seems to wane. Difficulty in building any science or technology collection and promoting it to teens is partially the result of the speed at which volumes and even websites go out of date. Couple that with the new discoveries and scientific theories that crumble almost yearly and we know we must evaluate carefully the material we offer young adult readers. Despite those factors science teachers interested in extending student learning beyond the textbook will find many possibilities. For example, a biology teacher who introduces his/her students to Nancy Werlin's Double Helix will find students often develop a renewed interest in genetic engineering. Consider the following categories in which to find titles of interest to teens:

- The way things work
- Lavishly illustrated books of space or the micro worlds under a microscope
- Computer graphics and special effects in movies
- Books of the ocean depths
- Natural disasters such as volcano eruptions, earthquakes, or tornados
- Reference books on diseases that affect teenagers such as AIDS, addictions, or depression
- Career resources in science and technology
- Interactive science experiments going on in real time by National Geographic or others
- Materials for Science Fair competitions

Perhaps the best materials to promote to teenagers are the fabulous websites created by science laboratories. Many of these sites provide not only reports and science news that teens can use, but are wonderful resources for data and include lavish photographs that teens can use to enhance reports for research.

Many teens are involved in science fairs and require information far beyond what could be contained in a school or public library. In this case, teachers and librarians should develop links to sophisticated scientific databases accessible, for the most part, through colleges and universities or science labs. These organizations are usually quite willing to help budding science investigators. One is reminded of such help in the book, Rocket Boys by Homer Hickam and its companion movie October Sky, when a teenager corresponds with Werner Von Braum about the construction of rocket nozzles. Today, many scientists are willing to mentor young people via email.

It is quite possible to stimulate the interest of teens in space as they view Apollo 15 and recognize both the challenge and the drama that has played out in many scientific discoveries and technological experiments. Teens are also easily interested in scientific controversies, such as cloning, stem cell research, or creationism vs. intelligent design. When teens become involved in actual experiments such as participatory data collection of the local environment these teens will be seeking information of all types as they discover careers and interests for themselves. Teachers and librarians who know good search techniques and resources will find an audience of eager-seeking friends.

Check out these favorites:

- Barretta, Gene. Neo Leo: The Ageless Ideas of Leonardo da Vinci. (2009)
- Carter, Rita. The Human Brain book: An Illustrated Guide to its Structure, Function, and Disorders. (2009)
- Cassino, Mark. The Story of Snow: The Science of Winter's Wonder. (2009)
- Cox, Caroline. The Fight to Survive: A Young Girl, Diabetes, and the Discovery of Insulin. (2009)
- Dunphy, Madeleine. At Home with the Gopher Tortoise. (2010)
- Hughes, Susan. Case Closed? (2010)
- Kean, Sam. The Disappearing Spoon: And Other True Tales of Madness, Love and the History of the World from the Periodic Table of Elements. (2010)
- Mortensen, Lori. Come See the Earth Turn. (2010)
- Montgomery, Syd. Saving the Ghost of the Mountains: An Expedition Among Snow Leopards in Mongolia. (2009)
- Novian, Claire. The Deep: The Extraordinary Creatures of the Abyss. (2007)
- Reed, Jim. Storm Chaser: A Photographer's Journey. (2007)
- Roach, Mary. Packing for Mars: The Curious Science of Life in the Void. (2010)
- Sidman, Joyce. Dark Emperor and Other Poems of the Night. (2010)
- Skloot, Rebecca. The Immortal Life of Henrietta Lacks. (2010)
- Walker, Sally M. Written in Bone: Buried Lives of Jamestown and Colonial Maryland. (2009)

Keeping Up

- The periodical Appraisal: Science Books for Young People provides reviews from two perspectives: one from a librarian and the other from a scientist. An invaluable resource for collection development for children through adults.
- Great Resource Magazines:
 - Scientific American (www.scientificamerican.com)
 - National Geographic (ngm.nationalgeographic.com)
 - Smithsonian Air and Space Magazine (www.airspacemag.com)
 - Popular Science (www.popsoci.com)

Thought Questions

- 1) Survey a few teens about their interest in science and technology. Then, on any topic, find 3 websites that would dazzle their curiosity. What is their reaction as you introduce them to such sources?
- 2) How can teachers and librarians work together to link teenagers to the best and most accurate science resources on the web? And to connect readers to science related books?

Spotlight: Science Sites Online

We challenge you to go to NASA's website (www.nasa.gov) and not be interested or excited about what you find there. NASA has individual links for Students, Educators, Media, and more. NASA's Kids' Club section often includes simple introductions to topics YA readers might find of interest. NASA's has articles about hurricanes, roller coasters, explanations of why astronauts float in space, pictures from the Hubble Telescope, and the latest in astronomy discoveries. The site is easy to navigate and fun for many ages.

Other sites to examine include:

- Centers for Disease Control and Prevention — www.cdc.gov
- Smithsonian Institute (including the Air and Space Museum) — www.smithsonian.org
- National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's National Weather Service — www.nws.noaa.gov

Science Fiction

Robert A. Heinlein defines science fiction as speculative fiction based on the real world with all its established facts and natural laws. To elaborate this definition, the author of science fiction creates a world governed by the laws of science insofar as science is known at the time of authoring. This fictional world may be placed in past, present, or future time containing all sorts of characters and amazing elements, but the order of that created world is governed by scientific law.

Science fiction has had an amazing history. Consider the following landmarks:

- Mary Shelley's Frankenstein in 1818.
- Jules Vern with Journey to the Center of Time (1864) and Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea (1870).
- H.G. Wells with The Time Machine (1895) and War of the Worlds, the book in 1898, the radio version in 1938, a movie in 1953, and a remake of the movie in 2005.

With the turn of the 20th century, interest in science fiction began to develop with Hugo Gernsback's magazine Nidarb Ekelectronics. Gernsback coined the term "science fiction" and the Hugo awards, awards for outstanding science fiction stories and novels, was named after him. C.S. Lewis tried his hand in the genre with Out of the Silent Planet in 1938. After World War II, science fiction exploded:

- Ray Bradbury with The Martian Chronicles (1950)
- Jack Finney with his film Invasion of the Body Snatchers (1956)
- Robert A. Heinlein with Stranger in a Strange Land (1960)
- Arthur C. Clarke with both Rama series (1970s–1990s) and 2001: A Space Odyssey (1968)
- Isaac Asimov with his Foundation trilogy (1942–1950, published as one in 1950)

In the late 1970s, a movie by the name of Star Wars doubled the fans of science fiction overnight. Lucas's hit released two more movies in the 1980s and recently released the prequels in the 21st century. The 1980s also saw hits in the science fiction genre with Star Trek: The Next Generation. Recently, science fiction continues to be popular with such authors as Douglas Adams (Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy series, radio and TV series, and movie in 2005), Greg Bear, John Varley, Connie Witlis, and Mary Zimmer Bradley. Basic science fiction themes include alien invasion, overpopulation, technology run amok, revolt against conformity, religion, strong women characters, human and computer interaction, and shared universe.

Enthusiasts of either Science Fiction or Fantasy claim to know the difference between the two genres, and either love the one or disdain the other. For the purist, the difference between Science Fiction and Fantasy revolves around a strict definition. In reality, authors seem to dip in and out of scientific or created worlds with enough frequency that the two genres seem to blend at times.

Try these resources:

- Classics of Science Fiction and Fantasy Literature. Ed. Fiona Kelleghan. Salem Press, Inc., 2002. 2 volumes.
- The Year's Best Science Fiction and Fantasy for Teens: First Annual Collection (Year's Best Science Fiction and Fantasy for Teens). Ed. Jane Yolen and Patrick Nielsen Hayden. Tor Books, 2005.
- Science Fiction and Fantasy Writers of America—www.sfwaworld.org
- Science Fiction Resource Guide—sf.emse.fr/SFRG/

- Blastr — an online journal and entertainment site at blastr.com
- Tamora Pierce’s site for science fiction recommendations for gifted readers at www.tamora-pierce.com/recbooks/giftedsf.htm
- Burns, Michael. Digital Sci-Fi Art: A Step-by-Step to Creating Stunning, Futuristic Images. Harper Design, 2004.

Authors to Know

- Paul Anderson
- Piers Anthony
- Issac Asimov
- Clive Barker
- Ray Bradbury
- Marion Zimmer Bradley
- Terry Brooks
- Orson Scott Card
- Arthur C. Clark
- David Eddings
- Barbara Hambly
- Harry Turtledove
- Robert Jordan
- Anne McCaffrey
- George Orwell
- Frederik Pohl
- Terry Pratchett
- Jules Verne

Spotlight: William Sleator

William Sleator is a master at creating science fiction books. His first was House of Stairs (1974), and it set a new standard for writers. Sleator says, “Although I invented the plot and the setting, the characters in that book were all based on people I knew.” Sleator grew up in St. Louis, Missouri but now splits his time between Boston and Thailand (near Bangkok).

His many books of science fiction include The Beasties (1999), Singularity (1985), and The Green Futures of Tychon (1981). In regards to writing that science fiction, William Sleator has said, “The challenge is to try to make the parts you invent as believable as the scientific laws you are using. If you succeed, then you are giving the reader something that is magical and fantastic but at the same time might actually be possible.” With that quote Sleator defines the very essence of science fiction — something magical and fantastic but still within the realm of scientific possibility.

21st Century YA Science Fiction

- Feed by MT Anderson
- The Last Book in the Universe by Rodman Philbrick
- Spacer and Rat by Margaret Bechard
- Double Helix by Nancy Werlin
- Uglies series by Scott Westerfeld
- The Hunger Games series by Suzanne Collins

Golden Duck Awards: Hal Clement Award for Young Adults Subdivision

- 2010 — Sawyer, Robert J. WWW.Watch.
- 2009 — Collins, Suzanne. The Hunger Games. and Doctorow, Cory. Little Brother
- 2008 — Brin, David. Sky Horizon.
- 2007 — Hautman, Pete. Rash.
- 2006 — Pulse, Simon. Uglies.
- 2005 — Lee, Sharon and Steve Miller. Balance of Trade.
- 2004 — Turtledove, Harry. Gunpowder Empire

Hugo Award Novels

- 2010 — The City e3 The City by China Miéville and The Windup Girl by Paolo Bacigalupi
- 2009 — The Graveyard Book by Neil Gaimon
- 2008 — The Yiddish Policemen’s Union by Michael Chabon
- 2007 — Rainbows End by Vernor Vinge
- 2006 — Spin by Robert Charles Wilson

Hugo Awards (World Science Fiction Society): www.thehugoawards.org

Thought Questions

- 1) Why does science fiction seem to capture the attention of many teen boys?
- 2) If parents express concern about teens reading too much science fiction, what would you recommend?

Fantasy

If teachers and librarians can't hook teens onto science fiction, there is another option. Fantasy, or fantastic fiction, is often more popular than science fiction. Fantasy authors do not operate on the restrictive rules of science. However, as they create the worlds, civilizations, or characters, the authors are required to build the rules of their society/place and then consistently apply those rules throughout the story. For example, in The Lord of the Rings we meet various groups such as Orcs, Elves, Dwarves, and Hobbits, each with their own physical and social characteristics and interactions that last throughout the entire trilogy. Fantasy stories most often center around one of the following themes:

- The Quest—The hero is sent on a mission to conquer obstacles, to seek a destiny, or to capture a prize.
- Good vs. Evil—The classic clash between the force and its dark side.
- Time Travel—Forward or back, or perhaps both.
- Animal fantasy—The rabbits of Watership Down or Brian Jacques's Redwall characters.
- Utopias and Distopias—Perfect societies or broken ones.
- King Arthur legend—There will never be an end, even though Sean Connery tried.

Consider the following landmarks in fantasy:

- Homer's Odyssey
- Old English poem Beowulf
- Sir Thomas Malory's Le Morte D'Arthur
- Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream
- Gulliver's Travels by Jonathan Swift (1726)
- Brother's Grimm and other fairy tale authors
- Lewis Carroll's Alice's Adventures in Wonderland (1865)

Fantasy really began to find its footing with the following titles:

- The Hobbit and The Lord of the Rings trilogy by J.R.R. Tolkien (1954)
- C.S. Lewis's Chronicles of Narnia
- Ursula K. LeGuin's Earthsea series

Fantasy short fiction was usually published in science fiction magazines. This all changed in 1949 when the first issue of Magazine of Fantasy & Science Fiction was published. The latter half of the century saw a boost to the fantasy genre. Terry Brooks's Sword of Shannara in 1977 was hugely popular and made bestseller lists. Since then, fantasy has only grown and will continue to do so. With the rise of film, attention is brought to the classics of fantasy, and readership is booming.

Teen readers of fantasy seem to feel that the longer the books are, the better. They will judge a library's collection based on how many complete series there are on the shelves—and how much shelf space is devoted to fantasy and fantasy-related titles.

Here are some selected titles that teens will enjoy:

- Engle, Jason. Infernum: The Art of Jason Engle. Paper Tiger, 2004.
- Black, Holly. Valient: A Modern Tale of Faerie. Simon Pulse, 2005.
- Larbalestier, Justine. Magic or Madness. Penguin/Razorbill, 2005.
- Vaz, Mark Cotta. Twilight: The Complete Illustrated Movie Companion. Brown Young Readers, 2008.

Classic High Fantasy Series

- J. R. R. Tolkien's The Lord of the Rings (set in Middle-earth)
- Terry Brooks's The Sword of Shannara and its sequels
- Lord Dunsany's The King of Elfland's Daughter
- David Eddings's Belgariad and The Malloreon
- Robert Jordan's The Wheel of Time series
- Ursula K. Le Guin's A Wizard of Earthsea and its sequels
- George R. R. Martin's A Song of Ice and Fire series
- Margaret Weis's and Tracy Hickman's Dragonlance series
- Roger Zelazny's Amber series

A List of Recent Great New Fantasy to Consider

- Constable, Kate. The Tenth Power. (2007)
- Fisher, Catherine. Day of the Scarab. The Oracle Prophecies: Book Three. (2006)
- Pratchett, Terry. Wintersmith. (2006)
- Stroud, Jonathan. Ptolemy's Gate: Bartimaeus Trilogy Book 3. (2007)
- Hale, Shannon. The Goose Girl. (2005)
- Riordan, Rick. The Last Olympian (Percy Jackson and the Olympians, Book 5). (2009)
- Neff, Henry H. The Fiend and the Forge: Book Three of The Tapestry. (2010)

Thought Questions

- 1) What is the major reason that most teens find so captivating about fantasy?
- 2) What would a top ten list of fantasy titles be for teenagers you know?

Spotlight: Christopher Paolini

A teenage writer rode the popularity of Rowling's epic fantasy tales by making a mark for himself in the world of young adult fantasy fiction. Christopher Paolini first self-published his book, Eragon (2003). It was soon picked up by Random House and was marketed as "Book One of the Inheritance Trilogy." He began the book when he was a fifteen-year-old home-schooled student in Montana. The book was widely published by the time he was nineteen. He was a guest on several national talk shows—partially because of his young age and partially because of the following his book garnered at the early stages of its release. Eldest, the second book in the Inheritance trilogy, was released in 2005. Eragon the movie premiered in London on December 11, 2006. The third book, Briar, arrived September 20, 2008. The fourth book, Inheritance, will arrive November 2011. For more information, visit the official book site at www.alagaesia.com.

J.K. Rowling and the Harry Potter Frenzy

J.K. Rowling and her immensely popular Harry Potter series hardly need mentioning. However, we would be remiss in not acknowledging the tremendous influence her books have had on the genre of fantasy and reading in general. On July 21, 2007, the seventh, and last, book in the series, Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows was released. It reportedly sold over 11 million copies in the first 24 hours with lines at many bookstores reaching around the block. Although the books grew increasingly darker and seemed aimed at an older audience, readers from second grade through adult embraced each book and enjoy the movies based on the books.

Learn all about J.K. Rowling and her writing by visiting her official website at www.jkrowling.com

Top 10 Fantasy Books from Fantasy 100*

1. Lord of the Rings Trilogy by J.R.R. Tolkien
2. Harry Potter Series by J.K. Rowling
3. The Hobbit by J.R.R. Tolkien
4. A Song of Ice & Fire by George R.R. Martin
5. Wheel of Time Series by Robert Jordan
6. The Lion, the Witch, and the Wardrobe by C.S. Lewis
7. The Belgariad Series by David Eddings
8. Wizard's First Rule by Terry Goodkind
9. Magician by Raymond E. Feist
10. His Dark Materials Trilogy by Phillip Pullman

*Website: home.austarnet.com.au/petersykes/fantasy100/lists_books.html

Mysteries and Horror for Teens

When the Stratemeyer Syndicate began publishing series, they recognized the popularity of mystery with children and introduced The Hardy Boys and Nancy Drew. As the young adult market published for teens the genre was there too. Teens became fans of mysteries (and suspense). The literature teens experience as young readers lays the groundwork for the literature that teens know and read.

The main genre of mystery has many subgenres including suspense, horror, and thrillers. In the past few years, the subgenres of suspense and supernatural have topped the popularity charts. Mysteries primarily focus on the “whodunit” aspect of a crime. Clues are revealed, sometimes false clues (red herrings), and in the end all is revealed. In suspense titles readers know the culprit of the crime and the suspense builds around the interaction the unsuspecting characters have with the villain. Most spy novels are thrillers in which the hero must stop some major act and save the world. Spy novels are impacted by current politics as villains have changed from Nazis, to KGB, to Al-Qaeda style terrorists. Supernatural and horror novels often play on the psychological elements of human nature. Supernatural fiction accepts the presence of witches, vampires, werewolves, and other supernatural creatures, but it doesn't treat them as evil monsters at all times.

Over time authors have published single mystery or suspense stories, but there have been several authors who have published multiple titles. In earlier decades, Jay Bennett published more than fourteen traditional mysteries in which the characters struggled to decipher clues and solve the riddle. During the same time Lois Duncan was also writing mysteries, including I Know What You Did Last Summer (1973) and Killing Mr. Griffin (1978). Joan Lowery Nixon also published prolifically, mostly in the '80s and '90s. Nixon's titles included The Kidnapping of Christina Lattimore (1979) and The Other Side of Dark (1986). Nixon's novels moved mystery toward the suspense genre. In the mid-eighties Christopher Pike entered into the suspense arena with Getting Even (1985). Pike published over sixty novels for young adults before the end of the millennium. Not too long after Pike entered the scene, R.L. Stine joined the market with his Fear Street series and his Goosebumps series for younger readers. For a time his books were immensely popular and he launched Dangerous Girls (a vampire series). While he is still widely read and publishes several titles a year, his popularity seems to have passed.

At the turn of the century, vampires, witches, and werewolves were popular characters in a new breed of horror. Often the witches were the good guys, and Angel, the television and print series, gave us a vampire with a soul. Annette Curtis Klause's werewolf love story Blood and Chocolate (1997) was a romance and an examination of the politics of a werewolf clan. “Daughters of the Night” a series by Lynn Ewing (2000–2004) continued the romantic element that came into great popularity in 2008 with Stephenie Meyer's four books in the Twilight Saga. The Twilight series surrounds Edward (a vampire) and Jacob (a werewolf) and what Bella's sacrifice will bring. Is this mystery/horror or plain fantasy? The line is thin and only the reader can decide. The very popular movies based on the Twilight books helped the popularity of the books to peak. Meyer planned a fifth volume, Midnight Sun, to be told from Edward's perspective but in 2008, an early draft was illegally leaked and published on the internet. Meyer halted the writing (www.stepheniemeyer.com/midnightsun.html). Meyer says that she knows readers want Edward's story so someday the book will be published.

In the early 2000s, spies found their way into teen fiction. Alex Rider titles by Anthony Horowitz have found an audience with all readers. Alex, a teenage boy, works for a British spy agency and battles evil terrorist types. He even has fabulous spy toys, which are detailed in Alex Rider: The Gadgets (2006) (a related title that could be a model in teaching technical writing). Horowitz's most recent spy title is Crocodile Tears (2009). In 2006, Stormbreaker, a movie based on the first book in the Alex Rider series, premiered in theaters. Plans for a second movie in the series, Point Blank, was abandoned due to the poor box office showing for Stormbreaker.

Frank Peretti, an extremely successful adult Christian fiction novelist, has become a popular author of teen literature as well. His series, The Veritas Project, has become one of the biggest selling fiction series ever written for teens. His use of metaphor and allegory helps to shape his message. Ted Dekker, another Christian suspense writer and Peretti co-authored a suspense thriller, House (2006), which became a movie in 2006. Dekker is an adult Christian writer whose books often appeal to teens and whose thrilling novels manage to twist perceptions into heart-stopping suspense.

Titles from Touchstone Authors

- Atwater-Rhodes, Amelia. Token of Darkness (2010) All Just Glass. (2011) — Supernatural
- Beaufrand, Mary Jane. The River. (2010) — Mystery
- Bennett, Holly. The Bonemender Series; and Shapeshifter (2010) — Supernatural
- Brooks, Kevin. Dawn. (2009) — Mystery
- Butcher, A.J. The Spy High series. — Mystery
- Clark, Mary Higgins. The Shadow of Your Smile (2010) — Suspense
- Cooney, Caroline. If the Witness Lied. (2009) Three Black Swans. (2010) — Mystery
- Doctorow, Cory. Little Brother. (2008); For the Win. (2010) — Techno Thriller
- Duncan, Lois. Don't Look Behind You (2010, reissue),
- Ferguson, Alane. The Dying Breath: Forensic Mystery (2009) — Mystery
- Fredericks, Mariah. In the Cards series — In the Cards: Fame; In the Cards: Love; In the Cards: Life. (2009) — Mystery
- Giles, Gail. Dark Song (2011) — Psychological Thriller
- Horowitz, Anthony. Crocodile Tears (No. 8 Alex Rider series) — Spy/Thriller
- King, A.S. Please Ignore Vera Dietz. (2010) — Mystery
- Klass, David. Timelock: Caretaker Trilogy Book 5 (2009) — Psychological Thriller
- Miller, Barnabas and Jordan Orlando. 7 Souls. (2010) — Mystery
- Pascal, Francine. Fearless series — Mystery/Supernatural
- Peck, Richard. Amanda/Miranda (2001 pb reissue) — Mystery
- Peretti, Frank. Hangman's Curse. (2001), Nightmare Academy (2003) — Mystery
- Plum-Ucci, Carol. Streams of Babel (2008); sequel Fire Will Fall (2010) — Mystery
- Pullman, Philip. Once Upon a Time in the North: His Dark Materials. (2008) — Mystery
- Qualey, Marsha. Come in from the Cold. (2008) — Mystery
- Reiss, Kathryn, Blackthorn Mystery. (2007) — Mystery/Supernatural
- Shan, Darren. Cirque du Freak series; The Demonata #10: Hell's Heroes (2010) — Supernatural/Horror; The Saga of Larten Crepsley series: Birth of a Killer (2010); Ocean of Blood (2011); Palace of the Damned (forthcoming); untitled fourth title.
- Springer, Nancy. The Case of the Gypsy Goodbye: An Enola Holmes Mystery. (2010) — Psychological Thriller
- Stine, R.L. Fear Street series, Dangerous Girls. (2003) — Mystery/Supernatural
- Werlin, Nancy. The Rules of Survival. (2006) — Psychological Thriller
- Weston, Robert Paul. Dust City. (2010) — Mystery
- Wynne-Jones, Tim. The Uninvited. (2009) — Mystery

Adult Mystery Writers for Teens

Mystery

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle
Sue Grafton
Agatha Christie
Tony Hillerman
Lillian Jackson Braun
Ridley Pearson

Horror/Supernatural

Edgar Allen Poe
Stephen King
Dean Koontz
Kay Hooper

Spy/Thriller

Tom Clancy
Ian Fleming
Stephen Hunter

Suspense

Harlan Coben
John Grisham
John Sandford

Edgar Awards for Best Young Adult Mystery

www.theedgards.com

2009 Winner: Paper Towns by John Green

2010 Winner: Reality Check by Peter Abrahams

2011 Winner: The Interrogation of Gabriel James by Charlie Price.

Spotlight: Nancy Werlin

In 1998 Nancy Werlin published The Killer's Cousin. It was Nancy's second book and her first psychological thriller. The protagonist of the novel has moved in with his aunt and uncle after the death of his girlfriend, Emily. David feels responsible for Emily's death. It is, however, his cousin Lily who uses her hostility to guard her own deep secret and guilt. The Killer's Cousin won the Edgar Award for Best Young Adult Mystery.

After The Killer's Cousin, Werlin published Locked Inside (2000), another psychological mystery. In this novel Marnie has isolated herself from the world around her by playing an online video game. When Marnie is kidnapped, there is no one to come to her rescue, and she must rely on her wits to survive and escape.

Werlin followed Locked Inside with Black Mirror (2001) and in 2004, Werlin's fourth book was published. Double Helix was a combination of intrigue, scientific research, and much mystery as two unsuspecting teenagers seek to uncover the secrets in Dr. Wyatt's research lab and the connection he has to their families.

In 2006, Werlin's The Rules of Survival introduced one of the most horrific mother characters in the history of Young Adult literature.

Suspense, fantasy, and romance combine in her 2008 novel, Impossible. Seventeen-year-old Lucy discovers the curse that has plagued the women in her family for three generations. There tasks she can complete to ward off the curse—but they are near impossible. Is she strong enough? In 2010 Werlin combined mystery with the Faerie world in Extraordinary.

Nancy Werlin's mysteries are complex, well developed page-turners that keep the reader's interest as the mystery unfolds, deepens, and becomes more dangerous. Check out the latest information about the author at www.nancywerlin.com.

Thought Questions

- 1) Why are formula plots popular in books by authors such as R.L. Stine, Mary Higgins Clark, or Stephen King?
- 2) Has the trend toward graphic depiction of violence affected the quality of the plots currently being produced as compared to the all-time classics of Agatha Christie?
- 3) Which do you prefer mystery or suspense novels (regardless of the sub-genre)? Explain why.

A History of Hollywood in Brief

An important entertainment piece of teen's lives are movies, an audience that Hollywood has come to recognize and to which they actively market. Motion pictures have a rich history and there are films that are classics, much like print materials.

In 1877 a photographer developed a system for taking motion pictures and the race was on to create a way to both take and view moving pictures. In the mid-1890s in both Paris (Dec. 1895) and New York (Apr. 1896), the first motion pictures were screened in public. It wasn't until 1903 that the first blockbuster was released to the public. The eleven-minute film, The Great Train Robbery, became a big hit. The success of The Great Train Robbery led to the opening of movie theaters called nickelodeons (admission was five cents) across the United States by the end of the decade.

In the beginning movies were silent and often accompanied in the theater by musicians. It was during this era that D. W. Griffith made The Birth of a Nation (1915), a film both highly praised and severely criticized. Europe and Russia were also contributing to the film industry with films such as Nosferatu (1922) and The Battleship Potemkin (1925). However, while silent films proved popular, inventors still searched for a way to add sound. In 1927 The Jazz Singer surprised audiences with the few scenes in which Al Jolson sang and spoke. In 1928 Walt Disney entered onto the scene with Steamboat Willie, the first animated short with sound.

"Talkies" changed the movie industry. Some stars of the silent screen were unable to make the jump to films with sound, while others transitioned well. The focus on sound reduced the emphasis on some other artistic elements, but "talkies" were popular with the public. Also occurring during the thirties was the introduction of Technicolor, first used by Disney in animated films and in Becky Sharp (1935) for the first time in a full-length feature. Color didn't really take off until the 1950s, however, as a way to distinguish film from television.

Despite the "threat" of television, the demise of the studio system, and the attack of McCarthyism films, the Hollywood industry continued to grow. In the 1970s changes in the distribution system introduced the concept of a blockbuster. The first film to benefit by the new distribution system was Coppola's The Godfather (1972). In 1975 Stephen Spielberg had his first summer blockbuster with Jaws, and George Lucas brought us the first in the Star Wars franchise in 1977. For the next several years, big budget films dominated Hollywood's production. Film festivals began and introduced audiences and distributors to independent films, some of which "blew up" and became box office hits. The tension between big budget and independent films has dominated the last twenty years of American film, although a balance is being discovered.

Film Festivals

There are thousands of festivals around the world, in different cities and countries, although a few have garnered international attention and respect.

Cannes Film Festival
Sundance Film Festival
Toronto International Film Festival
San Francisco International Film Festival
Locarno Film Festival
Venice Film Festival

25 Top Teen Movies

1. The Breakfast Club – 1985
2. Fast Times at Ridgemont High – 1982
3. Dazed and Confused – 1993
4. Rebel Without a Cause – 1955
5. Heathers – 1989
6. American Graffiti – 1973
7. Clueless – 1995
8. Boys N the Hood – 1991
9. Election – 1999
10. Ferris Bueller's Day Off – 1986
11. Say Anything... – 1989
12. Mean Girls – 2004
13. High School – 1968
14. Donnie Darko – 2001
15. Carrie – 1976
16. Lucas – 1986
17. Peggy Sue Got Married – 1986
18. Rock 'n' Roll High School – 1979
19. The Last Picture Show – 1971
20. Dead Poets Society – 1989
21. Grease – 1978
22. American Pie – 1999
23. Cooley High – 1975
24. Rushmore – 1998
25. Hoosiers – 1986

www.filmsite.org/50bestsfilms.html

First 10 of AFI's Top 100 Movies of All Time (10th Anniversary Edition)

1. Citizen Kane (1941)
2. The Godfather (1972)
3. Casablanca (1942)
4. Raging Bull (1980)
5. Singin' in the Rain (1952)
6. Gone with the Wind (1939)
7. Lawrence of Arabia (1962)
8. Schindler's List (1993)
9. Vertigo (1958)
10. The Wizard of Oz (1939)

<http://www.afi.com/100Years/movies10.aspx>
Check out their other film downloadable lists.

Spotlight: The Oscars

Every year the red carpet is rolled out and the industry recognizes achievements from the previous year. Established in 1927 the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences holds a ceremony each year to award the best films and performances of the previous year. The ceremony has affectionately been known as The Oscars because of the gold plated statue awarded to winners.

When the first ceremony was held in May of 1929, it is unlikely those attending could imagine the extravaganza the now-televised ceremony would become. As the popularity of the ceremony has increased throughout history, the Oscars find themselves on different nights in different venues, but always attended in glamour and style.

The Academy recognizes the best director, film, actor, and actress. In 1936 supporting actors/actresses began to be recognized. Other categories that have been added include documentary, makeup, and a division of the special effects category.

While the Academy's highly guarded votes may eventually be criticized, the evening continues to draw a large worldwide audience and lend credibility to the nominees as the best of the previous year.

Keeping Up

- Entertainment Weekly—quarterly issues on upcoming movies for Spring, Summer, Fall, Winter.
- www.apple.com/trailers/
- www.mtv.com/movies/
- www.afi.com
- Leonard Maltin's 2011 Movie Guide (annual)
- Roger Ebert's Movie Yearbook (annual)

Thought Question

- 1) With a group of teens, create a top 15 list of the greatest movies they have seen. Compare their list with your own and with the AFI list or any other comparable list.

Theater/Drama

By the teenage years young people should have experienced puppet plays, Readers Theater, and live skits or plays about such things as the first Thanksgiving. They have also experienced drama translated into hundreds of television and motion picture plays. During the teenage years students in high schools have the opportunity to experience theater as an elective but also as a part of their language arts curriculum. In addition, teens may find dramatic opportunities in community theater and in the current rage of writing their own scripts for home videos. It is useful for both teachers and librarians to have knowledge of a wide range of dramatic experience from classical theater to operetta to modern Broadway and to the many one-act plays that are published and useable by teens. Connections to drama in the Asian culture can also provide richness to the teen dramatic experience.

The oldest recorded Western theater comes from the Greeks. Most of the classical Greek dramas were written in three parts, three individual plays telling one great story. The performances consisted of only a few men who wore masks for different characters. Onstage at all times was the chorus who sang songs throughout the performance. Some of the greatest playwrights in this era were Sophocles, Euripides, and Aeschylus.

After the Greeks, the Romans took on the same type of theater, but it didn't last long. Theater didn't emerge in the Western world until the Middle Ages. This is where theater as we know it began. The Catholic Church would have its monks act out certain stories from the Bible in Latin. Somehow, and we don't know how or why, these plays moved out onto the church steps. Three types of plays emerged: Mystery (stories based on the Bible), Miracle (stories of the saints), and Morality (allegorical, like Everyman, that taught of human vice and virtue). These plays began to be played by traveling groups that would perform on wagons or platform stages in the town center.

During the Renaissance, the traveling performers gathered and became more settled into their own theaters. Playwrights like Shakespeare and Marlowe began writing more secular material. But there were problems with the theater: Protestants and the Plague. When the Plague would break out in an area, theaters would immediately be closed because the close quarters would help it spread faster. Protestants felt that theaters were centers of evil, and many times theaters were forced to close from Protestant leaders.

Theater continued into the 1700s, but it wasn't nearly as popular. The 1800s brought back the lavishness of the theater. The 19th century was a blooming of theater and playwrights; this blossoming never died out. It continued to grow well into the 20th and 21st centuries. Theater has become a staple to the arts.

The biggest tradition outside the Western tradition of theater lies in Japan. The Japanese have three types of theater that have lasted for centuries: Noh, Bunraku, and Kabuki. Noh uses intricate masks to portray the lead character, the only set decoration is a painting of a tree in the background, the costumes are lavish, and the movement is slow and controlled. Bunraku involves puppets, but these are no ordinary puppets. They are at least half the size of a normal human, and it takes a master puppeteer to control the head and right arm and two other puppeteers to operate the rest. There is hardly any dialogue; there is just monotonal chanting. The last form of Japanese theater, Kabuki, also uses chanting. The actors wear elaborate makeup, but the action is similar to action in any play you would see.

Teens may experience professional theater by reading or performing in three-act plays like The Importance of Being Earnest, 10 Little Indians, Harvey, Arsenic and Old Lace, or read other plays written by Arthur Miller and Tennessee Williams. More contemporary pieces may include

Zap! by Paul Fleischman, You're Dead by William Mastrosimone, The Nerd and The Foreigner by Larry Shue, and Chemical Imbalance: A Jekyll and Hyde Play by Lauren Wilson. Teens may also participate in operettas such as Oklahoma, Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, High School Musical or Anything Goes. Generally teens are involved in these musicals because the royalties are affordable. Teens may also be able to experience Broadway theater, either in New York or Broadway plays on tour like Phantom of the Opera, Cats, Wicked, or Les Miserables. Librarians and teachers should encourage teens to take advantage of the many opportunities there are to perform in and attend these wonderful plays, from Broadway to community theater.

Major Playwrights: Greek, American, and British

Greek

Aristophanes
Sophocles
Euripides

Renaissance

William Shakespeare
Christopher Marlowe

1700s

John Dryden
William Congreve
Aphra Behn
Oliver Goldsmith

1800s

Oscar Wilde
George Bernard Shaw
J.M. Barrie
Alexander Dumas

1900s

Anthony Shaffer
Arthur Miller
David Rabe
Edward Albee
Eugene O'Neill
Graham Greene
Henry James
Horton Foote
Lorraine Hansberry
Neil Simon
Noel Coward
Samuel Beckett
Tennessee Williams
Thornton Wilder
Tom Stoppard

Resource:

The Complete Audition Book for Young Actor: A Comprehensive Guide to Winning by Enhancing Acting Skills by Roger Ellis. Meriwether Press, 2004.

Spotlight: Arthur Miller

Arthur Miller was born in 1915 in Manhattan to Jewish immigrant parents. His father's garment business failed during the Depression, and Miller saw his first dose of tragedy. After graduating from high school, Miller worked various odd jobs to earn money to go to college. He began college in 1934 at the University of Michigan, where he began writing plays. After college, Miller returned to New York and produced his first play, The Man Who Had All the Luck, a complete flop. His next play, All My Sons, produced in 1947, was an instant hit. Only two years later, Death of a Salesman, Miller's biggest and most respected play, appeared. It was a phenomenal success, winning a Pulitzer Prize, winning the Drama Critics Circle Award, and being translated into over a dozen languages. In the 1950s, Miller wrote The Crucible, a play about the Salem witch trials, yet a blatant attack on McCarthyism. Three years later, Miller was called in front of the House Committee for un-American activities. His playwright activities died down until the 1990s. Miller continued to stay in spotlight until his death on February 10, 2005.

Keeping Up

- Broadway — www.broadway.com
- Tony Awards — www.tonyawards.com
- Best Plays Theater Yearbook 2008-2009 Limelight Editions. Published annually.
- The Norton Anthology — both British and American drama
- The Oxford Companion to the Theatre and Performance. (2010) (also check other titles in the Oxford Companion series.)
- Vlastnik, Frank. Broadway Musicals: 191 Greatest Shows of All time. Black Dog, 2010

Thought Questions

- 1) Interview middle and high school English teachers to see what kinds of drama experiences they promote in their classes. How can you as a librarian or teacher help contribute to their agenda?
- 2) What local opportunities are there for viewing or acting in various drama productions? How can you get teens involved in them?

Dance

Virtually every culture in every time period has used movement for recreation, cultural expression, or to connect to the spiritual. For the teens of today, we might divide dance into three categories: performance dance including ballet and theater dance; cultural dance including folk dancing and dancing within contemporary cultures; and social dancing including ballroom, western dancing, and street/club dancing.

Teens interested in performance dancing usually begin their training early in childhood with ballet, tap, jazz, or ice dancing lessons. These teens will appreciate literature connected with the techniques of their work, great performances in their field, and biographies of their favorite heroes and heroines. They will be interested in knowing where performances and competitions are located and will be anxious to see great performances nearby.

Cultural dancing is often a part of school curriculums where young people, including teenagers, are becoming acquainted with many cultures and civilizations throughout the world. They may be researching costuming and actual performance of folk dances to give a flavor of a culture at a particular time period. Their interest will not only be in books but in video segments showing authentic dances ranging from a Navaho rain dance to a Russian country dance.

As a part of the popular culture experience, most teens participate in street dancing to very loud music with a strong beat. Their steps at this point in time seem to the average adult as random gyrations rather than carefully learned sequences. Still other teens formulize their social dancing reminiscent of formal ballroom dancing to the western line dancing and swing dancing from the 1950s. For this type of dancing, teens will be most interested in finding the “perfect” music in which to express their movement.

ABC made ballroom dance popular again with its show Dancing With the Stars. The show has 10 celebrities partnered with professionals and they have to learn ballroom dance routines in a very short amount of time. Originally aired as a summer program in 2005, the ratings skyrocketed, prompting ABC to continue doing the show. With ABC’s success, other networks joined in. Fox has So You Think You Can Dance, where contestants dance in partners and individually and America votes. These shows have influenced teens, and everyone else, showing that ballroom and professional dancing aren’t just for old-timers.

Here are selected titles for dance:

- Ross, Frank Russell. Soul Dancing!: The Essential African American Cultural Dance Book. National Dance Association, 2010. Arc Manor, 2919.
- Pristine, Nancy. Victory Danding for Teens.
- Garfunkel, Trudy. On Wings of Joy: The Story of Ballet from the 16th Century to Today. E-Reads Ltd., 2002.
- Livingstone, Lili Cockerville. American Indian Ballerinas. University of Oklahoma Press, 1999.
- Dancing with the Stars: Jive, Samba, and Tango Your Way into the Best Shape of Your Life. 2007
- Jones, Bill T., and Susan Kuklin. Dance! with Bill T. Jones. Hyperion, 1998.
- Tambini, Michael. Eyewitness: Dance. DK Children, 2000.
- The New York City Ballet Workout. DVD or VHS.
- Brennan, Helen. The Story of Irish Dance. Robert Reinhart Publishers, 2001.
- Invitation to Dance—This is a VHS that has many versions including Latin Dancing and Ballroom Dancing.
- Lane, Christy. Christy Lane’s Complete Book of Line Dancing. Human Kinetics, 2000.
- International Encyclopedia of Dance: A Project of Dance Perspectives. Ed. Selma Jeanne Cohen, Dance Perspectives Foundation. Oxford University Press, 1998.

- Clarke, Steve. Seeing While Being Seen: Dance Photography... AAHPERD, 2005.
- Levy, Fran J. Dance Movement Therapy: A Healing Art. AAHPERD, 2005.
- Glass, Barbara S. African American Dance: an Illustrated History. McFarland, 2007.

Different Classifications of Dance*

Folk Dancing

- Clogging
- Mazurka
- Polka
- Quadrille
- Maypole dance
- Irish step dancing
- Belly dancing

Country/Western

- Square dancing
- Line dancing
- Two-step
- Shuffle

Ballroom Dance

- Waltz
- Tango
- Foxtrot
- Quickstep

Latin

- Cha-Cha
- Samba
- Rumba
- Jive
- Salsa
- Bolero

Swing Dance

- Lindy Hop
- East Coast
- West Coast

Street

- Hip Hop
- Break dancing

Ballet

- Romantic
- Classical
- Modern

Theater

- Tap
- Jazz

*From Wikipedia

Spotlight: Bill T. Jones

Bill T. Jones has earned quite the reputation in the dance community. He was trained at the State University of New York at Binghamton. He studied classical ballet and modern dance. After graduation, he formed a partnership with Arnie Zane and they began to perform all over the country. Jones's dance moves turn the human body into a form of expressing art, creating many wonderful and artful poses and moves. He and his partner formed their dance company in 1982, and the company has been a main staple for over twenty years. Jones has performed and choreographed many theater productions, television shows, and other events. Jones has received many awards including the MacArthur Fellowship, three New York Dance and Performance ("Bessie") Awards, Dance Magazine Award, and was named "An Irreplaceable Dance Treasure" by The Dance Heritage Coalition. Bill Jones has received 5 honorary doctorates, including one from Julliard, and has written many books. Explore his website at www.billtjones.org to see some pictures and performances of his art.

Keeping Up

- American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance (AAHPERD) at www.aahperd.org
- National Dance Association (NDA)— www.aahperd.org/nda/

Thought Question

- 1) Who are the teenagers in your classrooms or organizations who are interested in dance outside the regular pop scene? What interests of theirs could you support?

Movies

- Footloose
- Saturday Night Fever
- Save the Last Dance
- Dirty Dancing
- Strictly Ballroom
- Chicago
- Shall We Dance
- Mad Hot Ballroom
- Take the Lead
- Step Up
- Honey

Fine Music

While popular music commands a huge following in the teen world, there is a certain percentage of teens that not only enjoy serious or classical music, but are preparing themselves to be performers and composers in this genre. Local music teachers are a good source of identifying this segment of the local teen population and can help identify their needs that teachers and librarians can feed.

In the general teen population, however, school curriculums contain introductions and expectations that all children and teens be exposed to serious music. These introductions generally center on the western classical traditions but are branching out into the serious music of many other cultures.

For many years, kids cartoons introduced children to the great melodies of the classics – to the three B’s (Beethoven, Bach, and Brahms) as well as Mozart and Tchaikovsky. Even though kids did not have recognition of individual composers, they knew and recognized the composer’s work. It is also fascinating to hear the great melodies and classical forms reworked into popular fare by rock, jazz, and even ethnic musicians.

We often think of serious music being orchestral music, but vocal, choral, operatic, and single instrument or small ensembles of instruments constitute a huge part of the “fine music” tradition. Thanks to the recording industry and modern technology, we can hear the original performances of Marie Anderson on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, Leonard Bernstein conducting the New York Philharmonic, Pavarotti singing a great aria, or Liszt playing one of his own piano concertos.

Communicating with teens that are serious musicians requires a basic knowledge of instruments, musical terminology, and the various musical periods. A children’s reference book on music is often a great way to learn the rudiments, particularly if there is an accompanying CD with musical examples. Many introductory websites can help not only adults but also teens that are trying to become familiar with the genre.

Serious teen performers, including individuals, small groups, and large groups, crave opportunities to perform and to attend performances. Teachers and librarians can invite young musicians to perform in classrooms and libraries and help make them aware of opportunities to perform or compete. Good contacts with music teachers or community groups can often lead to invitations for teens to attend wonderful performances either free or at greatly reduced prices. One might begin with seats to the Phantom of the Opera, to a pops concert of a touring orchestra, or asking a string quartet to play in the main reading room of the library or in front of a school assembly. High school choirs and orchestras love to perform for major events such as Black History Month, holidays, or any excuse you can dream up. Make opportunities for these performers to do recording sessions and upload their performances to the web as they begin their own portfolios.

Know Your Musical Periods

Baroque (1600–1750)
Classical (1750–1820)
Romantic (1820–1910)
Contemporary (1910–present)

Great Groups and Performers

Boston Symphony Orchestra
Chicago Symphony Orchestra
The San Francisco Opera
The Mormon Tabernacle Choir
St. Martin’s-in-the-Field (orchestra)
Kronos Quartet
The 5 Browns (five siblings-teens/20s)

List of Classical Western Composers

18th Century

J.S. Bach
Haydn
Mozart
Handel
Vivaldi

19th Century

Schubert
Chopin
List
Beethoven
Wagner
Berloiz
Dvorak
Brahms
Verdi
Tchaikovsky

20th Century

Bartok
Vaughan Williams
Poulenc
Debussy
Ravel
Holst
Copeland
Bernstein
Joplin
Chavez

Don't Forget

The availability of Web 2.0 technologies and services like YouTube.com make it possible to preserve the recordings of our teens. Are you archiving these performances for the Web? One of our teens might go viral.

Spotlight: YoYo Ma

Yo Yo Ma was born in 1955 to Chinese parents in Paris. His cello training began at age 4, and his family moved to New York soon after that. He attended Julliard, and because he wanted liberal arts training in connection with his conservatory training, he attended Harvard University. Since then, Yo Yo Ma has become one of the most popular classical music performers of our time. He has won 15 Grammy awards and released over 50 albums. Along with his traditional classical music, Ma plays a wide variety of music, including Brazilian, African, Appalachian, and many other genres. His repertoire has expanded the definition of what classical music really is. His most recent undertaking has been to be a great supporter to the Silk Road Project: a blanket group to researching and supporting cultural events of countries that lined the ancient silk road. More information can be found at www.silkroadproject.org. Yo Yo Ma is married and has two children.

Artist website: www.yo-yoma.com

Keeping Up

- Community concerts (find your own reliable listings and link teens into them)
- www.classical.net/
- ipl.org—The Internet Public Library (find the music section)
- The Gramophone Classical Music Guide (annual)

Musical Terminology Quiz

From easy to hard—how many of these musical terms can you define?

Opera	Prelude and fugue
Symphony	Contralto
Concerto	Legato
Aria	Octave
Bassoon	Diapason

Fine Art¹

The art experience is perhaps the most common form of culture across all time periods and across all civilizations. In the age of the Internet, access to the world treasury of artistic expression knows no limits. Teens exhibiting any aptitude for or curiosity about the arts have electronic access to nearly every major art museum in the world, enabling them to visit vast collections without ever leaving the computer screen. Ironically, this is true at a time when arts programs in most North American school districts have been seriously curtailed in favor of the tested subjects of language arts, science, and math.

In communities where art programs are limited, the local art community has sometimes filled the gap with artists in residence, arts workshops, and even galleries or exhibit programs. For those schools lucky enough to have an art professional on staff, other teachers, school and public librarians, and community art groups can build wonderful relationships in virtually any community. For example, the science teacher can introduce the world of space photography using books like Earth: Our Planet in Space by Seymour Simon, or the wonderful world of photomicrography. A math teacher might develop lessons around geometric patterns in nature, on fractals, or even on tessellations, in addition to showing lavish artworks resulting from such experimentation along the way, like those works created by M.C. Escher.

Even teens will enjoy those fantastic virtual tours of internationally based museums, such as le Musée du Louvre in Paris (www.louvre.fr/louvre.htm) where galleries and individual masterpieces may be examined up close, from many angles, or in three dimensions, front and back. Many art museums have terrific sites making their own collections and changing exhibitions available online. Some even host interactive artworks created exclusively for cyberspace.

Today the traditional disciplines encompassed by the Fine or Visual Arts—drawing, painting, ceramics, sculpture, printmaking, and other related crafts—have been joined by photography and media or filmmaking, all popular fields with demonstrated career links. “Art ignorance” should simply not be tolerated. Even the most uncultured urbanite or unsophisticated country mouse can certainly, through the marvels of technology, find something to pique their interest. It just takes enough creativity or motivational activity to start them clicking.

In the world of books, library collections should contain general histories of art, biographies of artists, reproductions of artistic works of all kinds, and books giving instruction on how to create artistic works, including pottery, painting, drawing, computer art, photography, architecture, or even cartooning. In addition to the library print collection, libraries should also provide links to art collections, museums, galleries, and other collections including those that are local, state, regional, national, and international.

There is, however, the emerging world of Web 2.0 technology where anyone can broadcast to the world, to their group, or to their own family art works, photography, video, music, or audio. YouTube.com, Worldvuer.com, various segments of Google software, and a host of other creative sites makes fine art open not just to the experienced and famous, but to everyone. What a wonderful age: Art is for everyone.

¹ Nancy Olexo, a student at San José State University, helped write this page.

Influential 20th Century American Artists

Georgia O'Keefe — Realistic
Abstraction
Grant Wood — Social Regionalism
Grandma Moses — Folk
Norman Rockwell — Realism
Jackson Pollock — Action
Painting
Jacob Lawrence — Social
Realism
Alexander Calder — Abstract
Sculpture
Dorothea Lange —
Documentary Photography
Ansel Adams — Nature
Photography
Andy Warhol — Pop Art
Man Ray — Cubism, Dadaism and surrealism

Art Magazines

- Be3W — fine
photography
- Art Review
- International Artist
- Juxtapoz: Art and Culture Magazine
- Smithsonian
- Art in America
- Graphis
- Drawn e3 Quarterly
- Communication Arts

Keeping Up

- Gardiner, Art through the Ages, volumes I and II
- Art Museum Network — www.amn.org
- Art Resource — wwar.com
- www.artlex.com —
Dictionary of 3600 terms
- Art in Context:
[www.artincontext.org/
artist/default.aspx?Period
_ID=8](http://www.artincontext.org/artist/default.aspx?Period_ID=8)

Spotlight: Louvre Website

The Louvre's website is excellent: (www.louvre.fr/llv/commun/home) add it to any "Best Art Links" list. The museum has done a wonderful job in making their collection accessible to everyone around the world. On their website you can take tours of individual rooms, view pieces in their collection, search label text (how's your French?), and read a history of the museum. An interactive lets you explore individual pieces of art. You can magnify parts of the piece, change the size of the piece, look at the back of the piece, reposition the piece on the wall, and so much more. This is certainly one of the best museum websites around.

Art Books (Fiction and Non-fiction)

- 1001 Paintings You Must See Before You Die. rev. ed. Universe, 2011.
- Ang, Tom. Digital Photographer's Handbook, 4th ed, 2009
- Buchholz, Linda. Art: A World History. Abrams, 2007.
- Chevalier, Tracy. Girl with a Pearl Earring. Plume, 2001.
- Danzinger, Danny. Museum: Behind the Scenes at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Penguin, 2008.
- Greenberg, Jan and Sandra Jordan. Andy Warhol: Prince of Pop. Delacorte, 2004.
- Janson, H.S. and Anthony F. History of Art for Young People. 6th edition. Prentice Hall, 2003.
- Park, Linda Sue. A Single Shard. Yearling Books, 2002.
- Sweet, Tony. Fine Art Photography High Dynamic Range. Stackpole, 2011.
- Venezia, Mike. Getting to Know the World's Greatest Artists (series). Children's Press.
- Watts, Leander. Stonecutter. Graphia, 2002.

Thought Questions

- 1) What art experiences, groups, places, or events in your local community are worth linking teens to?
- 2) What educational experiences in the arts are available in your community both at school and other community organizations that are of value to teens?

The Western Canon

From the beginning, humans have found a way to tell and share stories with one another. Throughout the last 600 years some stories have stood out and have become classics. In Western literature there are poems, dramas, and novels that have become a part of our cultural literacy. They are works that we have some knowledge of even if we haven't read them. They are works that we can expect to experience at some point in our academic lives. They are works that are referenced in other works and re-worked into our popular culture. This body of works can be considered the Western canon of literature. There are ever-evolving definitions of the academic canon in terms of modern literature and favored classical titles, although certain titles and authors will forever remain a part of the canon.

There are a number of titles that form the foundation of this Western canon that were created by the Greeks including Homer's Iliad and Odyssey, plays by Sophocles and Euripides, Plato's Republic, and Aristotle's Poetics. The Roman era continued to add to the "great works" with poetry from Virgil and the scientific treatise from Ptolemy. Plutarch also added to the canon, and perhaps served as the greatest influence to Renaissance authors, including William Shakespeare.

With the fall of the Roman Empire, the Western world entered a dark age in which little emerged, but what did emerge was significant. It was during the medieval age that Sir Thomas Aquinas produced his works and Dante produced The Divine Comedy, which was credited with the emergence of the modern Italian language. Petrarch introduced the love sonnet in which he pined for Laura. On the British Isles Chaucer wrote The Canterbury Tales, doing for the English language what Dante did for Italian. The end of the medieval era led into the Renaissance, a time in which arts and literature flourished.

The European Renaissance introduced Michelangelo, William Shakespeare, Thomas Hobbes, Machiavelli, Leonardo Da Vinci, and Galileo, among others. The works of the Renaissance was the beginning of the modern Western canon. The political thought of Machiavelli, Locke, and Hobbes, the scientific and mathematical theories of Galileo, Copernicus, DaVinci, Pascal, and Descartes, and the literature of Shakespeare, Cervantes, Milton, and Spenser all influenced later works.

The Age of Reason followed the Renaissance with works contributed by Jonathon Swift, Rousseau, Daniel Defoe, and Adam Smith. Poetry written by William Blake, Robert Burns, and Alexander Pope emerged. In the American Colonies, religious writing like that by Jonathon Edwards gave way to political treatise as the colonies rebelled and fought for independence. Slave narratives began to appear, and Phyllis Wheatley was the first slave woman to publish with a book of poetry in 1773.

The Romantic Age followed the Age of Reason in the nineteenth century. It was during this time that Melville wrote Moby Dick, and Wordsworth and Coleridge wrote poetry such as "The Prelude" and "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner." Other poets included Shelley, Lord Byron, and Keats. Jane Austen's novels were published beginning in 1811 with Sense and Sensibility. The Victorian Age followed introducing the Brownings (both Robert and Elizabeth Barrett), Tennyson, and Matthew Arnold. Darwin had his radical theories of evolution. The Brontë sisters published their works: Jane Eyre (Charlotte) and Wuthering Heights (Emily). In the latter half of the century, Oscar Wilde, Rudyard Kipling, Gustave Flaubert, Fyodor Dostoevsky, Emily Dickinson, and Mark Twain introduced themselves to the world. Twain's The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn (1885) has been hailed as the quintessential American novel, despite the controversy that surrounds it.

Henry James marks the transition into modernism with his novels that relied on cultural tensions. Edith Wharton and Theodore Dreiser joined James as influences on the development of an independent American literature. They were joined by authors across the Atlantic including Thomas Mann, Franz Kafka, Thomas Hardy, and Joseph Conrad. After World War I, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway, Thornton Wilder, and Dorothy Parker found voices for themselves in the United States. Virginia Woolf and James Joyce from England joined these American writers. The Great Depression had a profound influence on the arts, and emerging from that time is John Steinbeck's The Grapes of Wrath and Of Mice and Men. It is also the decade in which William Faulkner emerged with The Sound and the Fury (1929) and As I Lay Dying (1930).

Since then, many works have been added to the canon. Harper Lee's To Kill A Mockingbird gave us a whole new view of the South and racism. Ray Bradbury, George Orwell and Aldous Huxley gave us bleak outlooks of the future. Kurt Vonnegut Jr. brought us cruel irony in the '60s with his Cat's Cradle and Slaughter-house Five. Poets like Sylvia Plath and Anne Sexton made poetry confessional.

Probably the most powerful force changing the canon is the widespread use of the Norton Anthology in literature classes. Recent editions have included many minority writers, changing the face of the Western canon.

The Great Debate

Since academia has begun trying to categorize the "great works," there has been debate about both the feasibility and the lists that emerge. There are jokes about the "dead white men" that populate the lists that emerge, protests regarding the lack of women and people of color, and arguments of what is included and what is omitted. Harold Bloom has written extensively on the subject of a Western canon and its role in both cultural literacy and academia. His title The Western Canon: The Books and School of the Ages (1994) identifies his canon and argues for an accepted identified canon. It may be that it is impossible to characterize the greatest books of all time, although many have tried.

As the debate continues, the Western canon actually continues to expand. Many other literatures are starting to be taught and added to the Western canon. The African American and Latin writers of America have found a new voice in the canon. African and Chinese works are finding their way into classical literature classes. As the Western canon expands to include other parts of the world, teachers of literature are faced with a dilemma: what works have to be left out? One class cannot cover all the works that would be contained in a world canon, so what works should be taught and what should be left out? This tension is not likely to be resolved any time soon. Fortunately, most of the Canon is freely available on the Internet.

The Lists

- Great Books of the Western World. Ed. Mortimer J. Adler. Encyclopedia Britannica, 1994.
- Harvard Classics. Ed. Charles W. Elliot.
- Bloom, Harold. The Western Canon: The Books and the School of the Ages. Riverhead Trade, 1995.
- Time magazine's list of the 100 best novels of all time:
www.time.com/time/2005/100books/the_complete_list.html

Thought Questions

- 1) Go to the list of Harvard Classics (www.bartleby.com/hc/) and get a sense of how much of the Western canon you have read.
- 2) How might teens be introduced to the canon supplemented by works from Asian, African, Islamic, and Latin texts?

Emerging Canon

The debate over inclusion into the literary canon that was most prevalent in the eighties and nineties, but that still echoes in today's high schools and colleges, as well as the media, has opened up the door to voices from a variety of backgrounds, cultures, and perspectives. There is an emerging literary canon of "great works" that are taught, or that have become a prevalent aspect of our culture that teens should be aware of and to which they should be introduced. As often the case is when trying to derive a list of great works there are disagreements and a variety of lists. However, there is common ground to be found in the debate over inclusion.

When the movement for a more inclusive canon that represented the diversity of our world took center stage in the eighties, there were some agreed upon classics. N. Scott Momaday's work House Made of Dawn had won the Pulitzer Prize in 1969 and introduced to critical acclaim the Native American voice into the literary canon. Authors that have followed include Louise Erdrich, James Welch, and Leslie Marmon Silko. African Americans have a rich literary tradition as well, and while Phyllis Wheatley's poetry and Fredrick Douglass had a place in the old curriculum, the emerging canon re-introduced Zora Neale Hurston, Langston Hughes, and Countee Cullen, as well as new voices in Alice Walker and Toni Morrison. From Latin America Gabriel Garcia Marquez, Pablo Neruda, and Octavio Paz were among those who were finding a place in the contemporary canon. Gabriel Garcia Marquez successfully introduced magical realism, and not only received critical respect but popularized the form. Even Harold Bloom included Chinua Achebe's Things Fall Apart in his definition of the literary canon. Maxine Hong Kingston, and later Amy Tan, explored Chinese-American issues in universal stories of family relationships.

The emerging canon is still just that—emerging. It continues to develop and change. Voices are rediscovered or new voices emerge. It is difficult to predict which voice will sustain throughout the years, but students should be aware of contemporary authors such as Jhumpa Lahiri who was raised in the United States and often deals with the themes of cultural displacement. The poet Agha Shahid Ali from Kashmir gained attention with a National Book Award nomination for his poetry in 2001. Students and their advocates should look for fresh voices that receive critical attention to broaden their horizons and explore the emerging canon.

Titles to Explore

Their Eyes Were Watching God by Zora Neale Hurston

Invisible Man by Ralph Ellison

Nectar in the Sieve by Kamala Markandaya

House Made of Dawn by N. Scott Momaday

Almanac of the Dead by Leslie Marmon Silko

The Beet Queen by Louise Erdrich

Things Fall Apart by Chinua Achebe

A Hundred Years of Solitude by Gabriel Garcia Marquez

Age of Iron by J.M. Coetzee

Woman Warrior by Maxine Hong Kingston

The Joy Luck Club by Amy Tan

Bastard Out of Carolina by Dorothy Allison

Kite Runner by Khaled Hosseini

Spotlight: Beloved

In 2006 the New York Times asked authors and critics what was the best book of the last 25 years. Beloved by Toni Morrison received more votes than any other title. While this was a highly subjective poll, it was yet another significant honor for Morrison's best-known work. It received the Pulitzer prize in 1988, a choice that was not without controversy. Beloved has become firmly entrenched in the canon. One can argue that it is a token addition, but Morrison's magical realistic look at the cost of slavery has a place in both high schools and college curricula. It would be a mistake to overlook the critical importance of Beloved and its role in the canon because its acclaim is high. It's a wonderful new voice in the canon.

Keeping Up

One of the best sources to consult that responds to literatures from around the world is the North Anthologies series that are popular collections for college literature classes. If an author is gaining prominence in literary circles, their work will be represented in the anthologies.

Examine the Norton Anthology of World Literature published in several size collections and their website of supplementary materials at:
www.wwnorton.com/college/english/worldlit2e/full

Thought Questions

- 1) What role does class play in the emerging canon?
- 2) What classics can be replaced with titles from the emerging canon?

Moving On: Books for the College Bound

Upon graduating from high school the majority of American students will have experienced many of the same titles. Those going on to college will be expected to have read more broadly and experienced a canon beyond the core high school curriculum. The titles college-bound teens should experience vary widely from the classics to contemporary fiction, narrative non-fiction, poetry, and biography. While it is conceivable that there is no college-bound senior that has experienced every title, a wide sampling of reading is helpful. A wide variety of reading provides background knowledge for teens as they enter college and informs them and teaches them new information they may not have experienced in high school.

The wide variety of titles students can experience allows teens to develop personal taste in reading, and they should be encouraged to read outside their comfort zones. Teens who read only contemporary fiction should be introduced to classics; science fiction readers can be lead to narrative non-fiction; and popular culture-obsessed teens can be encouraged to read biographies of figures that were part of historical popular culture. Teens experience classics that enter into popular culture on a regular basis, from Shakespeare (both more traditional renditions to modern interpretations) to Jane Austen, Henry James to Homer. Use popular culture's renditions to lead teens to the classics.

Teens should also experience contemporary literary fiction. While movies can encourage teen interest in this area as well, so can modeling and bestseller lists. Oprah's book club has focused on more contemporary classics, such as East of Eden by John Steinbeck and Middlesex by Jeffrey Eugenides. Several titles from Oprah's previous book club incarnation, such as books by Toni Morrison and Barbara Kingsolver, are also titles teens should consider.

Narrative non-fiction and informational books can open new worlds to teens, introducing new passions and illuminating old ones. This can be particularly true in the field of science, which has a thriving market of quality titles written for the layman that include everything (A Short History of Nearly Everything by Bill Bryson and The Universe in a Nutshell by Stephen Hawking) to more specific titles on the different branches of science. Sports have produced some memorable and quality titles that challenge teens, like Friday Night Lights. So has Social Science with the classic In Cold Blood by Truman Capote or Ruben Martinez's Crossing Over. And while every student experiences history, college-bound students can receive a richer depth of understanding by reading outside the classroom, including classics such as The Jungle by Upton Sinclair and newer titles by Stephen Ambrose, Doris Kearns Goodwin, Ray Rapheal, and Joseph Ellis.

Despite honest effort on the part of English curriculum, it is not possible to introduce students to the wide range of poetry that exists in a core humanities canon. Students should explore poetry on their own—both classic and contemporary. Poetry Daily's website (<http://www.poetry.com/>) is another way to introduce poetry to teens.

Being prepared to help college-bound teens find quality titles is essential to youth services. Teachers and librarians should be aware that many colleges and universities have reading lists that they expect their entering freshman to have read before entering college. Librarians should research the colleges most attended in their area, find the reading lists, and create Internet links to them. One helpful title is More Outstanding Books for the College Bound by Linda Waddle (ALA, 2009) includes a plethora of wonderful titles to build breadth and depth.

Titles for the College Bound

Novels:

Bless Me Ultima by Rudoph Anaya
The Awakening by Kate Chopin
Invisible Man by Ralph Ellison
The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald
The Handmaid's Tale by Margaret Atwood
Their Eyes Were Watching God by Zora Neale Hurston
The Things They Carried by Tim O'Brien
Animal Farm by George Orwell
The Catcher in the Rye by J.D. Salinger
Slaughter-House Five by Kurt Vonnegut
The Joy Luck Club by Amy Tan
The Color Purple by Alice Walker
My Antonia by Willa Cather
A Farewell to Arms by Ernest Hemingway

Drama:

A Doll's House by Henrik Ibsen
Raisin in the Sun by Lorraine Hansberry
Death of a Salesman by Arthur Miller
Hamlet by Shakespeare
Waiting for Godot by Samuel Becket
Our Town by Thornton Wilder
The Glass Menagerie by Tennessee Williams

Poetry and Poets:

Beowulf
Canterbury Tales
Paradise Lost
Emily Dickenson
Pablo Naruda
Anne Sexton

Miscellaneous:

Aristotle's Poetics
Bible
Marx's Communist Manifesto

10 Most Recommended Authors*

1. William Shakespeare
2. William Faulkner
3. Charles Dickens
4. Ernest Hemingway
5. Jane Austen
6. Homer
7. Mark Twain
8. Sophocles
9. Nathaniel Hawthorne
10. F. Scott Fitzgerald

*From Arco's Reading Lists for College-Bound Students (3rd Edition). Ed. Doug Estell, Michele L. Satchwell, and Patricia S. Wright. Arco, 2000

Keeping Up

- Outstanding Science Tradebooks for Students K–12: www.nsta.org/ostbc
- Notable Trade Books for Young People [Social Science]: www.socialstudies.org/resources/notable/
- Outstanding Books for the College Bound and Life-Long Learners: www.ala.org/ala/yalsa/booklistsawards/outstandingbooks/outstandingbooks.htm
- Pierce, Valerie. Countdown to College: 21 To Do Lists for High School. 2nd ed., 2009
- Crawford, Amy. Great Books for High School: A Teacher's Guide to Books that Can Change Teens' Lives, 2004.
- Hahn, Daniel. The Ultimate Teen Book Guide. 2007 (from a British perspective)
- Silvey, Anita. 500 Great Books for Teens. Houghton Mifflin, 2006

Thought Questions

- 1) How could High School teachers encourage reading with an eye upon the needs of college freshman?
- 2) How could school and public librarians encourage appropriate reading for the college-bound?

Cultural Literacy? The High School Canon

There are certain books that the vast majority of high school students will have read by the time they graduate. Years later they will reminisce and commiserate about the experience and find that whether they went to school in New York, California, or Texas, they have read the same titles. The high school canon includes Shakespeare, Fitzgerald, Dickens, and Steinbeck, and is supplemented by different authors in different classrooms in different states. However, there are a few titles that are expected.

It is not unusual for students across the United States to read Romeo and Juliet at some point in their high school career, occasionally earlier. Other Shakespeare plays common to the English classroom experience include Julius Caesar, A Midsummer's Night Dream, and Hamlet. Students also experience As You Like It, The Taming of the Shrew, and Macbeth.

While there is no federal adoption of curricular material and class titles vary from state to state, district-to-district, school-to-school, and even classroom-to-classroom, certain novels appear again and again. Popular titles in the English curriculum include To Kill a Mockingbird by Harper Lee, Lord of the Flies by William Golding, Grapes of Wrath and Of Mice and Men by John Steinbeck, Great Expectations by Charles Dickens, and Fahrenheit 451 by Ray Bradbury. Adults at most cocktail parties can discuss the meaning of the green light on Daisy's dock in The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald.

In recent years high schools have attempted to address a more multicultural audience and include more contemporary works. Currently many high schools use I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings by Maya Angelou, Their Eyes Were Watching God by Zora Neale Hurston, Bless Me, Ultima by Rudolph Anaya, and The Joy Luck Club by Amy Tan. Parents who are concerned about inappropriate language often challenge these novels. Of course some classic novels written by "dead white guys" face similar challenges.

As schools scramble to address standards, districts and states have instituted summer reading lists for students to ensure that the students are exposed to classic literature and that students continue to read over the summer. Occasionally summer reading includes popular titles and young adult titles, but the fare on the lists is often similar to what students encounter in their classrooms despite ongoing debate within the English teacher's community about encouraging pleasure reading and using young adult novels. Furthermore, there is a lack of non-fiction on required reading lists. This is true of books in the classroom curriculum as well as summer reading lists.

The new Common Core Standards created by the U.S. National Governor's Conference recommends that students be more prepared to read complex texts before they enter college so that they are able to wrestle with the great ideas across many disciplines.

As youth service librarians, advocating with English teachers to include you in the creation of summer reading lists and supplemental classroom reading lists is essential. It will help you be more prepared for requests. Beyond that, as an expert in young adult literature, you are a voice for teens. Encourage list makers to include non-fiction, young adult literature, multicultural titles, and contemporary authors. Encourage teachers to expand offerings in their classrooms through literature circles and independent reading. Immerse yourself in the debate so you can speak in their terms and passionately advocate for the quality literature that teens enjoy.

Titles in the High School Canon

- Great Expectations by Charles Dickens
- Of Mice and Men by John Steinbeck
- The Old Man and the Sea by Ernest Hemingway
- The Grapes of Wrath by John Steinbeck
- Hamlet by Shakespeare
- Julius Caesar by Shakespeare
- Lord of the Flies by William Golding
- Night by Elie Weisel
- Fahrenheit 451 by Ray Bradbury
- Adventures of Huckleberry Finn by Mark Twain
- The Stranger by Albert Camus
- Oedipus by Sophocles
- To Kill a Mockingbird by Harper Lee
- The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald

Thought Questions

- 1) How important is a literary canon in high school?
- 2) What titles do you think all high school students should read?
- 3) What role does summer reading play in developing a familiarity with the canon?
- 4) Should non-fiction be included in the high school canon?
- 5) What books should be added to create a more culturally diverse list?

Spotlight: Textbook Provider's Bestsellers

Top Ten Required Novels

1. Romeo and Juliet: Shakespeare
2. Macbeth: Shakespeare
3. The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn: Mark Twain
4. Julius Caesar: Shakespeare
5. To Kill a Mockingbird: Harper Lee
6. The Scarlet Letter: Nathaniel Hawthorn
7. Of Mice and Men: John Steinbeck
8. Hamlet: Shakespeare
9. The Great Gatsby: F. Scott Fitzgerald
10. Lord of the Flies: William Golding

Top 5 Required Authors

1. William Shakespeare
2. John Steinbeck
3. Mark Twain
4. Charles Dickens
5. Arthur Miller

Check out:

<http://bestsellers.about.com/od/readingrecommendations/tp/SummerReading.htm>

Further Readings

- Antal, James. "Just for the fun of it: a high school is determined to make summer reading a pleasure. (What Works)." School Library Journal, April 2003 v. 49 i. 4 47–48.
- Gallo, Donald R. "How Classics Create an Aliterate Society" English Journal: Jan. 2001. 33–39.
- Sullivan, Ed. "Some Teens Prefer the Real Thing: The Case for Young Adult Nonfiction" English Journal: Jan. 2001. 43–47.
- Webb, Allen. "Literature from the Modern Middle East," English Journal, January, 2009, v. 98, no. 3, p. 80-88.
- Webb, Allen. "Digital Texts and the New Literacies," English Journal, January 2009v. 97 n. 1. 83–88.
- Whelan, Debra Lau. "Yo Hamlet." School Library Journal June, 2007 v.56 n.3 48–50
- Williams, Linda. "How I Spent my Summer Vacation . . . with School Reading Lists." VOYA Feb 2002, v. 24 n. 6. 416–421.
- Younker, J. Marrin. "A Classic Argument" School Library Journal August, 2007, 25.

Poetry and Full-Length Works in Verse

Poetry is a form of literature that intensifies experiences. A poem communicates emotions, ideas, and images through words that mean more than the words actually say. There are many definitions of poetry—most involve meter, rhyme, and structure. Poetry comes in many forms, and those who restrict poetry to a basic structure they are comfortable with do not understand the flexibility of the genre. One of the beauties of poetry is that it can be blended, molded, and formed to express feelings, emotions, and thoughts that other genres cannot communicate so eloquently. Poets carefully eliminate extraneous terms and select just the right word to convey the message (economy of text). The intensity and passion in poetry comes at a good time for young adults who live a life where everything surrounding them is intense and important.

Young adult readers might be inclined to avoid poetry and stories in verse for fear that they will be asked to analyze the piece. If readers can be convinced that they will not be asked to dissect every poetic element and word choice of the poet, they are more likely to turn to poetry as pleasure reading. Book talks and attractive displays created by librarians and teachers can help greatly in promoting both poetry and full-length works told in verse. Reading aloud poetry spontaneously provides appreciation and familiarity with the genre.

Verse Novels in the Classroom

Ever since Karen Hesse's verse novel, Out of the Dust, earned the Newbery Award in 1998, a number of verse novels have made their way into the lexicon of young adult literature. The verse novel is a contemporary genre that evokes the power of a rich narrative with the power of verse. Verse novels range from ordinary with little plot to beautifully crafted novels with a strong sense of voice and plot. Verse "novels" range from historical pieces such as Paul B. Janzko's Worlds Afire (2007); to biographies such as Marilyn Nelson's Carver: A Life in Poems (2001); or to A Bad Boy Can Be Good for a Girl (2006), a book by Tanya Lee Stone focusing on contemporary teen problems.

Successful verse novels have a narrative structure similar to a prose novel: changing perspectives, a series of short sections are common elements. Verse novels often employ multiple narrators that provide a wide view of the inner workings of a character's mind. Verse novels are an effective way to introduce poetry into the lives of readers. They work well in a small group and provide an opportunity for performance work. Verse novels can also be used effectively to stimulate the writing of poetry.

Prose & Poetry Connections

Using poetry as the lure to bring readers to longer books of poetry, to traditional fiction, or to suggest research topics is often a successful venture. After reading Dudley Randall's "The Ballad of Birmingham," a poem about the church bombing in that city during the civil rights movement, Christopher Paul Curtis changed the destination in The Watsons Go to Birmingham-1963 from Florida to Birmingham. The book earned a Newbery honor and a Coretta Scott King honor award. Randall's poem might be just the piece to introduce Curtis's book.

One target audience for novels in verse appeal is the rapper, one of those young people who love rap music. Already comfortable with verse, a rapper is often searching for alternative formats of poetry. Capitalize on this connection by suggesting poems as a source for performance works. Institute an afternoon of poetry readings/raps.

Poetry Blasts, Jams, and Slams

A Poetry Blast could become a popular forum for sharing poetry, providing a forum for performance, and encouraging reading of all types. Read ideas for starting a poetry blast online at: www.marilynsinger.net/fullblast.htm. On May 12, 2009, First Lady Michelle Obama and the President hosted the first "Poetry Jam" at the White House. Poets and playwrights, actors and musicians gathered to share the spoken word. Investigate who participated and what poetry and music was shared. Hold a poetry blast/jam in your school/library—consider sharing similar selections/poets. A poetry slam has an element of competition, much like the reality competition shows such as American Idol or America's Got Talent. Young adults may enjoy that type of event as well.

Poetry—A Selected List

- Carlson, Lori Marie. Red Hot Salsa: Bilingual Poems on Being Young and Latino in the United States. (2005)
Franco, Betsy. Falling Hard: 100 Love Poems by Teenagers. (2008)
George, Kristine O'Connell. Swimming Upstream: Middle School Poems. (2002)
Grandits, John. Blue Lipstick: Concrete Poems. (2007); Technically, It's Not My Fault: Concrete Poems. (2004)
Grimes, Nikki, ed. Planet Middle School. (2011)
Chaltas, Thalia. Beacues I am Furniture (2009)
Collins, Billy. Ballistics. (2008)
Hopkins, Lee Bennett, ed. America at War: Poems Sselected by Lee Bennett Hopkins (2008)
Janeczko, Paul B. Requiem: Poems of the Terezin Ghetto. (2011)
Mora, Pat. My Own True Name: New and Selected Poems for Young Adults, 1984-1999. (2000)
Nye, Naomi Shihab. You and Yours. (2008)
Sidman, Joyce. Dark Emperor and Other Poems of the Night (2010)
Szyborska, Wislawa. Monologue of a Dog. (2005)
Uhlir, Joyce Sandra. Mysterious Light: Poems, Colorful, and Transparent. (2010)
Waters, Fiona. Poems From Many Cultures: Poetry Collection 4. (2002)

A Selected List of Full-Verse Narratives

- Adoff, Jamie. Jimi e3 Me. (2005)
Brown, Susan Taylor. Hugging the Rock. (2006).
Creech, Sharon. Love That Dog. (2001); Hate That Cat. (2008)
Engle, Margarita. The Firefly Letters: A Suffragette's Journey to Cuba (2010)
Frost, Helen. Keesha's House. (2003; 2007); The Braid. (2006); Diamond Willow. (2008)
Fullerton, Alma. Walking on Glass. (2007); Libertad. (2008)
Herrick, Steven. A Place Like This. (1998); Do-Wrong Ron. (2005)
High, Linda Oatman. Sister Slam and the Poetic Motormouth Road Trip. (2004); Planet Pregnancy. (2008)
Lee Wong, Joyce. Seeing Emily. (2005)
Nelson, Marilyn. Carver: A Life in Poems. (2001); A Wreath for Emmett Till. (2005); Miss Crandall's School for Young Ladies e3 Little Misses of Color. (with Elisabeth Alexander, 2007)
Sones, Sonya. What My Girlfriend Doesn't Know. (2007)
Stone, Tanya Lee. A Bad Boy Can Be Good for a Girl. (2006)
Van Arsdale, Carol. Three Rivers Rising. (2010)
Wild, Margaret. Jinx. (2002); One Night. (2004)

For bibliographies of verse novels, check out these sites:

- Dover (NH) Public Library — www.dover.lib.nh.us/teenpage/novelsverse.htm
- Austin (TX) Public Library “Wired for Youth” — www.wiredforyouth.com/books/index.cfm?booklist=verse
- Adolescent literacy (adlit.org) — www.adlit.org/books/c812/
- Carnegie Library — www.carnegieliibrary.org/teens/books/showbooklist.cfm?catid=6&list=novelsinverse

Focus Book

A Kick in the Head: An Everyday Guide to Poetic Forms, edited by Paul B. Janeczko with illustrations by Chris Raschka. (2004)

Although in picture-book format, this book will be a valuable aid in introducing 29 poetic forms to teen readers. Examples of elusive forms as the aubade (Eleanor Farjeon), elegy (X.J. Kennedy), couplet (Ogden Nash), pantoum (Liz Rosenberg), and sonnets (Shakespeare) are included, along with twenty-four other forms.

From the same collaborators: A Poke in the I: A Collection of Concrete Poems. (2001), and A Foot in the Mouth: Poems to Speak, Sing and Shout (2009)

Want a little help in igniting excitement for poetry among your students? Seek out Paul Janeczko's 2011 title for professionals—Where A Poem Belongs Is Here: Cultivating Passion for Poetry in the Middle Grades. Educators of high school students will find some great ideas to adapt.

Poets to Investigate

Jaime Adoff	Betsy Franco
Mary Jo Bang	Robin Hirsch
Billy Collins	Paul B. Janeczko
Cornelius Eady	Sonya Sones

Novel or Poem?

Make an attractive three-part display of favorite prose novels, poetry collections/anthologies, and verse novels. Put the traditional novels on one side and label them as such. Put the poetry on the other end and label. In the middle display some popular verse novels and ask: Novel or Poem? Include a "voting" sheet to allow readers to decide which category best fits the verse novel.

Spotlight: Paul Janeczko

Paul Janeczko learned to love poetry as a college student, and when he became an English teacher he shared his love of poetry with his students. After twenty-two years as a teacher, he resigned to become a full-time writer. He is an anthologist and a poet. He has collected favorite books, written poetry, created a full-length poetic narrative, and interviewed other poets. Watch for Janeczko's new novel length book of poems—check his website at www.paulbjanezko.com.

- Requiem: Poems of the Terezin Ghetto (2011)
- Blushing: Expressions of Love in Poems and Letters. (2004)
- Dirty Laundry Pile: Poems in Different Voices. Illustrated by Melissa Sweet (2001)
- Looking for Your Name: A Collection of Contemporary Poems. (1993)
- Seeing the Blue Between: Advice and Inspiration for Young Poets. (2002)
- Worlds Afire: The Hartford Circus Fire of 1944. (2004)
- Birds on a Wire: A Renga 'round Town with J. Patrick Lewis and illustrated by Gary Lippincott (2008)

Poet Laureate

The United States has had a poet laureate since 1937 (called a "poetry consultant" prior to 1985), which is appointed by the Librarian of Congress in October for a one-year term. Research the poets who have served in this capacity and identify some that have a connection to young adult readers. We have had a children's poet laureate since 2007 (Jack Prelutsky 2007–2008; Mary Ann Hoberman 2009–2010). If a young adult's poet laureate were to be named in the United States, who would be five poets that should be among the top poets considered for this position? Should we have a YA poet laureate?

Thought Questions

- 1) Develop an idea for introducing a poet and his/her poetry into a curricular unit.
- 2) What is the best way to interest young adult readers in poetry?
- 3) What strategies will make young adults more receptive to poetry?

Adult Books and the Teenage Reader

Teachers and librarians should not be surprised at the number of adult titles teens consume. Their interaction with the popular culture and movies often leads them to adult titles such as The Da Vinci Code before titles marketed for teens. Personal interests such as computers, astronomy, automobiles, or sports lead teens to adult titles because these teens exhaust all the simpler materials written for children and teens very quickly. Interest in adult topics will require both teachers and librarians to connect teens with information sources from the web to adult collections in public and academic libraries and the selection of materials for adults that have been included in larger school library collections. A good place to start is knowledge of the bestseller lists, both fiction and non-fiction, by probing the best-known New York Times and the USA Today lists. While these lists are marketing tools, teens will encounter them and ask for selected titles by their favorite authors.

For personal interests, teachers and librarians can use library catalogues of larger adult collections and Internet or database collections to guide teens into advanced materials. The challenge may be the reading level of these materials, but teens with high interest and motivation will learn to read far above their normal reading level. A keen eye for readable and attractive adult editions will often attract a teen reader. For example, there are many titles published by Dorling Kindersley with well-formatted texts and illustrations that can be the gateway into adult topics for teens with limited reading ability or language problems. Regular questioning of teens about their personal interest will provide insights into the types of materials in the adult world that teens would enjoy.

The Young Adult Library Services Association (YALSA) selects ten titles each year of adult books they consider of particular interest to teen readers. Their list is worth reviewing to see if any of the titles would be of interest to teens in your area. Titles on the 2011 ALEX list are:

- The Boy Who Couldn't Sleep and Never Had To by DC Pierson
- Breaking Night: A Memoir of Forgiveness, Survival, and My Journey from Homeless to Harvard by Liz Murray
- Girl in Translation by Jean Kwok
- The House of Tomorrow by Peter Bognanni,
- The Lock Artist by Steve Hamilton
- The Particular Sadness of Lemon Cake: A Novel by Aimee Bender
- The Radleys by Matt Haig
- The Reapers Are the Angels: A Novel by Alden Bell
- Room: A Novel by Emma Donoghue
- The Vanishing of Katharina Linden: A Novel by Helen Grant,

(Find the ALEX award lists at www.ala.org/yalsa/booklists/alex)

Popular Best Selling List

Looking at USA Today's list of bestselling books (2011) there are several adult titles that might appeal to young adult readers, including:

- A Stolen Life by Jaycee Dugard — Memoir of a kidnap victim, held captive for 18 years.
- The Kane Chronicles, Book 1: The Red Pyramid by Rick Riordan — Modern day siblings discover the gods of ancient Egypt are back...
- The Hunger Games by Suzanne Collins. Girl Takes sister's place in a real-life survival game.

- Now You See Her by James Patterson and Michael Ledwidge. A young lawyer must leave her new life in New York, and confront her secret past in Florida, to help a man framed for murder.

Genre Fiction

Westerns—The late Louis L'Amour was the king of western genre fiction. His short story collections, The Collected Short Stories of Louis L'Amour (Volumes One and Two), continue to be on the Western bestseller lists along with Shavetail by Thomas Cobb; Another Man's Moccasins by Craig Johnson; and Trouble at the Redstone by John D. Nesbitt. Current award books are listed at www.westernwriters.org

Romance—Each year the Romance Writers of America create a list of best romance books. Finalists for 2010 award books include: The Confidential Life of Eugenia Cooper by Kathleen Y'Barbo; The Inheritance by Tamera Alexander; The Accidental by Wendy Wax; and The Last Will of Moira Leahy by Therese Walsh. Additional titles and authors can be found on the Romance Writers of America website at www.rwanational.org

Mysteries—Mystery Writers of America (www.mysterywriters.org) is a definitive source for award-winning mystery titles. Mary Higgins Clark is one of the notable authors in this genre—she writes both adult and young adult titles. Newer titles in the mystery genre include: The Long Quiche by Avery James; Rage by Gary C. King; Last Writes by Sheila Lowe; and Stork Raving Mad by Donna Andrews.

Espionage—But I Trusted You: Ann Rule's Crime Files #14 by Ann Rule, Triple Cross: How bin Laden's Master Spy Penetrated the CIA, the Green Berets, and the FBI by Peter Lance, and Dead or Alive by Tom Clancy are among classic and current bestsellers and represent bestselling authors in this genre.

Authors of Note

John Grisham—As a child in Tennessee in the 1950s, Grisham dreamed of being a professional ball player. He became an attorney instead and later served as a state representative in his home state. He served as a representative until 1990. One of his first books came about when he overheard the compelling testimony of a young rape victim. For a number of years, Grisham arose early and wrote. His first book became A Time to Kill (1988). The Firm (1991) became a best-selling novel and the basis for a popular movie. Each year since 1988, Grisham has produced another book—all bestsellers—and seven have been turned into movies. The Associate (2009) and The Appeal (2008) are among Grisham's recent titles. Website: www.randomhouse.com/features/grisham/

Dean Koontz—Koontz's books have been described as graphic and fast-paced with well-developed characters. His quest to become a full-time writer began when he was a senior in college and won an Atlantic Monthly fiction competition. His childhood was spent in Pennsylvania where he graduated from Shippensburg University. After graduation he became a writing tutor with the Appalachian Poverty Program and later became an English teacher in Harrisburg. Eventually, his wife offered to support him for five years with the idea that if he did not make it as a writer in that time period, he would never become a self-supporting writer. Koontz's bid to become a successful writer succeeded. Ten of his novels have been number one on the New York Times hardcover bestseller list. Twelve of his books have achieved that position on the paperback list. Koontz's recent books include: Nevermore by Dean Koontz, Keith Champagne, and Andy Smith; Relentless; and Dead and Alive (2009). Website: www.deankoontz.com

Michael Crichton—During his lifetime, Michael Crichton, an author of the techno-thriller, sold over a million books in thirty-six languages, in a writing career spanning four decades. He studied medicine at Harvard, but after graduation he became a writer and filmmaker, and in the 1980s he developed computer programs for the film industry. He was the original creator of E.R., basing it on his early days as a young doctor. He is the very popular author of: Andromeda Strain (1969) and Jurassic Park (1990). With recent publications, Pirate Latitudes (2009)—a novel discovered after his death along with a techno-thriller to be published in 2010 or 2011—he gained immortality. Website: www.michaelcrichton.com

Jodi Picoult—Picoult’s books are excellent examples of cross-over novels. Despite being published for adults, they often feature teen characters. The Pact (1998) centers around two young teens that have a suicide pact, and the aftermath in their families. In Plain Truth (1999) a young Amish girl gives birth and murders her baby. In The Tenth Circle (2006) a young woman is raped, setting off a devastating chain of events. Nineteen Minutes (2007) explores the thoughts and emotions surrounding a school shooting. Handle with Care (2009) deals with a daughter’s rare bone disease; and House Rules (2010) deals with a teenager with Asperger’s syndrome. Picoult became a NY Times Bestseller with My Sister’s Keeper (2004), which also was made into a movie by Warner (they also changed the ending). www.jodipicoult.com

Some ALEX Award winners remain popular with teens. Some of the more popular past winners include:

- The Boy Who Harnessed the Wind: Creating Currents of Electricity and Hope by William Kamkwamba and Bryan Mealer (2009)
- Peace Like a River by Leif Enger (2002)
- 10th Grade by Joseph Weisberg (2003)
- The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Nighttime by Mark Hadden (2004)
- Stiff by Mary Roach (2004)
- My Sister’s Keeper by Jodi Picoult (2005)
- Donorboy by Mark Halpern (2005)
- Stitches: A Memoir, by David Small (2009)
- As Simple as Snow by Greg Galloway (2006)
- Eagle Blue: A Team, A Tribe, and a High School Basketball Season in Arctic Alaska by Michael D’Orso (2007)
- The Blind Side: Evolution of a Game by Michael Lewis (2007)
- A Long Way Gone: Memoirs of a Boy Soldier by Beah Ishmael (2008)

Thought Question

- 1) Survey 20 young adult readers asking them to list the last five books they have read voluntarily (not class assignments). Then categorize the books into those considered as being written for young adults and those intended for an adult audience. What conclusions can you draw from your survey data?

Picture Books for Young Adults

In many libraries, picture books were for decades and still are, designated as “E” (easy) reading titles. The truth is the text in many picture books is anything but “easy” reading and some deal with topics that are sophisticated and complicated. “Everybody” might be a more useful term. There are some books designated as picture books because of format, but would not be recommended for readers under the age of 8 or 9. Pink and Say by Patricia Polacco, a tale from the Civil War, or Hiroshima No, Pika! by Toshi Maruki, a powerful book about the bombing of Hiroshima, are examples of picture books for older readers.

Picture books with a strong curriculum narrative are, for many purposes, a short story with illustrations. There are many uses for these abbreviated stories or texts in the middle school and senior high curriculum. Musical directors planning a Madrigal dinner theater might find the exact depictions of costumes that are needed in Alikì’s Medieval Feast (1986). Franklyn Branley’s Journey Into a Black Hole (1988) will be the perfect introduction to a scholarly unit on black holes. Those readers examining Christopher Columbus’s role as seen by contemporary historians will find using Jane Yolen’s Encounter (1996) very useful. Similarly, a unit on World War II would not be complete without introducing some of the faces of the Japanese citizens who were interned during World War II in the USA— A Place Where Sunflowers Grow by Amy Lee-Tai and Felicia Hoshino (2006) puts a human face on the experience.

Picture books or short stories (illustrated or not) are successfully used to:

- promote literacy across the curriculum;
- convey ideas simply;
- introduce/encourage the reading of more difficult books on the same subject;
- encourage creative writing in prose and poetry;
- promote awareness of language;
- teach artistic styles in illustrations;
- encourage the development of creativity and imagination;
- introduce a person or topic for more in-depth study.
- provide a schema for students in special education or ESL classes;
- provide models for teen parents to read to their children;
- teach elements of literature—plotting, characterization, etc.;
- provide material for reader’s theater, speech class, and so forth;
- teach literary devices: foreshadowing, flashbacks, and so forth.

Try any one of these:

Art

- Krull, Kathleen and Kathryn Hewitt. Lives of the Artists: Masterpieces, Messes (and What the Neighbors Thought). (2011)—biographical anecdotes.

History

- Adler, David A. Enemies of Slavery. Illustrated by Donald A. Smith. (2004)—Thirteen anti-slavery individuals profiled.
- Arnis, Nancy. Orphans of Normandy: A True Story of World War II Told Through Drawings by Children. (2003)—One hundred orphan girls walk from their orphanage amidst the chaos of the Allied invasion of Normandy on June 6, 1944 to safety behind Allied lines.
- Aylesworth, Jim. Our Abe Lincoln. (2009)—Rendition of a song sung during Lincoln’s presidential campaigns. Song sung to the tune of “Old Grey Mare.”

- Baretta, Gene. Now & Ben: The Modern Inventions of Benjamin Franklin. (2008)
- Behnke, Alison. Chinese in America. (2004) — History of Chinese immigration to the United States.
- Borden, Louise. Across the Blue Pacific: A World War II Story. Illustrated by Robert Andrew Parker. (2006) — A school class corresponds with a soldier.
- Brown, Craig. Mule Train Mail. (2009) — A capsule of one aspect of the life on the Havasupai Indian Reservation at the bottom of the Grand Canyon.
- Curlee, Lynn. Ballpark: The Story of America's Baseball Fields. (2005) — From ball parks to hot dogs.
- Curlee, Lynn. Capital. (2003) — History of Washington, D.C. focusing on the National Mall, its monuments, & its buildings.
- Currier, Katrina Saltonstall. Kai's Journey to Gold Mountain: An Angel Island Story. (2005) — In 1934, twelve-year-old Kai leaves China to join his father in America.
- Deedy, Carmon Agra. 14 Cows for America. Illustrated by Thomas Gonzales. (2009) — True story of the response of a Maasai village in Kenya to the events of September 11, 2001.
- Freedman, Russell. The Adventures of Marco Polo. Illustrated by Bagram Ibatoulline. (2006) — Biography of Marco Polo
- Giblin, James. Secrets of the Sphinx. (2004) — What, why and how of these famous Egyptian landmarks.
- Hesse, Karen. The Cats in Krasinski Square. Illustrated by Wendy Watson. (2004) — Two Jewish sisters, escapees of the infamous Warsaw ghetto, devise a plan to foil Gestapo plans to intercept food for starving people.
- Cheripko, Jan. Caesar Rodney's Ride: The Story of an American Patriot. Illustrated by Gary Lippincott. (2004) — Caesar Rodney may be responsible for our nation's birth; this book tells how.
- Krull, Kathleen. Hillary Rodham Clinton: Dreams Taking Flight. (2008) — A young girl set her sights high.
- Lewin, Ted. Lost City: The Discovery of Machu Picchu. (2003) — Hiram Bingham, a Yale professor, and a Peruvian boy discover a lost Incan city in 1911.
- Littlesugar, Amy. Willy and Max: A Holocaust Story. (2006) — Looting of treasures in Germany during World War II; restoration to the rightful owner.
- McGill, Alice. Molly Bannaky. Illustrated by Chris T. Soentpiet. (1999) — Story of Benjamin Banneker's (surveyor of Washington, D.C.) grandmother and her immigration.
- McKissack, Pat. Days of Jubilee. (2003) — Slavery from original sources.
- Polacco, Patricia. Butterfly. (2004) — During the Nazi occupation of France, Monique's mother hides a Jewish family in her basement.
- Polacco, Patricia. Pink and Say. (1994) — Tale of two boy soldiers who befriend one another during the war. A powerful story.

Literature

- Coville, Bruce. William Shakespeare's Twelfth Night. Illustrated by Dennis Nolan. (pb 2003) — An adaptation of Shakespeare's classic title with Coville's own prose integrated with pivotal lines from Shakespeare's origin.
- Kimmel, Eric A. The Hero Beowulf. Illustrated by Leonard Everett Fisher. (2005) — A simple, brief retelling of the Anglo-Saxon epic.
- Longfellow, Henry Wadsworth. Paul Revere's Ride: The Landlord's Tale. Illustrated by Charles Santore. (2003) — Depicts the landlord of the Wayside Inn telling the story of Paul Revere's Ride.
- Rosen, Michael. Shakespeare's Romeo & Juliet. Illustrated by Jane Ray. (2003) — Scene by scene account; act and scene references.

- Smith, Lane. It's a book. (2010) — a tongue-in-cheek battle between the old fashioned “book” and the newest technology
- Walker, Alice. Why War Is Never a Good Idea. (2008) — Poetry grieving the impact of war.

Science

- Appelt, Kathi. Miss Lady Bird's Wildflowers: America's Environmental First Lady. Illustrated by Joy Fisher Hein. (2005) — A biography of Lady Bird Johnson.
- Arnold, Caroline. The Skeletal System. (2004) — Biology
- Nivola, Claire A. Planting the Trees: The Story of Wangani Maathai. (2008) — Making a difference.
- Pringle, Laurence. Snakes! Strange and Wonderful. Illustrated by Meryl Henderson. (2004) — Interesting new details; for fans of Animal Kingdom shows.

General Topics

- Alberg, Alan. Previously. (2008)
- Bang, Molly. Common Ground: The Water, Earth, And Air We Share. (1997) — The natural resources we share.
- Barasch, Lynn. Knockin' on Wood. (2004) — An inspirational biography of Clayton “Peg Leg” Bates (1907–1998) who lost a leg at age 12 and went on to become a world-renowned tap dancer.
- Cutler, Jane. Cello of Mr. O. (2000) — Cost of war.
- Gold, Julie. From a Distance. (2000) — Anti-war song
- Love, D. Anne. Of Numbers and Stars: The Story of Hypatia. Illustrated by Pam Paparone. (2006) — Biography of Hypatia, a Greek scholar, philosopher, writer, and teacher. Math.
- Scieszka, Jon. Math Curse. Illustrated by Lane Smith. (1995) — Math, prime numbers.
- Shulevitz, Uri. How I Learned Geography. (2008) — An unforgettable person story.
- Stevenson, Harvy. Looking at Liberty. (2003) — A look at the grand lady in New York Harbor.

Keeping Up

- Hall, Susan J. (2001) Using Picture Storybooks to Teach Literary Devices: Recommended Books for Children and Young Adults Volume 3 (Using Picture Books to Teach) Oryx. Volume 1: 1990; Volume 2: 1998.
- Children's Literature: Independent Information and Reviews. “Themed Reviews: Picture Books for Older Readers.” (n.d.) Online: www.childrenslit.com/childrenslit/th_picbkolder.html
- McElmeel, Sharron L. (2009) Picture That! From Mendel to Normandy: Picture Books and Ideas, Curriculum and Connections —for Tweens and Teens. Includes connecting ideas for a multitude of titles—in classrooms and libraries—with older readers. Annotations, quick lists, and many strategies for use.
- Picture Books for Older Readers wiki (2009) Online: picturebooksforolderreaders.pbworks.com

Spotlight on The Chiru of High Tibet

The Chiru are an endangered species, and when environmentalist George Shaller discovered their plight, he set out to save them. Soon four mountain men were setting out to find the calving grounds, so that the grounds could be designated as a reserve. No one else had succeeded. The Chiru of High Tibet is their story, recounted by Jacqueline Briggs Martin (with illustrations by Linda S. Wiggerter) (2010). Visit the author's website for more information: www.jacquelinebriggsmartin.com Links will lead to art appreciation (mandalas), environmental education, endangered animals, black market, and environment vs economy.

Thought Question

It takes experience to know what picture book and illustrated stories to use with teens. What tips can you gather from other teachers and librarians to match reader with text?

Making Connections: Young Adult Literature in the Classroom

The majority of the titles that make up the high school canon are “classics” originally written for an adult audience. Teens can find these titles difficult to read, difficult to relate to, and “over-taught.” A common complaint about English class among teens is that the over-analysis of texts can often ruin the enjoyment of the book, compounded by the “right answer” for which they feel responsible. This environment can undermine the joy of reading, and teens will come to view reading as a chore rather than a pleasurable activity. One way to combat the difficulties of teaching literature to teens is to find ways to incorporate young adult literature into the English classroom to support and enhance current curriculum.

There are a number of ways to introduce YA literature to a classroom in a manner that supports the curriculum: individual reading of titles that are thematically consistent with the class novel, whole class reading of a YA novel that illuminates the themes either before or during the reading of a “classic,” or a teacher can opt to teach only the Young Adult novel to cover the topics, genres and themes the classic would have covered. These techniques are particularly helpful for struggling readers but can be successful with capable and avid readers as well.

There is, however, a basic debate question that surrounds the inclusion of young adult literature in the classroom that should be considered by those involved in reading instruction: the librarian, the English department, reading specialists, and resource teachers. What is the responsibility to impart cultural knowledge? Is there a canon that high school students should experience? What is the responsibility of English teachers to build avid life-long readers? Does teaching the “high school canon” interfere with teens developing an avid reading habit? There is theory and research that support the idea that young adult literature should be used in the classroom, and there is a call for cultural literacy. The debate is ongoing in English Journal, a journal published by National Council of Teachers of English and is worth in-depth exploration.

As an advocate of young adult literature in the classroom, you should be prepared to answer the question of quality, which may be the fallback position of those reluctant to use YA literature. There is, of course, quality YA material that covers all genres and has multiple narrators and fluid timelines. There are YA novels written in second person and with the omniscient third person narrator. It is a mistake to base one’s opinion of YA literature on the series romances many teachers experienced in the ‘80s and early ‘90s. As an advocate for young adult literature, seek out and recommend quality YA materials that meet the curricular needs of teachers and the developmental needs of teens. Keep current with the professional issues of NCTE and local English organizations so that you can use experts from those organizations to support YA literature in the classroom.

Debate: Young Adult Lit vs. the Classics

This is a topic that has been debated and discussed, and there seems to be no consensus in sight. Inform yourself and be ready to defend your position.

Read:

- Hardy, Lawrence. “The Loss of Literature.” American School Board Journal. Dec., 2004. Vol. 191 Issue 12, p13–17.
- Themed Issue: English Journal, Vol. 90, Number 3, January, 2001. Young Adult Literature: The Problem with YA Literature

Connections do not have to be thematic; they can be made based on archetypes in literature, such as the hero's journey, the fall from Eden, or good versus evil. They can also be based on time periods: stories that illuminate the Great Depression, such as Out of the Dust by Karen Hesse, can be used to supplement The Grapes of Wrath, or non-fiction titles, such as Witchhunt: Mysteries of the Salem Witch Trials by Marc Aronson, can help illuminate The Crucible by Arthur Miller. Connections can be further made across disciplines. History and Social Science have obvious connections, such as Catherine, Called Birdy (Cushman, 1994) for the Middle Ages and Ann Rinaldi's historical titles. However, titles for science, such as California Blue (Klass, 1994) and Double Helix (Werlin, 2004), can also be used. Math, health and physical education, and the Arts can all benefit from literary connections. There are a number of creative ways to incorporate YA literature in a classroom, so be on the lookout for new titles and methods to do so.

Spotlight: The Canon and Connections

Theme: Journey

Classics:

The Odyssey

The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn

The Grapes of Wrath

YA Connectors:

Downriver—Will Hobbs (1991)

Walk Two Moons—Sharon Creech (1994)

Rules of the Road—Joan Bauer (1998)

Trouble—Gary D. Schmidt (2008)

In the Space Left Behind—Joan Ackermann (2008)

Theme: The Brotherhood of Man (Or Not)

Classics:

Of Mice and Men

Lord of the Flies

To Kill a Mockingbird

YA Connectors:

Whale Talk—Chris Crutcher (2001)

What Happened to Cass McBride—Gail Giles (2006)

Theme: The Lure of Wealth

Classics:

Great Expectations

The Great Gatsby

YA Connectors:

Love Among the Walnuts—Jean Ferris (1998)

Big Slick—Eric Luper (2007)

Theme: Big Brother

Classics:

Animal Farm

Brave New World

YA Connectors:

The Gospel According to Larry—Janet Tashjian (2001)

The Giver—Lois Lowry (1993)

Feed—M.T. Anderson (2002)

Little Brother—Cory Doctorow (2008)

For More In-depth Analysis and Suggestions

From Hinton to Hamlet: Building Bridges Between Young Adult Literature and the Classics, Second Edition, Revised and Expanded by Sarah K. Herz and Don Gallo. Greenwood Press, 2005.

Thought Questions

- 1) What is the role of the library in creating avid, life-long readers?
- 2) How can teachers connect with both school and public librarians to explore new connections between the high school canon and young adult materials?

Section III

Issues to Consider in Young Adult Literature and Multimedia

This section contains just a few of the important issues connected with the world of teenage literature and multimedia. During the last twenty years, the publishing industry has become sensitive to the representation of the many voices represented in American culture. But there seems to be a long way to go as groups, such as Native Americans, Hispanics, Asian, and peoples from the Islamic worlds, seem to be underrepresented. Sadly, in our “pluralistic” society censorship is still alive and well as various groups try to impose their view of the world on everyone else. Finally, we end the section with a few recommendations on programming for young adults.

Multicultural Concerns

There is probably not one educator who doesn't have some concern for how various ethnic and minority groups are portrayed in literature. With almost 50% of the school population being identified as being of one ethnic minority or another, this concern becomes even more important. But dealing with multiculturalism is another matter. In many people's minds, the term multicultural translates into African American. In the past few years, more attention has come to the Asian and Hispanic cultures, and increasingly amounts of attention is now being paid to Native Americans and cultural and religious minorities.

In an article Ashley Bryan, a noted African American author and illustrator, once wrote for the Children's Book Council, he discussed the emergence of literature that acknowledged minority cultures. In that article, Bryan said, "Children can now see their images in illustrated books and in stories of their people. They make a direct connection to these pictures and stories." ("Ashley Bryan: Discovering Ethnicity Through Children's Books." CBC Magazine: The Children's Book Council. 2006.) While images of many cultures are being shown in picture books and middle-grade books and young adult novels are including a diversity of characters in greater numbers, those images and portrayals are often unflattering or deemed stereotypic by the groups portrayed. For example, visit a site created by a Native American organization whose mission is to ensure that the lives of Native American Indians are portrayed accurately and respectfully in literature. Their site (www.oyate.org) includes sections that provide resources for selecting books and for books to avoid. Their commentaries are very direct and cause one to question and to think about selection policies and how books impact readers.

Interestingly, it seems that most young adult novelists assume that readers view all characters as white and tend to identify only those characters who have a different ethnic or cultural background. One author that does not do that is Christopher Paul Curtis; he assumes his characters are African American and identifies characters as white. In Cynthia Leitich Smith's Rain is Not My Indian Name, readers might assume that Rain's best friend, Galen, is Native American. If they do they will be surprised in the middle of the novel.

Both teachers and librarians should be aware of the growing number of multi-racial teens in our society that do not identify with a particular racial or ethnic background but consider themselves just plain American. The most famous example, of course, is Tiger Woods. Many cultures would like to claim him as their own, but he has generally refused to identify with one group or another. On the other hand Barack Obama is generally identified as African American, but his mother was white, a native of Kansas. Adults need not pressure teens into choosing a cultural or ethnic background either in conversation with them or in the books recommended for them to read.

In the field of children and young adult literature circles, there is a fierce debate about who should be able to write and illustrate about a particular culture. Is it acceptable, and more importantly is the story credible, for a non-African American to write a story where the chief protagonist is African American? Can a non-Native American write of growing up in an Indian boarding school? Can a Christian writer write of teenagers growing up in a Jewish household? In a School Library Journal article,¹ Laurie Halse Anderson said, "In some ways, writing historical fiction is like writing outside of one's culture. The author must be scrupulous about detail and motivation, sensitive to cultural (and time) differences, wary of interpretation, and conscious of the reader's background and ability." Anderson is correct about historical fiction and in regard to authors who write outside of their culture. Authors who do write outside of their culture must be absolutely scrupulous about details, show extreme sensitivity to the cultural nuances and interpretations, and always remain conscious of the perspective of those about whom they write.

¹ Anderson, Laurie Halse. (2001 May) "The Writing of Fever 1793." School Library Journal. Volume 47, p 44.

A new term being used recently refers to “intercultural literacy.” Watch for this term and how it interplays with information about multicultural literacy.

Write About What You Care About

In the late 1980s and early 1990s, a large debate occurred in writing circles. The push for including a diversity of literature was in full force, but minority authors and illustrators were not being published in numbers sufficient enough to meet the demand. Writers “writing outside of their culture” were filling the void. Some decried the practice by saying that books written by someone who did not understand the culture intimately could not be authentic or valid, and, more importantly, non-minority authors were taking the place of minority writers. Critics suggested that editors (who belong to the majority culture) did not really understand the minority cultures themselves and thus did not view stories from minority writers as fitting into the mainstream market. The author of books for children and young adults involving many Black or Hispanic characters, Ann Cameron, a Caucasian from the Midwestern United States, countered this concept very well in an article written for *School Library Journal*². In that article she says, “To think that a book lacks validity because someone of the ‘wrong’ ethnic group wrote it perpetuates racism.” She makes a compelling case for writing about what one cares about, suggesting that writing about only what one knows stifles the writer and would surely have prohibited some of our great classics. If writers were confined to writing only about what they already know, many great books—authentic and credible despite being written by authors who were not writing of situations in their own culture—would have been deprived to readers.

Resources for Understanding and Keeping Up with Multicultural Concerns

- “Adolescent Literature” Literacy Matters.
www.literacymatters.org/adlit/selecting/multicultural.htm
- Across Cultures: A Guide to Multicultural Literature by Kathy East and Rebecca Thomas (Libraries Unlimited, 2007)
- Cooperative Children’s Book Center (CCBC). “Multicultural Literature.” Online:
www.education.wisc.edu/ccbc/books/multicultural.asp
- Debbie Reese’s American Indians in Children’s Literature Blog at:
americanindiansinchildrensliterature.blogspot.com/ —Debbie Reese (Nambe Pueblo) provides a critical thoughts on children’s and young adult literature
- Gates, Pamela S. Cultural Journeys: Multicultural Literature for Children and Young Adults. 2006
- Margolis, Rick. “Whitewashed.” School Library Journal. April 2000, Vol. 46 Issue 4, p18.
- McElmeel, Sharron L. “Good Intentions Are Not Enough.” Library Media Connection, Nov/Dec 2004, Vol. 23 Issue 3, p28. Online:
www.mcelmeel.com/writing/goodintentions.html
- Moore, David W. Serving Culturally and Linguistically Diverse Youth, Journal of Adolescent and Adult Literacy, March, 2011, v. 54, n. 6, p. 455-57.

² Cameron, Ann. “Write What You Care About.” School Library Journal. June 1989. Volume 35, issue 10, p 50, 2p.

- Pirofsky, Kira Isak. "Multicultural Literature and the Children's Literary Canon: Abstract." Research Room: EdChange Multicultural Pavilion. www.edchange.org/multicultural/papers/literature.html
- Welcome to Oyate — www.oyate.org — This site will kept you up to date on criteria and considerations in regard to Native American literature.
- Zapata, Anmgie. "Movement in Literacy: New Directions in Multilingual, Multicultural, Multinational, and Multimodal Literacy Studies," Language Arts, (March, 2011), v. 88, no 4, p 310-14.

See also the February 2009 issue of Teacher Librarian with a number of articles on diversity.

Spotlight

In the late 1980s the now inactive Council on Interracial Books for Children developed a list of 10 Quick Ways to Analyze Children's Books (including young adult books) for Racism and Sexism. The list includes such things as:

- Consider the effect on a child's self-image
- Weigh the relationships between people
- Watch for loaded words
- Check the copyright date

The complete list is found at:
www.teachingforchange.org/node/101

A good summary of the criteria is included in an article "Beyond Good Intentions: Selecting Multicultural Literature" by Joy Shiohita, originally published in September–October 1997 Children's Advocate news magazine published by Action Alliance for Children. Available online at: leeandlow.com/p/administrators_joyarticle.mhtml

Thought Questions

- 1) Are only Native Americans qualified to write books with Native American characters and Native American themes?
- 2) What would the status of books for children be today if Ezra Jack Keats (a Caucasian) had not illustrated A Snowy Day (1963) with a Black child, Peter?
- 3) What was Virginia Hamilton's contribution to the world of young adult literature? Christopher Paul Curtis? Alexie Sherman? Joseph Bruchac? Lawrence Yep? Gary Soto?
- 4) Survey four biography shelves (or another section) in your school or public library. Tally how many books feature men or women; Caucasian, Black, Native American, Hispanic, and so forth; historical figures or present day subjects. Is one category over-represented? And if so, why?

Thought Activity

Locate Ann Cameron's School Library Journal article (available from the EBSCO database). Read it and comment. Do you think writers who write outside of their culture are as credible as writers who write of events and people within their own culture and ethnic experience?

Censorship Issues

The schools of America operate under a policy of in loco parentis, meaning that school teachers, administrators, and librarians are the “parents” of children and teens while under their direction. To keep children and teens safe, schools often have closed campuses, declare drug- and alcohol-free zones, require visitors to register at the office, ban guns and other weapons, and put filters on Internet connectivity to lessen exposure to pornography, predators, and blatant propaganda produced by both large corporations and terrorists. Such safety measures come into conflict at times with the principles of free speech or the supposed right of teenagers to consume any types of information they wish. Both teachers and librarians, according to the courts, must take into consideration the standards of their communities for such things as decency and teen rights to controversial or pornographic information. For the most part, objections to information in our society center on foul language, politics, or sexual messages, and schools tend to respond to the wishes of parents in their communities. To do so, schools generally set up policy statements approved by a board of education laying out a defensible position with respect to controversial materials.

Schools, in general, must operate within the scope of established policies and procedures. Specifically, policies and procedures should also guide the activities of the library media collection program and the selection and use of materials in the classroom. Selection policy and considerations for library collections will vary somewhat from the policy for identifying materials to “teach” in the classroom, but many of the same considerations are important.

In general, policies address the ideals and generalities, and the procedure statement explains how those policies should be implemented, i.e. the daily activities that are necessary to meet the ideals and generalities. In most cases the policy and procedure documents are separate publications—the policy statement for general distribution and publication while the procedure statements are internal documents meant to be the working guidelines for the organization or library/classroom. Having a board-approved selection policy (and procedures that support the implementation of policy) may help avert concerns with book censors, copyright infringement, and collection bias.

Libraries should have a clear selection policy, but should also have a de-selection/acquisition policy, a policy on gift acceptance, and a reconsideration policy. The procedure accompanying the reconsideration policy will be extremely important, as those citizens asking for the reconsideration of an item in your library/classroom should have a clear procedure to make that request. That will generally entail having a reconsideration form for citizens to make that formal request. Sample forms are available at: eduscapes.com/seeds/management/censor.html

Public libraries will generally have different policies than school libraries in areas of controversy. Public libraries are more diverse and serve the entire community. Thus they have more diverse collections and defend them in the words of one public librarian: “We have something that will offend everyone.” Public libraries are freer to do this because they are free of the burden of in loco parentis. Teachers, school librarians, and public librarians should engage in a discussion of controversial materials, their defense or reconsideration, and what constitutes ways to protect young people while encouraging them to learn how to live and work in a free society.

Of increasing discussion is the prevention of access to Web 2.0 tools based on the fear that young people will use these tools as gateways to dangerous materials. Some have said that this constitutes a new frontier in intellectual freedom.

ALA, Intellectual Freedom, and Banned Book Week

The American Library Association (ALA) and its members are fierce defenders of the right of citizens to choose their own reading material. Their site provides many resources for those librarians or educators facing challenges to materials that they have deemed as appropriate to their clientele. Visit their site at www.ala.org

The ALA has an Office of Intellectual Freedom that is charged with implementing the goals embodied in the organization's Library Bill of Rights online at www.ala.org/oif.html. Each year the ALA sponsors Banned Book Week to highlight the rights of readers. Resources and suggestions for celebrating the freedom to read are included on the Banned Books Week pages at:

http://www.ala.org/ala/issuesadvocacy/banned/bannedbooksweek/ideasandresources/activity_ideas/index.cfm

Every school and every library should have an established procedure for responding to requests for the reconsideration of materials selected for the library or classroom use. Here are some sites that have valuable information regarding this issue.

- Pikes Peak Library District's Challenged Materials Policy:
<http://www.ppld.org/challenged-materials-policy>
- Annette Lamb and Larry Johnson's website at:
eduscapes.com/seeds/management/censor.html
- The Right to Read—an ERIC Document at: www.ericdigests.org/pre-9215/library.htm

A Few Common Sense Suggestions for Controversial Materials

1. Get parent permission for reading or viewing materials that might be termed controversial.
2. Provide alternatives for teens that are not allowed to read, view, or listen to certain materials.
3. Erase circulation records immediately when materials are returned to library collections.
4. Alert teens that search histories of the Internet are easily recovered by snoopers of any stripe.
5. Teach teens to deal with uncomfortable situations in cyberspace, including behavior in chat rooms, giving out personal information, getting involved in scams, and avoiding predators.
6. All teens will encounter messages with which they are uncomfortable. Teach them to click out or notify adults of the problems they encounter.

Top 10 Challenged Authors

2010

1. Ellen Hopkins
2. Peter Parnell and Justin Richardson
3. Sonya Sones
4. Judy Blume
5. Ann Brasheres
6. Suzanne Collins
7. Aldous Huxley
8. Sherman Alexie
9. Laurie Halse Anderson
10. Natasha Friend

2009

1. Lauren Myracle
2. Alex Sanchez
3. P.C. Cast
4. Robert Cormier
5. Peter Parnell and Justin Richardson
6. Stephen Chbosky
7. Chris Crutcher
8. Ellen Hopkins
9. Richelle Mead
10. John Steinbeck

2008:

1. Peter Parnell and Justin Richardson
2. Phillip Pullman
3. Lauren Myracle
4. Jim Pipe
5. Alvin Schwartz
6. Chris Crutcher
7. Phyllis Reynolds Naylor
8. Rudolfo Anaya
9. Stephen Chbosky
10. Cecily von Ziegesar

From ALA's site at www.ala.org/ala/issuesadvocacy/banned/frequentlychallenged/challengedauthors/index.cfm (check for updates)

Spotlight: Chris Crutcher A Censored Author

For a perspective of censorship from an author's viewpoint, don't miss Chris Crutcher's comments on his site (www.chriscrutcher.com). Crutcher is an oft-censored author and says, "While I agree that 'selection' is a wonderfully convenient term for 'censorship' it doesn't change the intent."

Top 10 Most Frequently Challenged Books of 2010*

1. And Tango Makes Three, by Peter Parnell and Justin Richardson
Reasons: homosexuality, religious viewpoint, and unsuited to age group
2. The Absolutely True Diary of a Part-Time Indian, by Sherman Alexie
Reasons: offensive language, racism, sex education, sexually explicit, unsuited to age group, and violence
3. Brave New World, by Aldous Huxley
Reasons: insensitivity, offensive language, racism, and sexually explicit
4. Crank, by Ellen Hopkins
Reasons: drugs, offensive language, and sexually explicit
5. The Hunger Games, by Suzanne Collins
Reasons: sexually explicit, unsuited to age group, and violence
6. Lush, by Natasha Friend
Reasons: drugs, offensive language, sexually explicit, and unsuited to age group
7. What My Mother Doesn't Know, by Sonya Sones
Reasons: sexism, sexually explicit, and unsuited to age group
8. Nickel and Dimed, by Barbara Ehrenreich
Reasons: drugs, inaccurate, offensive language, political viewpoint, and religious viewpoint
9. Revolutionary Voices, edited by Amy Sonnie
Reasons: homosexuality and sexually explicit
10. Twilight, by Stephenie Meyer
Reasons: religious viewpoint and violence

*Listed on ALA's website at: www.ala.org/ala/issuesadvocacy/banned/frequentlychallenged/21stcenturychallenged/2010/index.cfm

Have You Read This Book?: Booktalking to the Teenager

Have you seen a preview at a movie and said to yourself “I can’t wait to see that”? Or heard a song on the radio that caused you to purchase an album? Or read a blurb on the back of a book and bought it? That is the power of booktalking. Booktalking is marketing books to teens, usually a captive audience. Despite recent changes in publishers’ marketing strategies for young adult literature, there is still fabulous, interesting, quality, and entertaining titles being published for teens that need word of mouth for teens to find and know about. In fact, word of mouth is the best marketing tool available for teens. You can provide word of mouth not just by selecting and displaying titles, but also by booktalking those titles to teens. But what is a booktalk? A booktalk is an advertisement for a book. A good talk gives a sense of characters, plot, setting, and the tone of a book. As a formalized version of reader’s advisory, it is a performance. Booktalks are short presentations (no longer than five minutes) to an audience about books designed to encourage teens to read. Booktalks are the product of the presenter, not only a preview of a book, but also an introduction of the presenter and the library. Keep in mind that booktalking is not a review or literary criticism. It is not a read-aloud. It is not a summary of the book.

For Librarians

Booktalking has multiple benefits. For youth service workers in a public library setting, booktalking may be the ticket that gives the public librarians access to school classrooms where they can build relationships with their clientele. For school librarians, booktalking provides access to non-users as well as to independent users. Booktalking to teens puts a friendly face on the library. It makes the librarian more approachable and familiar. It allows the librarian to build relationships with teens and with the teachers (or in-charge adult). Beyond that, booktalking introduces the library collection to teens. You have spent money on a collection to serve teens, now let them know what is in that collection. Finally, booktalking allows you to model the pleasure of reading. While it might not be the best idea to gush over a title (teens don’t respond to over the top enthusiasm) it is an opportunity for teens to see reading for pleasure in action. They have a physical manifestation of a reader as a model. So beyond promoting individual titles, you are promoting the act of reading.

So now you are convinced that booktalking is a good idea, and you can convince others (teachers, supervisors) that it is a good idea. Often booktalks are the outgrowth of a teacher’s request. However, don’t be shy and offer your services. If a teacher or adult (think after-school programs such as Boys’ and Girls’ Clubs) requests a presentation, spend time with the teacher or adult planning your performance, especially the first time. Know if the students like to read or if they are struggling readers. What is the language background of the students? Are there ESL students? What books have the students read and enjoyed? How much time will be allotted and how many students will you see? What are the school’s community’s values regarding sex, violence, and bad language? Ultimately the teacher will be responsible for the content of your presentation, but it is important the readers are comfortable with the content. Often teachers will have an expectation regarding the types of material you booktalk. If they don’t, you might want a unifying element. Booktalks can be based on a theme, can fit a curricular need, can highlight a genre, or can be general and more all encompassing. Regardless, bring a variety of material: include non-fiction, fiction, and poetry if possible. You will face an audience with a wide variety of interests and needs. And, don’t forget to refer kids to ebooks accessible on various personal devices.

Teachers as Booktalkers

Librarians are not the only booktalking species on the planet. Any teacher who loves books can and should advertise their favorites to their students. Sometimes this advertisement takes the form of reading aloud either whole books or interesting chapters. At other times, the teacher can do formal booktalks as described below. Still at other times, the teacher might just suggest and hold up a book in class that the teacher enjoyed reading. Such practices let your class know that you are a model reader and expect them to be the same. Your advertisements need not carry with them the stigma of an assignment—rather model reading as enjoyment and reading for reading’s sake.

How to Booktalk

There are different ways to booktalk, and finding what works for you is key. Do not be afraid to make mistakes; that is how you learn. There are different schools of thought regarding written versus ad-libbed booktalks. If you prepare by writing your talk you have a fallback if you lose your place. On the other hand, ad-libbed booktalks may seem more natural. Either way, practice is important. When preparing your presentation, there are some key things to keep in mind. Keep your booktalk short and sweet. The opening is important—it is how you grab the attention of a classroom or group of teens. Look for a hook: a quote, a question, an exciting piece of action. The body of the talk should be a simple narrative that helps set the tone. It is acceptable to read from the book, but not too excessively. It should be enough to give the teens the idea of authorial voice. (Hint: Unless you are talking to AP students, and even then, don’t use the term “authorial voice” with teens.) Just as you start your booktalk with a hook, you should end with something memorable, perhaps the title.

Whatever you do: Don’t give away the ending!

You want teens to read the book; if you tell them the ending they don’t have to read it.

In considering the style of booktalk you wish to present, consider the strength of the title. Is it plot? Characters? Tone? A talk that focuses on the plot may be the easiest to prepare for, but it is important to remember to keep the talk short and sweet. When writing a booktalk that centers on the plot, do not give too much away: introduce the basics and the conflict but do not indicate any resolution. Or perhaps you wish to focus on the characters. This is particularly effective if you are comfortable performing; you can take on the first person voice of a character. Be careful to make it clear how you are presenting or you risk confusing your audience. You can write a talk that sets a mood, the most common method for scary or humorous titles. This is the style of performance that lends itself well to reading sections of the book. Perhaps there is one section that stands out that you want to share. This technique works well with informational titles and poetry collections.

Rules of Booktalking

- ✓ Read the book.
- ✓ Don’t give away the ending
- ✓ Like the book
- ✓ Be Yourself!!
- ✓ Be sure to identify title and author
- ✓ Don’t review the book, oversell, gush etc.
- ✓ Practice, practice, practice
- ✓ Know your audience
- ✓ Bring variety
- ✓ Keep records: what you used, what worked, etc.
- ✓ Write it down the first time
- ✓ Engage your audience
- ✓ Prepare a “hook”
- ✓ Learn from mistakes, celebrate success

Perhaps this goes without saying but it is so important:
Like teens!

Once you decide on the titles and content of your presentation, decide the type of performance you are comfortable with. Some booktalkers use props or costumes. While props and costumes add to the entertainment of the presentation, be careful that they are not distracting from the book and be sure you are comfortable using them. Some booktalkers use technology to enhance their presentation, using overheads of the book jackets or Power Point presentations. Once again, the technology should add value to the performance, not be distracting. And be prepared for the technology to fail or not be available. Consider different forms of media to enhance your talk. Is there music, movies or magazines you can bring in to support the performance and help make connections to the books? And don't forget—giveaways can always help with audience engagement.

On the day of your booktalk, there are some things to keep in mind. Bring multiple copies of titles you are booktalking, if at all possible. Arrange for the books to be checked out immediately, so if they are requested, you are prepared. Bring lists of the titles for the teens in case they want something later or cannot get the title they want (someone else may get to it first). Bring water. And finally, give yourself a break and remember it may not be perfect. Have a sense of humor. Be yourself. This should be fun!

After you present, take notes. Keep good records of what titles you talked about. This will keep you from using the same titles over and over. Make notes about what worked and what didn't. While it is fresh in your mind, revise your booktalk to be more successful. Ask for feedback from others who may have different insight and can help you evaluate your presentation. Notice which titles students seem to be enjoying or sharing with one another. Librarians and teachers can work well as a collaborative unit. Keep in touch with one another, ask for feedback, and share the booktalking responsibilities.

Can teachers booktalk from their classrooms or from the library to their students? Of course! Use the ideas above and develop techniques on your own to help each child become an avid and capable reader.

Think Web 2.0

How about sharing your booktalks on Web 2.0 media so that teens can tune in anytime they want to listen? And, if you can booktalk, then why can't teens learn to share the books they like in the same manner on YouTube, podcasts, school or public websites, Flickr, Voki, and a host of other video and audio sharing systems. It is a whole new world, particularly with the current trend on digital storytelling for children, teens, and adults.

And, remember that publishers are joining the booktalking world, so just look up your favorite title on their websites or on YouTube.

Further Resources for Booktalking

- Bodart, Joni Richards. Booktalking the Award Winners series. H. W. Wilson
- Frazel, Michael. Digital Storytelling for Educators. ISTE, 2010.
- Jarrell, Jill S. Cooler Than Fiction: a Planning Guide for Teen Nonfiction Booktalks. MacFarland, 2010.
- Mahood, Kristine. Booktalking with Teens. Libraries Unlimited, 2010
- Miller, Handler. Digital Storytelling. 2nd ed. Focal Press, 2008.
- "The Power of Booktalking" DVD. Neal Schuman, 2009.
- Schall, Lucy. Value-Packed Book Talks. Libraries Unlimited, 2011.
- York, Sherry. Booktalking Authentic Multicultural Literature. Linworth, 2009.
- Young Adult Library Services Association. Professional Development Center: Booktalking: www.ala.org/ala/mgrps/divs/yalsa/profdev/booktalking.cfm

Programming for Young Adults

Mark Twain once said, “The person who does not read good books has no advantage over the person who cannot read them.” If we wish to encourage young adults to join our literacy community, we must build a component for sharing the joy of reading with readers. The following ideas are suggestions that have been successful in middle and high schools. Take the ideas that you think might work in your classroom or library or school and begin to surround the young adults in your school with a literacy environment.

1. Create a teen advisory board or “volunteer” group to help establish programs and activities that will include their peers in library or classroom literacy activities. Display the photograph of the advisory board and hold regular meetings with an agenda (all students invited to attend) to set a mission statement, establish a year-long theme or program, and implement the program.
2. Publish a newsletter/blog promoting good books to read.
3. Have teens write book reviews/do booktalks of new books and publish them on your own library blog/newsletter, on Amazon.com or any other Web 2.0 location.
4. Offer promotional giveaways or “weekly specials,” just like the department stores. “This Week’s Special—Check out a book and receive a ‘Library Lollipop.’”
5. Create a display of books written by teens and include author bios.
6. Create a display of poems and stories written by local teens. Provide information about procedures and places where any teen might get their work published.
7. Identify a monthly reading/literacy theme and create a space where young readers are encouraged to submit artwork that supports the theme. Display the artwork in the library as part of the monthly theme.
8. Establish a book or author award from your school. Develop criteria for nominations, procedure for voting for the nominated books, award and honor specifications, and other details. Conduct the award discussions, send the author or publisher notice, and present the award. Send notices to local newspapers and national periodicals.
9. Distribute coupons for amnesty from fines owed.
10. Set up and promote a paperback book exchange.
11. Schedule a read-in during a specific period during the week. For example, hold a “Brown Bag Read-In” over the lunch period. Encourage students to bring their “brown bag” lunches to the library during their lunch period and read. Or provide passes to those students who want to eat lunch in the cafeteria but to then come to the library to read during the rest of the period.
12. Have listening lunches where teens bring their lunch to the library and listen to performances by their peers: poetry readings, drama, music, etc.
13. Create “Read With Me” posters for distribution to elementary schools showing high school sports players, cheerleaders, drama members, or just plain students reading a favorite book from their childhood.
14. Have writing classes write a children’s book for a specific child in a partner elementary school. Deliver and read the book during a specific day.
15. Individual students or groups of students such as the basketball team might visit elementary schools to read with students.
16. Make a booktalk video tape of great teen reads (or create a Power Point presentation). Share the presentation in classrooms throughout the high school; supply a copy to the hospitals for their teen wards. (Perhaps sponsor a coin drive to buy paperback copies of the books that go with the video tape.)

17. Engage in a drive to get all high school students to obtain a public library card.
18. Designate one afternoon a month to be a café and reading venue. Teens are invited to read their own work or a favorite poem, chapter, and so forth by recognized writers. Serve beverages, provide theater-style seating for the audience, and provide a microphone for the presenter.
19. Schedule “Friday Forums” —a time for special events in the library: art shows, reader’s theater, Q&A sessions with the administration, politicians, or other people of interest, featured speakers and so forth.
20. Booktalk books regularly in the classroom, in the library, during lunchtimes in the cafeteria, anywhere there are potential readers.
21. Form a special interest storytelling club. Schedule performances for the storytellers in classrooms, elementary schools, civic organizations and clubs, or any special event.
22. Plan movie-book activities. Read the book; see the movie; talk. Is there anything more fun and engaging for teens? Everyone will have an opinion and will have a great time.
23. Do a read-around. Cut a copy of a fairly short and action-packed book up into separate chapters. Depending on how the book is printed, this may take two books to get complete copies of each chapter. Pass out the chapters randomly and give teens some time to read their chapters silently. You might want to give each reader a character list with brief descriptions so they can understand the chapter. When everyone has read their own chapter, have a tell-around. Ask each person to tell their chapter in about one minute. As later chapter readers hear previous tellers, they can figure out how their chapter fits into the whole. Picking the right kind of book and a few trials at this will teach the adult how to structure this activity so that it works well.

Publishing Sources for Young Writers

- About Teens: Humor, Fun, Fiction and More: www.aboutteens.org
- The Concord Review: www.tcr.org
- Crunch: An Online: nces.ed.gov/nceskids/
- Cyberteent Online Magazines: www.cyberteent.com
- KidPub Children’s Publishing: www.kidpub.org
- Kids Authors: www.kidauthors.com (poems; in two age categories: 6–12; 13–18)
- Kids Bookshelf: www.kidsbookshelf.com (for writers 17 years of age and under)
- Merlyn’s Pen — Fiction, Essays and Poems by Americas Teens: www.merlynspen.org
- Midlink Magazine: longwood.cs.ucf.edu/~MidLink/
- Skipping Stones: www.skippingstones.org
- Stone Soup Magazine: www.stonesoup.com
- Teen Ink: teenink.com
- The Writing Conference, Inc.: The Writers’ Slate: www.writingconference.com

Keeping Up—Getting New Ideas for Teen Programming

One of the greatest resources for ideas for your library or classroom is your professional peers. Whether you are in the classroom or library, identify a group of like-minded peers and form an informal professional support group. Plan a regular time to get together to share ideas and brainstorm solutions to situations that present themselves. Ideas from professional colleagues can also come from professional journals and listservs that promote interaction among professionals.

Professional Journals

- School Library Journal: www.schoollibraryjournal.com
- Teacher Librarian: www.teacherlibrarian.com/
- Library Media Connection: www.linworth.com/lmc/
- School Library Activities Monthly: www.schoollibrarymedia.com

Professional Organizations

- International Reading Association: www.reading.org
- National Council of Teachers of English: www.ncte.org
- American Library Association: www.ala.org

Listservs

If you wish to search for a listserv (professional online community) go to the “Official catalog of Listserv® lists” at www.lsoft.com/catalist.html. This list is searchable and provides information about joining the specific lists selected.

Book Blogs—Sharing Books Online

Promote your library and reading with a library or classroom book blog—a quick and easy-to-use website where you can quickly post thoughts, interact with people, and more. Anyone can create a free blog courtesy of Blogger Buzz at www.blogger.com. See an example at www.mcbookwords.blogspot.com

Index

- Adult books, 123–25
Adventure books, 85–87
Alternative music, 48–49
Anderson, Laurie Halse, 13
Anime, 28–29
Art, 110–11
Audio books, 78–79
Awards, 10–13
- Beloved*, 115
Biography, 90–92
Booktalking, 138–40
Boys in teen literature, 68–69
Brat Pack, 39
- Cabot, Meg, 71
Canon, 112–15
Celebrities, 52–53
Censorship, 135–37
Children’s authors, 5
Children’s literature, 4–5
Christian Romance, 74–75
Classics, 130
Collection development, 17–19
College-bound reading, 116–17
Comic books, 26–27
Coming-of-age, 58–60
Crutcher, Chris, 63, 137
Cult movies, 30–31
Cultural literacy, 118–19
Cyrus, Miley, 53
- Dale, Jim, 79
Dance, 106–7
Disabilities, 78–79
Downloading music, 42–43
Drama, 104–5
- Emerging canon, 114–15
Eminem, 47
- Fantasy, 97–98
Fleming, Candace, 91
Formats of literature, 78–79
- Free Spirit Press, 81
- Girls in teen literature, 66–67
GLBTQ literature, 76–77
Glee, 45
Graphic novels, 24–25
- Hinton, S.E., 9
Hip-hop music, 46–47
Historical fiction, 88–89
History, 88–89
Hollywood, 102–3
Horror books, 99–101
Horror movies, 36–37
- Intellectual freedom, 135–37
Internet, 34–35
iPod, 43
Issues in teen literature, 61–63
- Janeczko, Paul, 122
Jones, Bill T., 107
- King, Stephen, 37
- Literature in the classroom, 129–30
Local history photography, 89
Louvre museum, 111
- Ma, Yo Yo, 109
Madonna, 41
Magazines, 50–51
Malian’s Song, 128
Manga, 24–25
Mean Girls, 73
Media and teens, 54–55
Miller, Arthur, 105
Miller, Frank, 31
Morrison, Toni, 115
Movie book tie-ins, 72–73
Movies, 36–37, 38–39, 102–103
Multicultural literature, 132–34
Music, 40–49, 108–9
Music, classical, 108–9

Mystery books, 99–101
 Nature books, 85–87
 Nirvana, 49
 Oscars, 103
 Paolini, Christopher, 98
 Peters, Julie Ann, 77
 Picture books, 126–28
 Poetry, 120–22
 Pop music, 40–41
 Programming, 141–43
 Psychology, teen, 14–16
 Public and school library cooperation, 20–22
 Quick Picks, 64–65
 Rap music, 46–47
 Reading promotion, 56–57
 Realistic fiction, 58–60, 61–63
 Ritter, John H., 84
 Romance, 74–75
 School and public library cooperation,
 20–22
 Science, 93–94
 Science fiction, 95–96
 Selection criteria, 17–19
 Self-help books, 80–81
 Series books, 70–71
 Sleator, William, 96
 Social networking, 34–35
 Spider-man, 27
 Sports, 82–84
 State awards, 12, 57
 Survey research, 3
 Technology, 93–94
 Teen movies, 38–39
 Teen psychology, 14–16
 Teens and media, 54–55
 Television, 44–45
 Theater, 104–5
 Thin books, 64–65
 Video games, 32–33
 Web 2.0, 35
 Werlin, Nancy, 101
 Western canon, 112–13
 Westerns, 85–87
 World of WarCraft, 33
 YA literature–history, 6–9
 YA novels, 7, 8
 Yang, Gene Luen, 25

About the Authors

Mary Ann Harlan is a graduate of the School of Library and Information Science at San José State University. She is a high school librarian in Eureka, California. As an active member of YALSA, she recently served on the Quick Picks for Reluctant Young Adult Readers committee. She is now beginning her doctoral program at Queensland University of technology (Australia) through San José State University.

David V. Loertscher began his professional career as a high school librarian in Idaho Falls, Idaho. After his Ph.D. at Indiana University he began teaching, along with other courses, Materials for Young Adults, which he has been teaching for the past 30+ years. Throughout those years he stayed connected to teenagers in Scouting and other youth activities. The bulk of his publishing has centered on the School Library Media Program, and this book is his first entry into a topic that he has loved for many years. He is currently a Professor of Library and Information Science at San José State University in California.

Sharron L. McElmeel is a veteran classroom teacher and library media specialist. She is a graduate of the University of Iowa's School of Library Science and spent decades in the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) public schools. She has built a national reputation as a resource for those interested in children's and young adult literature. She has written more than two dozen books in the area of children's and young adult literature and writes and edits for a number of educational publications. She has been named as Iowa Reading Teacher of the Year by the Iowa Reading Association, honored with the organization's Celebrate Literacy Award, nominated as Iowa's Teacher of the Year, and, in 2004, she was named one of the Top Ten Online Educators of the Year. She is an often-requested speaker at conferences and professional development workshops. Currently, in addition to her writing, she is director of McBookwords, a literacy organization and teaches courses in children's and young adult literature at the University of Wisconsin – Stout.